Energy crisis

Fuel, power demand outstripping nation's supply

The energy crisis: conspiracy or coincidence?

Is the nation really having an "energy crisis"? It's a conspiracy by the oil companies, right?

The answer to the first question is short but not so sweet. The crisis is real and it's going to get a lot worse.

First in a series.

The second question still hasn't been answered for many Americans, who today are suffering from skepticism — and perhaps a bit of paranoia — bred in the suites of the Watergate.

And like the Watergate, the energy crisis has become the subject of lengthy and complex hearings at several levels of government and industry, at dinner tables and gas pumps.

Investigators probably will conclude what energy analysts have been saying for years — conspiracy or no, there were a number of events, circumstances and actions that triggered a national crisis.

Yes, solutions have been found. The public isn't going to like them. In fact, the public will reject them — at first.

Just what is the energy crisis? The simple answer is that there's just not enough energy to go around anymore.

Americans in general, and we Southern Californians in particular, have been demanding more and more energy to heat us, cool us, bathe us, feed us and entertain us. And at the same time, we're leading the nation in gasoline consumption — 10 BILLION gallons sold last year in California, a whopping 55 per cent increase from 1962.

We want energy, but we have not allowed supply to keep up with demand. That's the energy crisis.

Mention energy crisis, and consumers, producers and politicians immediately demand new sources at cheaper prices. While the nation does have an undeniable energy gap to fill, the single-minded concern with mere supply ignores some hard questions about demand:

— Will consumption keep soaring in the face of accelerating energy prices?

ANALYSIS

— Does the United States have to double its fuel consumption every 16 years, its demand for electricity every 10?

— Is any source of energy really safe?

— Can we afford this unchecked growth environmentally?

Energy specialists say no.

"The energy crisis is not just a matter of supply," says Lester Lees, head of the Environmental Quality Lab at Cal Tech. "We must slow down demand growth as well."

AND EVEN IF the nation were not now faced with an immediate fuel shortage, the case for slower energy growth still would be compelling. There is simply no way at present to produce energy without degrading the environment — from air and water pollution to nuclear hazards to the more visually painful scars left by the strip miners.

And the Rand Corp. recently announced that if electricity demand continues at present growth rates, California will need 130 new 1,200-megawatt nuclear power plants by the year 2000 — one every eight miles of coastline.

But for the moment, the more visible energy crunch is the shortage of gasoline.

AS WAS discovered over the Memorial Day weekend, vacationers may find gas supplies few and far between this summer as they travel through the back country.

I,P-T Secret Witness now one year old

Lawmen praise plan; 18 suspects nabbed by service

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program celebrates its first anniversary Monday with a dramatic record of 18 criminal suspects arrested through the crime-fighting program since its inception on June 11, 1972.

Southland law enforcement officials had highest praise for the undertaking, which has paid out or committed on conviction reward money totaling $16,000 out of the guaranteed fund of $100,000 set up by the I,P-T when Secret Witness was established.

"SECRET WITNESS has proved itself, beyond all expectations, as a highly effective weapon against crime and as a service to the community," said Long Beach Police Chief William J. Mooney. "The Long Beach police department extends its thanks, and its congratulations."

A spokesman for the Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess said the sheriff's department is "very happy with this program and its outstanding success. We highly approve any such program devoted to our mutual concern, the control of crime."

Other Los Angeles and Orange County agencies involved in cases cleared through Secret Witness were equally enthusiastic, lauding the program as "an outstanding success" and "a real aid to law enforcement."

ON APRIL 26, the Long Beach Police Officers' Association paid tribute to the I,P-T's Secret Witness service during a dinner held by the Belmont Shore Lions Club to honor the police of Los Angeles and Orange Counties. Chief Mooney presented the newspaper a plaque bearing an engraving that read in part: "Presented ... in appreciation for outstanding support of law enforcement."

The arrests resulting from Secret Witness tips include those of four murder suspects, four robbery suspects, and 10 fugitives from justice. Rewards offered for information leading to the apprehension of fugitives are paid on arrest, but in other cases are contingent on conviction.

One $500 reward for the capture of a fugitive remains unclaimed. A Secret Witness informant using the code number 555-HHH is eligible for the reward authorized Feb. 13, and is urged to call Secret Witness at 436-2526 and identify himself by his code name for instructions on how to claim the reward.

The Independent, Press-Telegram publishes each Thursday and Sunday a summary listing specific cases in which a fixed amount of rewards are offered, but will pay rewards in varying amounts for arrest and conviction in any case involving a major crime — whether listed in the summaries or not.

From time to time, older cases in which there has been a lack of activity are dropped from the summaries, but the original rewards offered in these cases still will be paid, unless specific notice is given

It's all smiles in Paris!

An obvious atmosphere of good humor pervades the Paris truce talks as Hanoi's Le Duc Tho reaches out to grasp the hand of an American negotiator. Behind Tho, also smiling, is America's Henry Kissinger. At far left is Nguyen Co Thach, deputy foreign minister of North Vietnam. Backs to camera are Dep. Asst. Secretary of State William Sullivan and, far right, Graham Martin. —UPI

New accord left hanging

Kissinger halts Paris talks

PARIS (UPI)—Henry Kissinger broke off his talks with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho Saturday and flew back to Washington for the weekend. He said he would return to Paris Tuesday to work out problems in wording a new formula to buttress the Vietnam peace agreement.

(In Saigon, informed government sources said the signing of an agreement was blocked at the last minute by President Nguyen Van Thieu. According to the sources, Thieu balked at a provision that would have required government forces to maintain a 30-man garrison, but the Viet Cong to have only a six-man garrison, to claim control of a village or hamlet.)

Kissinger's departure came as a surprise since U.S. officials Friday had confidently predicted that Saturday's meeting would be the last and that a new agreement would be forthcoming.

Asked about the predictions, Kissinger said: "American officials have sometimes been mistaken in their estimates of the length of time required to bring Vietnamese parties to a common realization of the significance of certain words."

Then, at a brief meeting with newsmen at Orly Airport, Kissinger quipped: "This is getting to be like a long-running play."

But Kissinger said his chief assistant, Ambassador William Sullivan, would meet in a "Technical session" with Le Duc Tho's assistant, Nguyen Co Thach, on Monday at 4 p.m.

During the protracted peace negotiations before the Jan. 28 peace agreement was signed, "technical session" was the euphemism for meetings to write the precise language of the agreement.

The official explanation Kissinger gave for his departure was the impending visit to Washington of Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brenhnew. "I am returning to Washington because the preparations for the visit of General Secretary Brezhnev require my presence," Kissinger said.

New inflation curbs by Nixon said imminent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's top economic advisers apparently came up with a new anti-inflation proposal Saturday, sources said. There were indications it might include a get-tough policy toward big business.

Sources close to the Cost of Living Council expect there will be more vigorous enforcement of existing controls, involving penalties instead of handslaps where violations occur. It was understood this would be coupled with selective new controls in some areas, probably including the petroleum industry.

Growing economic storm descends on Watergate-battered President. Page A-17.

These sources stop short of forecasting a new price freeze, although they point out this definitely has been one of the options under consideration by Nixon.

After a meeting by the President's top economists, a source said no additional meetings were scheduled, indicating the program was complete.

In Key Biscayne, Fla., where Nixon is staying, a press spokesman said "there was no sense of crisis' in the advisers' meeting. "They are reviewing the problems in a measured way."

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren declined to predict whether steps would be taken in the next few days.

He said one of the proposals the advisers probably were discussing was the advisability of a special tax on gasoline as a matter of economy and conserving fuel.

The President is known to have rejected one proposed tightening of the Phase 3 anti-inflation program that was recommended by his advisers, including Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz.

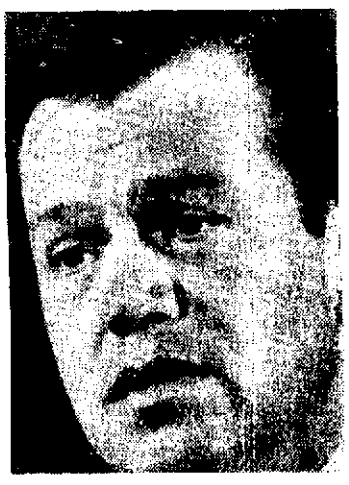

Shultz was reported to be disappointed. Some sources interpreted that as meaning the President favored more drastic action than his key advisers could support.

Besides Shultz at the economic advisers' meeting was Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns, Director Roy Ash of the Office of Management and Budget and Chairman Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers.

They were joined by presidential consultant and former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, Director John T. Dunlop of the Cost of Living Council and William E. Simon, deputy secretary of the treasury and chairman of the Oil Policy Committee.

Also at the meeting were trade adviser Peter Flanigan, James

Millionaire Patrick dies in air crash

LAKEPORT, (AP) — Cosmetics millionaire William Penn Patrick, head of the nationally known Holiday Magic firm, was killed Saturday when the light plane he piloted crashed at his High Valley Ranch, 20 miles northeast of here, authorities reported.

Patrick, 43, of San Rafael, was killed instantly along with passenger Christian George Hagert, 30, of Helsinki Finland, the Lake County Sheriff's office said. Hagert was the head of Holiday Magic's Finland operations.

A WITNESS said the plane took a steep dive just before approaching the ranch's airstrip, 80 miles north of San Francisco. It crashed into the side of a hill, scattering wreckage over a 100-yard radius.

An antique F86 jet fighter plane belonging to Patrick's Spectrum Air Inc., of Novato, crashed into a Sacramento ice cream parlor last Sept. 24, killing 22 persons and injuring 26.

The millionaire and his companies have since been named in numerous claims and suits demanding a total of several million dollars in damages.

A crusading political conservative, Patrick spent $400,000 in a 1966 California gubernatorial primary running against Republican Ronald Reagan. He polled less than 3 per cent of the vote.

THE TYCOON once called for the hanging for treason of former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Earl Warren and the tar and feathering of former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara.

Born and raised in Roper, N.C. Patrick graduated from Sacramento State College and founded Holiday Magic in 1964.

The cosmetics firm has been accused by the state and others with being a chain scheme, inspiring investors with dreams of riches and extracting considerable fees from them for improvement courses and distribution rights.

Haldeman 'ordered files destroyed'

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON — John W. Dean III has said that he was told by an aide to H. R. Haldeman that Haldeman ordered pertinent documents destroyed right after the Watergate burglary, according to the report of a senator who interviewed Dean last month.

Colson defends Nixon on Watergate, blames President's top aides. Page A-16.

The documents were said to indicate that Haldeman knew of "actual data" obtained from the wiretap of the Democratic National Committee's headquarters.

The senator, Lowell P. Weicker Jr., questioned Dean at length on May 3, three days after Dean was dismissed as White House counsel.

Weicker, a Connecticut Republican who is a member of the Senate Watergate Committee, has acknowledged that he interviewed Dean but has repeatedly refused to make public what was said in the interview.

He did, however, file a three-page report of the interview with the committee. The report was made available to the New York Times, without Weicker's knowledge, by a person with access to some committee records.

In the interview, Dean was reported to have indicated to Weicker that John N. Mitchell was dismissed as President Nixon's campaign director last summer. Mitchell repeatedly has maintained that he resigned voluntarily.

Brandt tests luck in Sea of Galilee

Combined News Services

Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany took time out from business Saturday to go fishing on Israel's Sea of Galilee. Near the spot where the Bible says Christ multiplied two fish into hundreds, Brandt caught just one small carp, seven inches long.

Bikini-clad kibbutz girls waved, and armed troops patrolled the shore as Brandt clambered among the nets and winches of a rusty gray trawler from Kibbutz Ginnosar.

The third day of the chancellor's unprecedented visit was relaxed and casual. It reflected a spirit of conciliation between West Germany and the Jewish state, where thousands of refugees from Nazism have welcomed Brandt.

His companion aboard the 30-foot trawler was Hannah Wellich, an Israeli fisherman who fled the Nazis from Vienna in the 1930's.

WILLY BRANDT

Prolific

John Creasey, one of the world's most prolific writers of mystery and crime thriller novels, died Saturday at his Wiltshire, England, home. He was 64.

Creasey three weeks ago married Diana Farrell, his nurse since the beginning of the year, after he suffered a heart attack last October.

In 40 years as an author, Creasey collected 734 rejection slips before he ever got a word into print. Since then he has had published 560 books — almost all crime thrillers, mystery stories and adventure novels. He claimed to have written more books than any other living author. He was best known for his creations of the Toff, the Baron and super-sleuth inspector Gideon of Scotland Yard, the heroes of most of his books.

Kennedy story

Mrs. Rose Kennedy, the 83-year-old mother of the late President John F. Kennedy, will appear in an Irish television documentary of her life, it was announced Saturday in Dublin.

A spokesman for Radio Telefis Eureann, the Irish TV network, said she agreed to cooperate with a film crew, but the picture will run shorter than the previously scheduled 60 minutes. Filming is to begin in July.

'Unthinkable'

Former Virginia Lt. Gov. A.E.S. Stephens, who opposed "massive resistance" to desegregation because he feared it would destroy the Virginia's public schools, died early Saturday in Newport News, Va. He was 72.

Stephens' 31 years of public service ended in 1961, when he lost a bid for the Democratic nomination for governor. A resident of Smithfield, he was admitted to a hospital in Newport News May 22.

One of the early opponents of eliminating public schools to avoid integration, Stephens spoke strongly against the theory of massive resistance which swept Virginia after the 1954 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court against segregated schools. He said as early as 1955 that it would be "unthinkable" to consider abolishing public education to thwart integration.

The eldest son of oil tycoon J. Paul Getty was buried on a windswept bluff overlooking the Pacific Ocean in Santa Monica Saturday, three days after the 36-year-old executive died under mysterious circumstances from an overdose of drugs and alcohol.

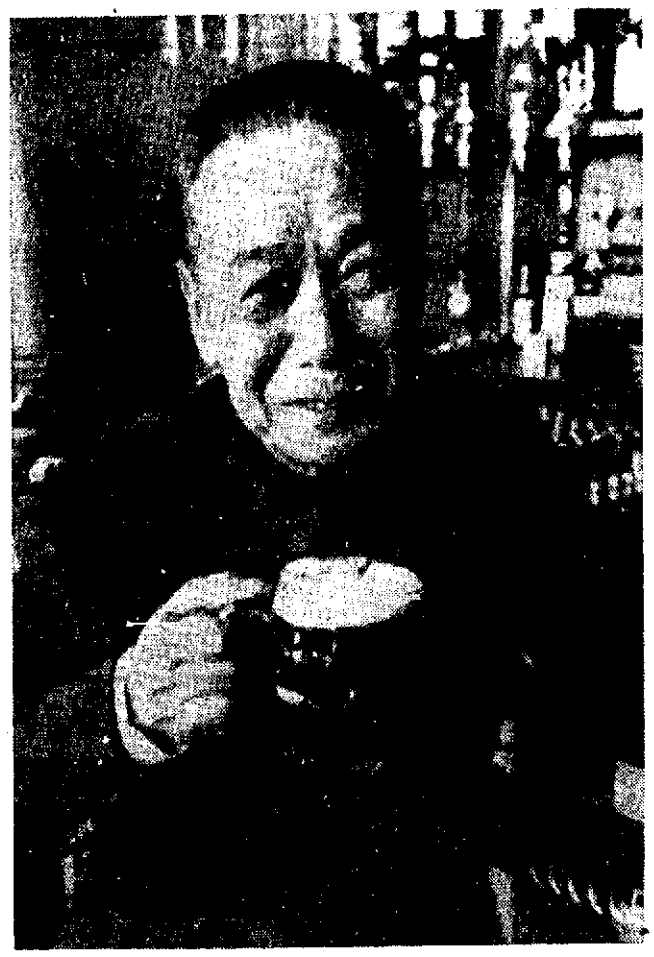

Whether the death of George F. Getty II will be ruled "accidental or a suicide" will be left up to a team of pathologists and psychologists who are conducting what Los Angeles coroner Thomas Noguchi calls a "psychological autopsy."

The 48-year-old executive of the Getty Oil Co. was found in a coma at his hillside home in Newport Beach early Wednesday and he died about 15 hours later. Getty is said to have taken "10 to 15" sleeping capsules before his death.

2 more years

Hells Angels leader Ralph "Sonny" Barger, now in jail in San Francisco on narcotics and weapons convictions, has been given an additional two-year term for possessing guns as a convicted felon.

The new sentence was imposed after Barger, 34, pleaded guilty to the charges of possessing guns in 1969 and 1972. The judge said the sentence was to be served concurrently with others handed down in Oakland after Barger was convicted on charges of possessing narcotics and weapons.

From college official to manual laborer – briefly

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Dr. John R. Coleman, president of Haverford College, has repeatedly complained that the educational process keeps people in lockstep from infancy to Ph.D. — and then some.

At the age of 51 he took his words to heart and broke step, leaving Haverford this past semester on a sabbatical. Determined to leave his customary life far behind and resolved to get a variety of hard work experiences, he began on Feb. 9 as a farmhand in his native Ontario. Up at 4:30 each morning, working 13 hours a day in milkshed and barns, he toughened himself for the succeeding jobs as ditchdigger, dishwasher, quick-service counterman and garbage collector.

"I wanted to get away from the world of words and politics and parties — the things a president does," he explained. "As a college president you begin to take yourself very seriously and think you have power you don't. You forget elementary things about people. I wanted to relearn things I'd forgotten."

HE HAD traveled widely in January, raising funds for Haverford, which is one of the most select liberal arts colleges in the nation, with about 725 students. As he went he gathered classified ads. "I'm a labor economist by training," he noted, "and I think I have an eye for the want ads."

Impressed with opportunities in Atlanta, he landed a job there beginning for $2.75 an hour, with First Utility Corporation, digging ditches for sewers and water lines. Struck by his own ineptness with his hands, he slogged on, meanwhile absorbing a litany of working obscenities from his mates.

Since Coleman happens to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, he quit his ditchdigging job March 2 to preside over the bank's monthly meeting. When he looked at the other members of the board, he could not keep from feeling there was something unreal about them all.

The next day he was in Boston, drawn partly by sentimental reasons, for he had earlier taught economics and labor relations at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in neighboring Cambridge. He took a cheap room, as he had in Atlanta, and began feeding dimes into a pay phone, trying unsuccessfully to land a construction job.

He finally found work in Stuart's Cafeteria in South Boston, as porter-dishwasher. Within an hour the boss put $2 in his hand and discharged him, saying, "You won't do."

"I'D NEVER been fired and I'd never been unemployed. For three days I walked the streets. Though I had a bank account, though my children's tuition was paid, though I had a salary and a job waiting for me back in Haverford, I was demoralized. I had an inkling of how professionals my age feel when they lose their job and their confidence begins to sink."

Frustrated, he turned from the Boston Globe's want ads to his horoscope for the day: "Look for money and luck in the early afternoon."

He was hired that afternoon — March 8 — as a sandwich and salad man at the Union Oyste House.

"I saw people working under conditions of great pressure, when they were great, and in relaxed perid when they were difficult," he said.

When reprimanded for an oversight, he himself was reduced to using an expletive borrowed from his Atlanta ditchdigging friends.

Cooking is a hobby with Coleman, who is divorced and has five children, and he seemed to promising that the manager offered him promotion to assistant chef. But the April meeting at the Reserve Bank was coming up, so he quit and returned to Philadelphia.

ON APRIL 6 he got a job for $2.50 per hour, six days a week, on a garbage truck of American Refuse Inc. in College Park, Md. As he picked up garbage he would call out cherry greetings to the local residents, but few replied. Most pretended he didn't exist.

In the diary he was keeping he noted his thoughts about American class-consciousness, and he also elaborated a sketchy sociology of suburban trash-leaving habits.

After a week of collecting about two tons of garbage a day, he left the job and the experiment, and returned to his checkbook and full-bodied existence in suburban Haverford, outside Philadelphia.

"There must be people who think this is the craziest thing they ever heard of, but I'm the better for it," he said.

Students taught to live by learning about death

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Laurence Wyatt sentenced 60 students to death, took them to a funeral home, then had them write their own obituaries as an assignment in a literature class.

The purpose was to teach them about living, says Wyatt, 36, who teaches a course called "Death and Dying" at Florida Technological University.

HE TOLD students they had one year to live and gave them a weekend to analyze their lives and how they would spend their last days.

Priorities for the most part were disappointingly vague and general, Wyatt says. Students wanted to get a driver's license, or travel or become more tolerant.

"But what it showed them," claims Wyatt, "is that they're wasting their lives. Things that suddenly became important were things they could be doing now."

He says it was a jolt when they wrote their obits and found they had nothing to show for their 20 years.

"Everything was in the future — something they planned to do or be," explained the instructor.

Wyatt said his aim was to make young people face death honestly and openly.

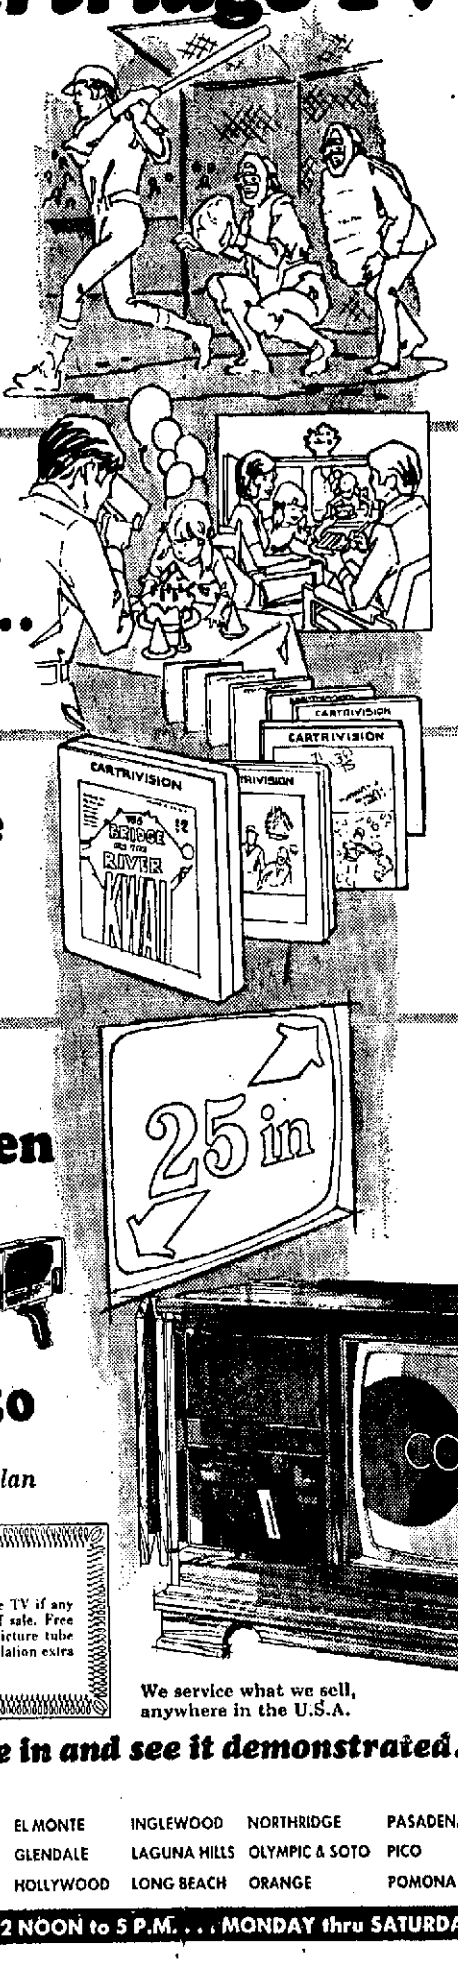

WYATT has been teaching English at the central Florida campus for the past three years, but last quarter was the first time "Death and Dying" was offered.

"Literature is about life and death, so it was simple to weave the course around novels like "The Loved One,' by Evelyn Waugh," said Wyatt.

Bad as smog, dirty water, litter

Noise joins the 'yucky' list

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

Noise is being described as one of the waste products of the '70s and is as unwanted and unnecessary as smog, polluted water and litter.

"Sounds can harm, bother and affect people badly," Dr. Roy G. Klumpp, head of the Naval Undersea Center's auditory and communications division, says.

Dr. Klumpp and Robert Gales of the San Diego facility are above water in a current study to establish acceptable steady state and impact noise levels for industry as well as for the military. Gales is in charge of the acoustics, behavior and communications group.

"We have known for some time people can get just as fatigued with noises as they can in heavy physical labor. Thus, our testing with human subjects has to be done with a great deal of caution," Dr. Klumpp said.

The study is being run with the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) to develop suitable field measuring equipment and techniques to perform laboratory and field measurements of steady state and impact noise.

NIOSH is an air agency of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Impact noises are caused by heavy industrial machinery such as punch presses and by the clanging and banging of hammers against metal or dropping sheet metal on concrete floors.

Steady state noises are found in engine rooms, assembly lines and in military noises such as gunfire.

By federal law ears must be protected from steady noises over 90 decibels(dB) when exposure is over eight hours daily.

Impact noises have a high peak sound pressure level, often above 140 dB, but lasting just a fraction of second. No one knows what the limit of impact noise should be, Dr. Klumpp says.

(The decibel is mathematical unit of measure of sound.)

Just what happens to hearing during periods of prolonged exposure to impact noises is one of the key questions Dr. Klumpp's study hopes to answer.

Five questions will be studied:

1. What boundaries are best to predict hearing damage from exposure to impact noise? Is the peak sound level pressure level a better predictor than the total energy of the sound produced?

2. What is the relationship between the boundaries, if established, and the degree of hearing loss?

3. Can a simple instrument package be developed to allow industry and government to gauge risk of hearing damage?

4. What is the safe level of exposure?

5. What manufacturing equipment and machinery produce the most harmful impact noises?

Dr. Klump and Gales spent almost a year going through every scientific journal published in the world recording all data on sound studies to aid the current tests.

Tapes have been obtained of various noises and the scientists plan to use 18 different ones in the study.

"The peak and duration of the impact noises is a key factor in our studies," Dr. Klump said.

The human listeners will hear the taped noises in isolated booths and hearing thresholds will be measured constantly to be sure there is no overexposure.

The scientists are bold enough to take part themselves and have a pool of San Diego area college students for subjects, too.

The San Diego Naval Hospital is providing the supervision.

12 Orange County firms get blame for pollution

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Twelve companies operating in Orange County produce the bulk of pollutants daily, Air Pollution Control Officer William Fitchen reports in in an "emissions inventory" made for the board of supervisors.

He said that emissions from such stationary sources remained at "essentially the same" as in 1971, adding that in no case was the amount of pollutants considered to exceed allowable limits.

Fitchen also disclosed that there was a major rise in vehicle registration: it went from the 1971 total of 903,192 vehicles to a total of 961,454 last year. This included 5,700 diesel trucks but did not include motorcycles, he said.

Although the number of vehicles on the roads increased 58,262 during the one year, there was "no significant increase" in their pollutants, he said. In fact, he added, reductions are noted in both mobile emissions and in the output of stationary sources.

Were it not for the so-called fuel shortage, when many industries found they had no inadequate supplies of natural gas and had to switch to oil for fuel, the pollultants would have decreased materially, Fitchen said.

He reminded that neither the district nor the industry has any control over the availability of fuels.

"As it is, the increase (in polluting emissions)) amounts to but one ton per year.

Air monitoring in the county indicates that oxidant levels are decreasing in the whole South Coast Air Basin, which includes Los Angeles and Ventura counties, as well as Orange County, the report explained.

The lowest concentrations of pollutants and the greatest declines have been in the south and west portions of the vast basin, and this means Orange County, Fitchen explained.

The Air Resources Board evaluation of the air monitoring data "agrees with our analysis that air quality is improving in Orange County," he added.

The increase in vehicles meant more carbon monoxides, but this does not contribute to photochemical smog, it was explained.

Major emissions inventory for 1972 showed the 12 plants listed thusly as major contributors to pollution:

Edison Co., 4,700 tons per year of sulfur oxides, 4,015 tons of nitrogen oxides and 657 tons of particulates.

Others: General Crude Oil, Newport Beach, 1,460 tons yearly of sulfur oxides; Xerox at Irvine, 489 tons of hydrocarbons; Crestlite Aggregates at San Clemente, 342 tons of sulfur oxides; Certron at Anaheim, 340 tons of hydrocarbons; Standard Pressed Steel at Santa Ana, 240 tons of hydrocarbons;

Crown Cork and Seal at Fullerton, 228 tons of hydrocarbons; Kerr Glass at Santa Ana, 160 tons of l nitrogen oxides; Aerchem Co. of Orange, 154 tons of hydrocarbons; Valley Industrial Laundry at Anaheim, 148 tons of that pollutant; Steelcase Corp. at Tustin, 126 tons of hydrocarbons; and Collier Carbon and Chemical, Brea, 113 tons of nitrogen oxides. Air Polluion Control -Disdt District as major contributers of air pollutants.

Los Angeles County's Air Pollution Control District recently listed 69 firms as major contributors of air pollutants. It included oil refineries; there are none in Orange County.

Judge frees fiberglass boat

McHale's Navy may sail

Actor Ernest Borgnine, beached when television tycoons scuttled McHale's Navy, will soon be afloat again, thanks to Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert A. Banyard.

The jurist gave Borgnine possession of a $50,000 mold for a 65-foot fiberglass boat, as compensation for failure of Newport Beach boatbuilders to put some seagoing planks under his feet.

Borgnine had sued the Joseph Stephens Corp., Newport Motor Yachts.

Pacific Marine Industries, Inc., and Melvin A. Richley, complaining that they had not delivered a 56-foot motor cruiser he ordered May 19, 1970, and which was to have cost him $100,000.

As collateral to the deal, Borgnine said, he was to get possession of the mold if his own craft was not completed in time.

He said that $46,000 later, he still had no craft and so he brought suit. He said that failure of the boatbuilders to deliver his yacht had upset his plans for extensive sailings, chiefly fishing expeditions to Alaska and Mexican waters.

The court was told that Newport Motor Yachts transferred the mold to Pacific Marine, now using it to build a yacht for entertainer Victor Borge.

Deputies wound 3 in shootout

Three East Los Angeles-area youths were shot Saturday after they opened fire on sheriff's deputies during a party in Pico Rivera, authorities said.

Booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit murder were Ygnacio Garcia, 18, of 13126 Proctor St., La Puente; Willie V. Ochoa, 18, of 3364 Lexington St., El Monte; and an unidentified 17-year-old.

Deputies said a man identified only as Fred Hernandez, 18, asked them to stand by while he retrieved his car across the street from a party at 9716 Maxine St. about 1:30 a.m. Hernandez told the deputies he was afraid people at the party might "hurt" him if he tried to drive away.

Deputies said that when Hernandez got into the car, gunfire erupted from a living room window. Deputies said they returned fire and wounded the three taken into custody.

30 rescued in apartment fire

Thirty persons were evacuated and one man was critically injured Saturday in a fire at an 18-unit apartment house in the Echo Park area of Los Angeles.

The blaze broke out on the second floor, apparently because of careless smoking. Damage was estimated at $35,000 to five apartments on the second floor.

Most of the residents speak only Spanish, and firemen said the language barrier caused considerable confusion when they first arrived at the fire.

Missing child returns home

A 9-year-old Huntington Park girl, who had been the object of an overnight house-to-house search, casually walked into her home at 9 a.m. Saturday, some 20 hours after she disappeared following an argument with her mother.

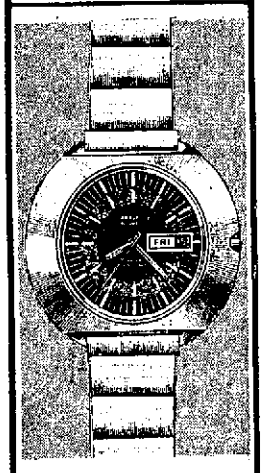

Police said Deborah Byrne, of 6831 Bissell St., returned home while family friends and neighbors, many of whom had been searching all night, were still out looking for her.

Police said the child did not indicate where she had been during the night.

Lawmen praise Secret Witness

that the reward offers have been canceled.

The first results of the Secret Witness service came on June 21, 1972, only 10 days after inauguration of the program. A tip brought about the arrest of Benny Coleman, 32, sought for the murder of 71-year-old Titus McDaniel in March, 1971. Coleman, arrested immediately after the tip was phoned in, was convicted Sept. 5 in Los Angeles Superior Court and the informant received a $500 reward.

FIVE DAYS later, on June 26, a telephoned tip to the Secret Witness desk resulted in the capture of Bobby Joe Brummert, 31-year-old escapee from a state prison camp in Tulare County. The Secret Witness informant was paid a $1,000 reward.

On June 28, information from a Secret Witness enabled authorities to pick up Jesse Lew Bertini, 21-year-old escapee from a state prison camp in San Diego County. The informant collected a $500 reward.

Secret Witness information received on July 27 enabled robbery detectives to arrest Carl C. Campbell, 22, and Daniel D. Young, sought as a suspected robbery-burglary team. The informant was paid a $500 reward after Campbell and Young were convicted.

ON AUG. 15, a Secret Witness tip resulted in the arrest at Hayward of Conrad Frazier, 35, excapee from a state prison camp at Susanville. The informant received a $500 reward.

On Oct. 19, Orange County sheriff's deputies acting on information supplied by a Secret Witness seized Charles Thomas Malloy, sought as a fugitive after a conviction of selling drugs. The informant was paid a $500 reward.

On Nov. 10 a Secret Witness informant named 36-year-old Walter Thomas Curry and 23-year-old Car Douglas McQuillion, who were serving prison sentences in Louisiana State Prison, as the long-sought holdup killers of Cyril Ball and his son James, slain during a robbery at the Ball and Frank Sporting Goods Store on Dec. 26, 1970.

Long Beach robbery detectives interviewed the suspects at the Louisiana institution on Nov. 22 and returned with what they called "solid physical and other evidence" linking the suspects with the crime. The two men now are fighting extradition from Louisiana.

REWARD money totaling $7,000 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $5,000 collected by Downtown Long Beach Associates — will be paid the informant on conviction of the suspects.

On Dec. 4, Long Beach forgery detectives acting on a Secret Witness tip picked up Richard L. Seals, 39-year-old suspected forger and fugitive parole violator. The informant collected a $500 reward.

The first Secret Witness arrest for 1973 came on Feb. 14, when police acting on a Secret Witness tip arrested Robert Timpe, 25-year-old escapee from Susanville prison facility. A $500 reward is waiting for informant 555-HHH, who thus far has failed to present a claim for it.

On Monday, March 5, a Secret Witness tip led police and FBI agents to the arrest of 49-year-old federal parolee Vern L. Stover in connection with the Feb. 20 holdup of the Long Beach Naval Station and the shooting of a Harbor Division policeman, who has recovered. Stover was convicted on May 23 of the assault on the officer, and informant 111-JST is eligible for a $1,000 reward.

A DRAMATIC example of Secret Witness effectiveness came on April 18, when a caller on the Secret Witness line reported a murder and named the murder suspect — and told where he could be found — even before police had officially identified the victim.

Homicide detectives were on their way to 740 Orizaba Ave., where the body of a "John Doe" victim, beaten to death, had been discovered, when the Secret Witness editor received a call identifying the victim as Hollis V. Boas, 57-year-old Santa Monica school district mathematics teacher.

Acting on further information supplied by the informant, homicide investigators three hours later arrested Don James Meyers, 20. The informant will be eligible for a $2,000 reward if Meyers is convicted.

ON MAY 30, a Secret Witness tip led to the arrest of Joseph M. Fowler, 23, suspected of the $1,155 holdup of the Coast Bank, 5354 E. Second St., on May 15.

Since Fowler was an escapee from Orange County Jail, the informant was paid $500 for Fowler's apprehension as a fugitive, and will be eligible for an additional $500 reward in the event the suspect is convicted of the bank robbery charge.

Also on May 30, an informant told the Secret Witness desk that Wayne Ault, 23, and his brother Robert, 25, of Long Beach, and John Gilbert, 23, of San Francisco, had escaped from a Northern California prison camp and were headed toward Portland, Ore. Portland authorities were alerted and arrested Gilbert and the Ault brothers at the Portland address furnished by the informant, who was paid a $500 reward.

ON JUNE 3, an informant called Secret Witness to advise that Robert Lee Tullies, 35-year-old fugitive sought on numerous forgery and narcotics complaints by the sheriff's department, could be found at an address in Lakewood. Acting on the original information from the Secret Witness tipster, Lakewood sheriff's officers set up a surveillance that resulted in the apprehension of Tullies on June 5. The informant, K11-4CA, is eligible for a $500 reward for the arrest of Tullies as a fugitive, and should contact Secret Witness at 436-2526 to arrange for collection.

Percy in bid for '76 race

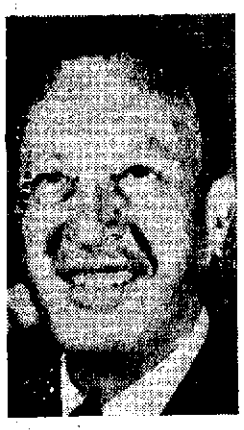

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Charles Percy, one of the chief Republican critics of President Nixon's handling of the Watergate scandal, disclosed Saturday he has taken the first step towards a possible 1976 presidential race.

With his support and approval, a group of the 53-year-old senator's friends have formed an "Exploratory Committee" to do initial research and help Percy decide whether to run in 1976.

The Illinois Republican was not available for direct comment on the move. But the early action was understood to reflect his belief that a 1976 presidential bid will require a strenuous, all-out drive in both primary and nonprimary states.

A MEMBER of the GOP's moderate-to-liberal wind, which has failed to nominate a presidential candidate since the 1950's, Percy faces the almost certain opposition of President Nixon. The President reportedly told his Cabinet last month the senator will never be president "as long as I have anything to say about it."

Existence of the Exploratory Committee, formed last Feb. 9 in Chicago, was made known in a letter and financial report mailed Friday to the secretary of the Senate. Although such reports are only required from formal candidates for federal office, Percy has decided to make full disclosure of funds from the start of any presidential bid.

Army staff chief post to Weyand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, who wound up the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, is expected to become the Army's new vice chief of staff.

Weyand would replace Gen. Alexander M. Haig, who retired from the Army unexpectedly this week to serve as President Nixon's White House chief of staff.

Pentagon sources said Saturday that Weyand's name had been proposed for the second highest Army post. Nixon will make the final decision on sending the nomination to the Senate. The White House, however, declined to comment on the reports.

Weyand, 56, was the last U.S. commander in Vietnam. He left there when the final planeloads of American troops flew out on March 29.

Energy: demand too high

More than a few Southland families already have either canceled vacation plans or decided on alternative, short-trip holidays to get away from it all.

What most commuters and travelers can't believe, though, is that the gas shortage wasn't artifically created, mainly because it came on so fast. But the answer to that is that there's less gas now because there's less oil.

Item: Every major oil company is limiting deliveries of gasoline to retailers, basing delivery on allocation — a station gets as much this month as it did in the same month a year ago. Not fair, the oil companies admit, but necessary if there's going to be enough to go around.

ITEM: GAS wars have disappeared. The average price for regular gas is now 40 cents a gallon and rising — up 10 per cent from last Fall.

While individual gas consumers are being pinched, government agencies are already in the vise.

Early in May, the County of Los Angeles advertised to the major oil companies for bids on next year's gas, some 12.5 million gallons. Of nine companies approached, only Shell Oil Co. responded, asking a 67 per cent price increase.

"Foul!" cried the Board of Supervisors. There was talk of indicting the oil companies, summarily seizing their refineries and pipelines to guarantee that the county got the gas it needed, negotiating with Long Beach to refine all the gas anybody would ever need. Hearings were held, investigations launched, probes promoted.

ON JUNE 1, the county reluctantly agreed to the 67 per cent increase after being told, "Take it or leave it." The county took it on the chin, says Supervisor Jim Hayes, but what could it do?

Long Beach advertised its own bids about the same time. When no response was forthcoming, City Manager John Mansell suggested the city could refine its own gas. Sounded great at the time, but Mansell admits he'd rather use the city's oil reserves as a lever to get better response this time around. What that response will be won't be known until Monday when the second round of bids is opened.

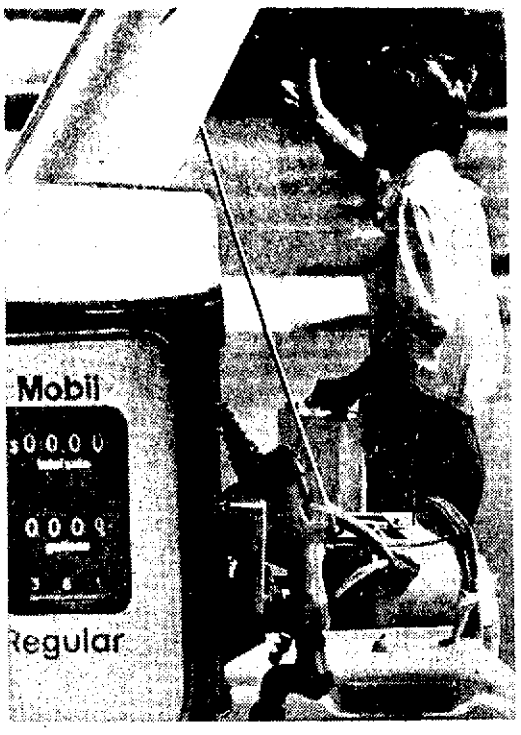

There's a joke going around City Hall that if Long Beach doesn't get the gas it needs at the price it's willing to pay, the next time a refinery has a fire, it will be told that the firemen are on their way — as soon as they gas up their trucks.

IT'S THE same story in Los Angeles and all across the country — no gas for government. And industry is faring no better:

— Whitney Gilliand, vicechairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, recently told a Long Beach audience that the nationwide fuel shortage may cause a reduction in airline flights and fewer new air routes. Maybe. What's certain is that air fares are going to cost more. Fuel is 30 per cent of an airline's operating cost, and that cost is skyrocketing. The air traveler, not the airline, will end up paying the increase.

— TRUCKERS say they're up against the wall — the shortage of diesel fuel is driving them out of business. Barge operators have been hit the hardest. They want Congress to make sure they get the gas they need, but so does everyone.

Oil companies explain that they're not bidding for all categories of business because of the industry's "tight supply situation," as Shell Oil in Los Angeles described it in a position paper after criticism over lack of bidding for the county contract.

SOMETIMES . . . NO GAS AT ANY PRICE

"First, supplies for this type of account historically have been filled from surplus refinery production," said the release. "We used to bid for this business simply to keep our refineries running at or near capacity."

Shell added that it bid to fill the county's gas requirements only because of its feeling of obligation to the county over a 10-year relationship.

"AS FOR price," the company said, "had we chosen solely to maximize profits, we would have sold this product for more money elsewhere."

All the major oil companies give about the same reasons for reducing their supplies to independent distributors and retailers, who are being forced out of business at a nationwide rate of 300 stations a week.

Why have these major oil producers, who have been meeting the nation's needs for decades, suddenly clamped on the lid?

The problems didn't develop overnight. Oilmen gradually have been draining the country's irreplaceable petroleum resources and depending more and more on foreign suppliers who are no longer cooperating.

(Next: Why oil is the hinge pin of the energy crisis, and how it got that way.)

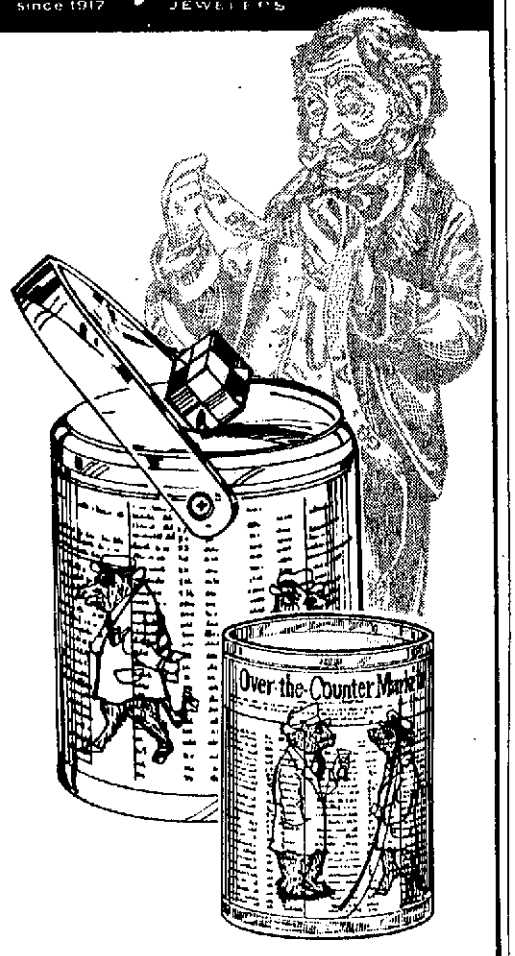

U.S. to pay for false drug raid

MASSAPEQUA, N.Y. (UPI) — The Justice Department has agreed to pay $160,000 in damages to a businessman whose home was ripped apart last year by federal agents looking for $4 million in drug profits, the victim's wife said Saturday.

The agents came up empty-handed last June 9 in their search of the home of John Conforti, shortly after Conforti's brother-in-law, Louis Cirillo, was convicted of heroin smuggling and sentenced to 25 years in prison. Federal agents had found over $1 million buried in Cirillo's backyard and said they expected to find another $4 million in or around Conforti's home.

In the course of the all-day search of Conforti's $65,000 split-level home here, the agents, using power tools and heavy equipment, removed its aluminum siding, interior panels and some roof shingles. The agents also wrecked the family's furniture and dug deep trenches in the lawn, but did not come up with any cash or drugs.

Improved relations result

Russ deals profit U.S.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A congressional study made public Saturday said that the U.S. stood to gain more in the way of political benefits from expanded trade with the Soviet Union than in "the relatively modest economic returns."

Calling the current period of expanded contacts, "a critical one in U.S.-Soviet relations," the study said that if the two countries continue to move ahead in developing commercial ties, "progress in political, cultural and other areas may be facilitated."

BUT, it warned that if progress is not continued, "a sharp deterioration in Soviet-U.S. relations" may result.

The 105-page study was released by a subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, head by Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis.

It was written by John P. Hardt, one of the leading American specialists on the Soviet economy, and George D. Holliday. They are employes of the Library of Congress.

In general, the report agreed with most analysts who have said that Soviet-American trade may show a significant increase in coming years over the low level of the past, but that total volume "by any projection is not likely to represent a large share of U.S. trade or gross national product."

"Economic advantages to the U.S. are likely to be centered on such specific sectors as imports of petroleum and natural gas, and exports of soybeans, feed and cereal grain, and computers, and other high-technology products," it said.

"The balance of payments deficit of the U.S. and our program for expanding the export of high technology may receive benefits which are, at best, only marginal compared to those which may derive from potential changes in economic relations with non-Communist countries," the report continued.

BUT IT also said that if the Soviet Union, in an effort to build up trade with the West, should "reorder its priorities" and allow foreign firms to have more influence on its decision-making, "significant long-run benefits of a predominantly political nature might accure to the U.S."

It listed these benefits as a possible reduction in the Soviet threat to American security, acceptance by the Soviet Union of the Western international system, and increased political contacts brought on by a step up in commercial and financial contacts.

"Over-all, such political gains might far outweigh the relatively modest economic returns," it said.

Rail crash held 'man failure'

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The Penn Central Railroad said today that "man failure" appeared to be at the roof of the crash of two trains in suburban Mount Vernon, N.Y., Friday evening that killed one person and injured 140.

William Baird, a spokesman for the railroad, said he could not elaborate on the preliminary finding that human error rather than equipment failure had caused the crash of the 7:05 express from Grand Central Station into the rear of the 7:10 Stamford, Conn., local as the local was unloading passengers at the Mount Vernon station.

"We are making a thorough investigation," Baird said. "A report should be made sometime this week."

After the crash, there were conflicting reports about its cause. Some mentioned a possible confusion in the signal tower which may have sent the express on the same track as the local, others said the brakes on the express appeared to have failed, and one passenger said the local had backed up before discharging passengers. The Penn Central would not comment on any of the statements.

The man killed in the crash was Dominic Gomes, 26, of Port Chester, N.Y. Of the injured, five were still hospitalized today, including Colin Huges, the Australian vice consul in New York, who suffered skull, arm and leg fractures.

The Penn Central's investigation of itself was one of a number of probes of the crash. The Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which owns the New Haven right-of-way, announced that three board members had been detailed to conduct an investigation.

Staff members of the Federal Railroad Administration were also in Mount Vernon to investigate the crash. The administration, under the federal Railroad Safety Act, has the authority to set safety standards, investigate compliance and, in and emergency, intervene in operations.

U.S. school aid funds 'assured'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration assured public school authorities Saturday they would continue to receive federal aid grants next year despite Congress' failure to approve a substitute, $2.8 billion revenue sharing bill for education.

The letter to state school superintendents from John Ottina, the U.S. education commissioner-designate, was of great importance to the nation's schools, which were uncertain where further federal aid would come from if revenue sharing weren't approved.

It also was an admission of defeat for the administration's hopes of pushing revenue sharing through Congress in time for the 1973-74 school year.

Statutory authority for the 32 present categorical grants for school aid expires June 30. The administration proposed a "Better Schools Act" March 19 that would combine these programs in a single package, giving state and local governments much greater spending flexibility under five board new areas.

Until now, the administration had been telling schools it had no reserve plans for providing school aid if the revenue sharing bill failed to pass. "We don't program for failure," one administration official had said.

The Better Schools Act represents the administration's attempt to begin dismantling President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society school legislation, including Title I of the Landmark Elementary and Secondary Act of 1965, which provides the largest single source of federal aid for schools with emphasis on needy children.

Ottina sssured the state school officials that the money would keep coming, although they shouldn't expect more than the $2.8 billion — including the school lunch program — that revenue sharing would provided. He said the administration was now aiming for congressional approval of revenue sharing in time for the 1974-75 school year.

"It is certainly not the intent of the executive branch nor, we believe, of the Congress to produce a result in which there is no federal funding for education programs after July 1, and we are confident that this outcome will be avoided," Ottina said.

"Accordingly, we are working with the Congress to resolve the funding problem with the 1973-74 school year."

5 die in dope doublecross

Assassin reaps revenge

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Police said Saturday an assassin is moving through the city's drug underworld, systematically eliminating former associates who, he believes, doublecrossed him while he was imprisoned in Mexico.

"He started with a list of 10 names and only five on that list are still alive," Bexar County Sheriff's Lt. Frank Steggall said.

"He doesn't care who knows about the killings — either us or the ones on his list. He's out for revenge and apparently nothing is going to stand in his way of wiping them out.

"It's starting to look like a 1930 gangster movie."

The assassin is identified by police as Fred Gomez Corrozco, a 33-year-old San Antonio man wanted for murder in Mexico and the U.S. He also has several federal warrants out against him for parole violation and drug sales. He recently escaped from a Mexico jail where he was serving a term for murder.

"That's when all the trouble began — when he escaped from jail," Steggall said.

Early this year, Gilbert Escobedo was bragging to some of his friends in a south side bar about how Corrozco had been muscled out of the organization. He said he had $87,000 of Corrozco's money in his pocket.

Police said Corrozco walked into the bar, announced that he was going to kill Escobedo and the other nine men, and shot Escobedo at point-blank range.

"He didn't seem to care that there were a dozen witnesses to the shooting," Steggall said. "But he got the message to the other nine."

Since then, four other persons on the list have been murdered.

On April 8, Agapito Ruiz and Roy Castanos were dragged from their car and executed with a bullet each in the back of the head. Last Thursday, David Garcia and Joe Richard Garces were shot while in their car, a 1930 Model A roadster.

"The information we have is that Corrozco brought along two hit men with him from Mexico," Steggall said. "We know that someone is working with him."

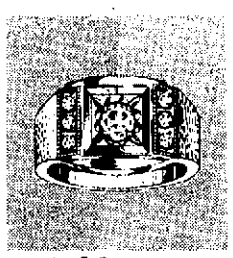

Steggall said San Antonio police had been able to talk to only one person on the death list.

"He didn't say much," the lieutenant said. "What could he say?"

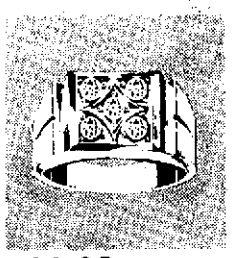

Corrozco is described to be about 5-foot-10 and weighing about 230 pounds.

"The arrest order we have on him says no one should try and arrest him without assistance," Steggall said. "He's one tough hombre."

But Franco still boss

Spain's premier sworn in

MADRID (AP) — A taciturn admiral formally took over some of Gen. Francisco Franco's job Saturday, but political observers predicted little change in the generalissimo's authoritarian policies.

Adm. Luis Carrero Blanco became premier in a swearing-in ceremony at El Pardo Palace, where Franco has resided in his 33 years of autocratic rule since his victory in the Spanish civil war.

Carrero is the first man besides Franco to head the Spanish government since the Franco regime began, though he has been running day-to-day affairs for years without the title.

POLITICAL sources said Carrero's official elevation to premier meant a reduced workload for the 80-year-old Caudillo, who remains chief of state and the effective ruler of Spain.

Carrero swore personal loyalty to Franco, and vowed to uphold the law and the principles of the Movement — Spain's only legal political organization. Carrero also assumed leadership of the Movement, the political structure underpinning the Franco regime.

Though Franco relinquished some of his formal powers, he remains chief of state and commander-in-chief of the armed forces, which amounts to having absolute power over the Spanish government. Franco will hold those powers for life under the constitution.

Carrero, described as an archconservative "more Franco than Franco" will preside at cabinet meetings and direct general policy to coordinate organs of government and administration.

However, all his actions will be subject to Franco's approval. Carrero is responsible only to Franco.

Though Spaniards believe Carrero's elevation does not mean wider political liberalization in Spain, the measure has been welcomed as a major step that will avoid political complications when Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon becomes king and chief of state.

ADM. LUIS CARRERO BLANCO takes oath of office in Madrid Saturday as Spain's premier, a newly created post to which he was named Friday by Generalissimo Francisco Franco, shown in background. —UPI Franco named the 35-year-old prince in July 1969 as his successor.

Carrero's first act as premier was a 45-minute courtesy call on the prince.

When Prince Juan Carlos is crowned, he will have the power to choose a new premier if he wishes from a list of three candidates supplied by the Council of the Realm, a consultative body to the chief of state.

The prince is politically powerless while Franco is alive.

Carrero is expected to announce his cabinet on Monday, keeping only seven ministers from the 19-man cabinet that resigned after Carrero's appointment.

Sources said the new cabinet will have its first session Thursday. President Hector J. Campora of Argentina is to begin a state visit on Friday.

THE EXPECTED cabinet shakeup, sources said, will bring in traditional conservatives to replace technocrats who gained a majority in the government in 1969.

The change, the sources said, will hit hardest at ministers belonging to Opus Dei, the powerful Roman Catholic lay organization.

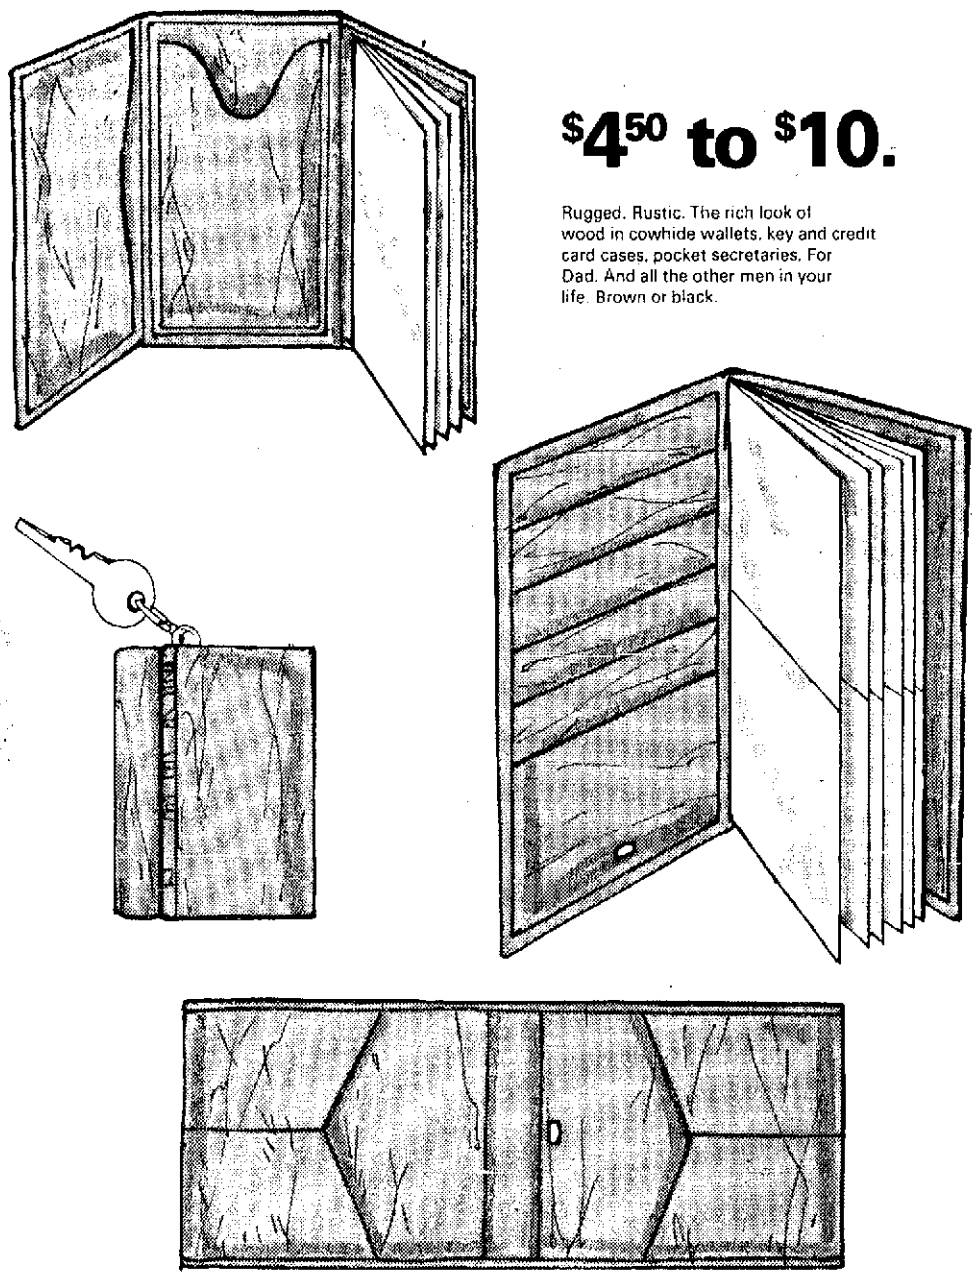

The chief victim of the shakeup appears to be Gregorio Lopez Bravo, the foreign affairs minister who established diplomatic relations with China and East Germany and promoted economic and political relations to high levels with Latin-American countries.

707 jetliner crash kills 2

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A Boeing 707 airliner carrying no passengers crashed into the water while attempting to land Saturday at Rio's Galeao Airport. Authorities reported two crewmen were killed and two others survived.

The plane, apparently on a cargo flight, landed in the water about 100 yards from the runway. Officials of Varig, the Brazilian state airline that owns the plane, said they did not know what it was carrying.

Chinks in Arab armor showing

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A crack is showing in the Arab solidarity behind Egypt's Security Council campaign against Israeli occupation.

All eight Arab countries in the council's Middle East debate, called at Egypt's request, seek Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian, Jordanian and Syrian land occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

But Egypt and Jordan are at odds because Foreign Minister Mohammad Hassan el-Zayyat of Egypt said something in the debate that could be interpreted to mean Palestinians, including refugees displaced by Israel, should take over Jordan's west bank for a country of their own.

AMBASSADOR Abdul Hamid Sharaf of Jordan replied with a defense of Jordan's territorial integrity. In an interview later, he conceded that Egyptian-Jordanian differences remain.

Zayyat told the council Wednesday that "the Palestinian nation" should have "secure and recognized boundaries in their homeland of Palestine."

He said Israel's borders should be with "the Palestine nation envisaged" in the U.N. General Assembly's 1947 plan to partition Palestine into a Jewish state and an Arab state.

Taken literally, that had to mean the "Palestine nation" should include not only Egypt's Gaza Strip but also Jordan's west bank, parts of old Palestine they got in the 1948 Arab-Israeli war but which Israel occupied in 1967.

A source familiar with Zayyat's thinking said the Palestinians have a right to their own state just like the Jews, and "it is up to the Palestinians themselves to decide where it is."

Ambassador Yosef Tekoah of Israel accused Zayyat of "implying the dismemberment of Jordan" with his proposal.

Zayyat retorted by noting Egypt's willingness to give up the Gaza territory formerly under its rule as a way to settle the Palestinian refugee question, a problem most authorities agree must be solved before peace can be restored in the Middle East.

But the west bank issue is a more sensitive one for Jordan's King Hussein and his government. Some Palestinians already have voiced opposition to Hussein's right to continue ruling the area once Israeli occupation is ended.

Sharaf, in a reply seemingly aimed at Zayyat and Tekoah, said:

"It is our responsibility to defend our rights and the rights of our citizens in the occupied territory, and to defend our territorial integrity, which has been violated since 1967."

He said residents of the west bank are "citizens of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan," the formal name of King Hussein's country.

"Now when the end of the occupation is achieved, then we are committed in the government to bring about by constitutional methods the ascertainment of the will of the people in the west bank.

"Therefore, we don't believe that any formula should be imposed before the plebiscite."

The three-day-old debate continues Monday.

State speeds $9 million drug program

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California counties soon will receive $9 million in state funds for drug programs, including one "giving basically good kids a second chance," says Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian.

Brian said in a statement the counties must add an additional 10 per cent to the funds in order to be eligible. The grants will range from $2,886,125 for Los Angeles County to $975 for Alpine County.

At the close of a meeting of county coordinators Thursday, Brian said the funds "will speed development of a wideranging program to prevent narcotic and drug use and to treat addicts and abusers."

He said the uses of the money would include the training of prevention counselors, paying for the "crisis line" telephone service, and operating clinics, detoxification units andsyouth counseling centers.

Part also will be used to develop a "criminal diversion" system, Brian said.

"This unique approach is planned to commit first-time drug offenders to treatment, education and rehabilitation programs, giving basically good kids a second chance with guidance from the local probation department," he said.

This "diversion from normal punitive measures" places an offender in a rehabilitation program for six months to two yeas, he said. If treatment is successful, the court may dismiss the charges.

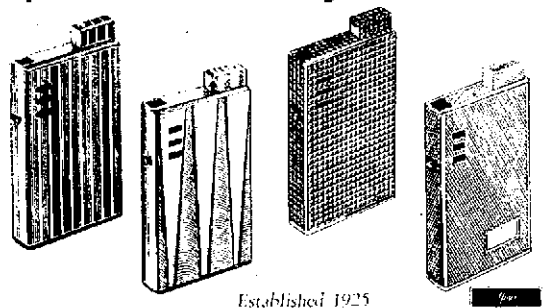

Brian said the funds were made available through legislation introduced last year by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach.

Police capture bus hijacker

IONE (AP) — A 22-year-old man who "seemed to be high on drugs" was arrested Friday after a Greyhound bus robbery and a high speed auto chase through the Sierra foothills.

Amador County sheriff's officers said the robber fired several shots during the episode, which lasted several hours. Officers said they arrested Keith L. Barngerober of Oregon House, Calif., just after he wounded himself in the chest with a .22-caliber revolver.

BARNGEROBER was taken to the Sacramento Medical Center. Officers said he was booked in connection with kidnaping, assault with intent to do great bodily harm, robbery and car theft.

Investigators said Barngerober boarded an Oakland-bound Greyhounds bus at Stateline, Nev., Friday afternoon. During the trip, he pulled his revolver and "commandeered" the vehicle, they said.

When the bus stopped at Fresh Pond, in El Dorado County, Miller said Barngerober ordered him to obtain a car in which to escape. The Greyhound depot manager called the sheriff's office.

BUT DEPUTIES said before they arrived, Barngerober took two hostages and demanded the car of a nearby service station attendant. Deputies said Barngerober fired two shots, and the attendant turned over his car keys.

One of the hostages, Kathy Langloys, 16, of South Lake Tahoe, slipped away at that moment, investigators said. But the other, Kristen Cooper, 19, of Davis, was forced into the car and driven away, they said.

Wild race nets L.B. suspect

A 21-year-old Long Beach laborer sought for questioning in connection with the $7,000 burglary of a Long Beach church June 1 led police on a hare-and-hounds automobile chase through a 30-square-block area of Central Long Beach Saturday at speeds approaching 70 miles an hour.

His car finally was stopped near the intersection of Pacific Coast Highway and Lewis Avenue, but only after three patrol units were damaged.

Booked for suspicion of evading arrest, reckless driving and investigation of burglary was James Wooly Jr., who gave his address as the 800 block of East 17th Street.

Officer Mike Woodward, who said his patrol unit "just blew up" during the pursuit, said he and his partner, Leo Schmock, were investigating an abandoned stolen car at 21st Street and Orange Avenue about 6:05 p.m. when Wooly drove by in a new car.

Thinking Wooly might be connected with the $7,000 burglary, Woodward said he asked Wooly to stop. Instead, Woodward said, Wooly sped away. Woodward said he jumped in his police car, leaving Schmock standing on the street corner.

Woodward said Wooly after running stop signs, began driving crazily up one street and down another as other police cars joined the pursuit. At one point, Officers James Olds and Thomas Clemens rammed the back of Wooly's car with their own at 11th Street and Gaviota Avenue. This failed to stop him.

Olds and Clemens said they caught up with Wooly again at Pacific Coast Highway and Lewis Avenue and crashed their car into the front of Wooly's car as Officers Paul Bohnlein and Robert Gonzales hit the rear with their vehicle.

Plant fumes mishaps kill 2, hospitalize 3

Two identical industrial accidents in separate plants claimed the lives of two workmen and seriously injured three others Saturday as fumes knocked the men out while they cleaned out huge tanks.

In the first accident, a Carson man and a Redondo Beach man, both employes of Hydro Cleaning Co., Torrance, were killed when they entered a waste vat in an East Los Angeles tanning plant and were overcome by fumes.

The victims were identified as Damian Pena, 38, of 532 E. 223rd St., Carson and Edward Chavez, 37, of 2617 Carnegie Lane, Redondo Beach.

County firemen said the men were using suction hoses from catwalks to clean the vat at the Los Angeles Tanning Co. when on of the men went down a ladder to retrieve a fallen object.

His companion saw the man collapse in the knee-deep waste and was overcome himself after going to his aid.

A third unidentified workman wore a mask and was nearly overcome in his attempt to rescue the two.

In a separate incident, fast-acting paramedics of the city fire department saved the lives of two Huntington Beach men who were overcome by fumes while working in an empty water tank on top of a downtown Los Angeles building, firemen said.

Authorities said fire units were called to the Security Bank Building at 215 W. Sixth St. and found the two men inside the water tank.

Officials said one of the workers, Albert Haun, 32, of 17692 Van Buren St., was working with a de-creasing solvent and passed out.

His partner, Jerry Irwen, 36, of 17691 Van Buren St., saw Haun in trouble and called someone to alert the fire department, then he climbed into the tank to aid the other man. Both men work for Howe-Baker Co. of South El Monte, authorities said.

By the time fire units arrived Irwen had also passed out. Both men had stopped breathing when they were pulled out of the 5,000 gallon tank, but paramedics were able to revive them.

Both men were taken to California Hospital where they were reported in satisfactory condition.

Oil vapors force closing of highway

BENICIA (UPI) — A cloud of highly flammable oil refinery vapor caused the temporary closing of the toll bridge and freeway between here and Martinez early Saturday.

The California Highway Patrol said the bridge and Highway 21, the Luther Gibson Freeway, were closed at 3:35 a.m. after notification that the dangerous vapor was coming from a malfunctioning safety valve at a nearby Exxon refinery. The road was reopened at 4 a.m.

Plant closing may doom city

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA (AP) — The old mission settlement of San Juan Bautista faces economic disaster over pollution controls.

The town got the word Saturday that its only industry - a smoke-belching cement plant - will close for good rather than pay skyrocketing costs for air pollution safeguards.

THE TOWN, which has a population of 1,164 and a history going back to the days of the Spanish dons, got a reprieve two years ago when news of its plight reached far beyond California and the Ideal Cement Co. reversed its decision to close.

The plant employs 139 persons on a nearly $2 million payroll. There are no other industries nearby.

Located 80 miles south of San Francisco, the town was founded in 1797.

"I just don't know what will happen," said Mayor Leonard Caetano, 49, also the manager of the cement plant and the father of seven children. He has worked in the plant 31 years.

CAETANO said it seemed certain this time that the Sept. 5 closure announcement was no false alarm. The notice said all employes will be let go within 90 days.

Caetano said a few of the employes will be offered jobs at Ideal's Redwood City plant 60 miles north, but most will be let go with some supplementary unemployment benefits. Caetano said about 45 per cent of the hourly wage employes are eligible for small pensions.

ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you wish returned.

Drug problem

We moved my husband's elderly mother to the Harbor Crest Convalescent Center, 1322 West Sixth St. in San Pedro after she broke her hip so she would be near us. She has always bought her medications from the American Association of Retired Persons' Pharmacy in Long Beach and we thought she would be able to do so while in the center. However, we got a bill from a drug store in Lomita for one month's medication that was more than double what she had been paying. I called the center and was told their administrator, Jack Adelstein wouldn't allow drugs to come in by mail. He required they come from a nearby pharmacy which is owned by the son of a local dentist that I believe is connected with the center. I don't feel this is right. Can you help us? Mrs. W.D.H., San Pedro.

Your mother-in-law will be able to get her drugs wherever she wants. Adelstein told ACTION LINE he had thought it was illegal for drugs to be sent by mail but after your complaint to the center, he checked and found he was wrong. He denied that there is any connection between the dentist and the center. "He only comes here as a dentist. The son is an independent contractor," he said.

Unordered

If a company sends you something through the mail that you did not order, do you have to pay for it? What laws cover this? D.S., San Pedro.

You can consider any unordered merchandise mailed to you a gift. You do not have to pay for it and you are free to do with it as you see fit without obligation whatsoever to the sender, according to Charles Harmon, postal service official.

State of estate

My father died in December, 1971, and we've been trying ever since to get the estate settled. There has been a long delay in getting information from our attorney in Bellflower to our accountant and we feel the attorney is dragging his feet. My mother is elderly and all this confusion has not helped her well-being. Where can I file a complaint about this matter? F.B., Bellflower.

You can file a complaint against the attorney with the California State Bar Association, 1230 W. Third St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90017, but it's not likely to accomplish much in this case. Settlement of estates routinely takes much longer than most laymen expect and your complaint is a common one. Lawyers ACTION LINE contacted indicate six months is the minimum time for settling an estate and "12 to 15 months is not uncommon. Some cases take as long as three years." According to your lawyer, Robert F. Leavell, consent to transfer the remaining property has just come through after being tied up in the State Inheritance Tax Division. He acknowledged his office had erred in not including the bank account in the estate originally, but the mistake has been corrected and things are near completion.

Back check

I was an employe of the Long Beach Veterans Hospital. In 1971, I hurt my back at work and in 1972 I had a recurrence of this same injury. It took me off the job for a month. My claim for disability was sent in but I haven't received the badly needed check. A.D., Long Beach.

The Federal Employes Compensation office did not have your correct address. The check is being mailed again and you should receive it in a week, said Barbara Yatabe, supervisory claims examiner.

2-year longshore contract negotiated

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Agreement on a new two-year West Coast longshore contract was announced Saturday night by shipper and union negotiators.

The agreement was made effective as of Saturday.

The prospect that President Nixon soon may announce strict new economic controls apparently was a pressure on the bargaining by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Pacific Maritime Association.

Short flight, rough landing

A Harbor City pilot and his passenger in the light plane had flown two miles after take-off from Hawthorne Airport when the craft's engine lost power 600 feet above the San Diego Freeway Saturday afternoon. The pilot, Norman Hyder, 35, of 1666 Oakhorne Drive, stalled the plane and glided it to a rough — but safe — landing in a residential section of county territory. The plane damaged three parked cars, tearing off its right wing in the process. Hyder suffered only facial bruises. His passenger, Javier D. Gurrola, 22, of 12328 E. 222nd St., Hawaiian Gardens, was uninjured, according to deputies. Hyder reported that he recently rebuilt the plane's engine.

Skylab photos show corn fields

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Skylab's powerful cameras scrutinized corn fields in Nebraska, strip mining in Kentucky and the effects of the Mississippi River flooding as astronauts on the space station harvested scientific knowledge during a busy Saturday in orbit.

"Okay," said astronaut Paul J. Weitz as he focused a camera on the central United States from 270 miles in space. "I'm tracking a good Holt County, Neb., field. Got a good corn field."

Weitz and Charles Conrad Jr. operated a battery of cameras which gathered data on the growth and health of the grain fields. Scientists hope that such studies will provide a new knowledge on how to predict the size of harvests and possibly forecast any problems.

THE THIRD crewman, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, operated another type of camera focused on earth. He also took pictures of the sun through a telescope and conducted medical experiments on Conrad.

Saturday, the 15th day of Skylab 1, was the first day of full, scientific activity for the astronauts. Their experiments were curtailed earlier by a shortage of electrical power which forced them to dim lights and take other measures to conserve electricity.

Only one problem clouded the day. A valve in the cooling system in one compartment was stuck open and caused the system to get too cold. Experts on the ground are studying the trouble, but officials said it would have no serious effect on the Skylab 1 mission. A back-up cooling loop, which works like the radiator system in a car, was operating well.

SKIES WERE clear to partly cloudy during the 6,900-mile photo run from the state of Washington to eastern Brazil. The astronauts easily picked out several targets.

"That'll be big in Nebraska," said Weitz, as he prepared to photograph the farmlands below. "You find out how the corn crop is going to go and you can find out how the pheasant crop will be."

Kerwin operated an earth terrain camera which took color pictures of a 67-mile-wide strip of land from the state of Washington to the coast of Georgia. Enlargements of the pictures later will enable scientists to study the effects of the Mississippi River flood, land use in urban areas and the environmental results of strip mining operations in Kentucky.

Conrad and Weitz, with photosensing devices in their battery of instruments, also gathered information on forests in Georgia and Alabama, the snow cover in the Cascade Mountain and on the weather over the Southeast.

THE ASTRONAUTS hoped for pictures of a large storm system, but Mission Control told them the weather front broke up before they arrived over it.

"Just lock on the biggest thunderbumper storm cloud you can find," said Mission Control.

Soviets fire eight Sputniks

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union announced Saturday a new "shotgun" launch of eight unmanned Sputniks into earth orbit aboard a single rocket.

Western military experts said such cluster-shots provide information for Soviet guided missile forces and could be part of the program to develop missiles with multiple warheads.

It was the sixth reported launch of eight Cosmos series satellities aboard one rocket since April, 1970. The last was on Nov. 1.

Costa Rica decision due

U.S. asks Vesco extradition

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The foreign ministry announced Saturday that it had received a petition from the U.S. government asking the extradition of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco.

The petition was forwarded to the supreme court which will decide whether the former New Jersey resident can be extradited to face various charges in the United States, officials said.

Vesco, 37, is under criminal indictment in New York on charges of trying to influence a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation with a $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's 1972 campaign fund.

ALSO INDICTED in that case are former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans. They have pleaded innocent.

Vesco failed to appear in a New York court last month to answer the indictment against him.

He is also charged along with 40 others in an SEC suit charging them with bilking shareholders of Overseas Investors Services Ltd. of $224 million during a period when Vesco was investing heavily in Costa Rica.

Vesco is believed to have invested at least $25 million in Costa Rican enterprises. He said he has renounced his U.S. citizenship and travels with a provisional Costa Rican passport. President Jose Figueres has defended Vesco and his investments.

BUT JENARO Valverde, a deputy of the Costa Rican government and a member of Figueres' party, lashed out at the financier last week, saying:

"Our party cannot go out and ask gangsters to come and invest their money in Costa Rica."

A Canadian businessman, Norman P. LeBlanc, who is associated with Vesco, said last month that he and the indicted financier might have a "missing link" in the Watergate scandal and would be glad to talk it over with special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

LeBlanc did not elaborate, but issued an open invitation to Cox to meet with himself and Vesco "somewhere, someplace" to hear their story.

Super day for the beach

A cooling trend will leave Long Beach with pleasantly sunny days and a few low clouds during morning hours today and Monday, the National Weather Service reported.

Expecting the weather to draw crowds to Southland beaches, lifeguards warned that surf will be rougher than usual — with waves of between two and six feet — as a result of Hurricane Ava, now weakening some 1,500 miles off the Mexican coast.

The hurricane, which forecasters earlier believed might alter the Southland weather pattern for the weekend, was expected to have dissipated by early Monday.

High temperatures in Long Beach through Monday will reach about 73, according to the weather service, while nightly lows will dip to about 58.

assistant at the time of the Watergate burglary, had told Dean of the Haldeman files.

According to Weicker's report, about June 18, the day after the burglary, "Strachan told Dean that he had been ordered by Haldeman to destroy documents which indicated that Haldeman had awareness of actual data received from the wiretap at the Democratic National Committee."

The report, quoting Dean, goes on to say that "Strachan destroyed these documents in his office on the 17th or 18th of June."

Haldeman was the White House chief of staff and President Nixon's closest aide until he resigned April 30.

In a deposition taken last month, Haldeman acknowledged that reports had reached his office that could possibly have been logs of the wiretap on the Democratic headquarters. Haldeman said that he had not personally seen the reports, however, and did not know for certain what they contained.

Haldeman did not say that he had ordered any documents destroyed.

New inflation curbs by Nixon said imminent

McClane, deupty director of the Cost of Living Council, and presidential speechwriter Ray Price.

A source said the presence of the speechwriter indicated he was preparing the text of a Nixon statement on the basis of what was done at the meeting.

The meeting was an indication that a decision was close on a new proposal for Nixon to consider. "They certainly are discussing something that they want to forward to the President at the appropriate time," said one source.

The feeling was widespread in the government that some new tightening of controls was essential after the government reported wholesale prices increased 2 per cent in May, the second largest monthly increase since the Korean War.

Top government economists, including Shultz and Chairman Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers, had been predicting a slow-down in the rate of inflation, but got a speedup instead.

"It was obviously a disappointment," said one top Treasury Department economist. "The increase in price of nonconsumer foods of 4.7 per cent was totally unexpected."

But key administration economists still argued that the inflation resulted largely from a shortage of supply, and that price controls would not solve the problem because they will not of themselves increase supply. The result, they argue, would be more shortages.

Governors unenthusiastic over Reagan's tax proposal

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Reagan insist he did not attend the National Governors' Conference at Lake Tahoe last week with the idea of "selling" his controversial proposal to limit state spending by limiting the revenue it can collect.

But he nevertheless has to be concerned about the almost uniformly negative response of his colleagues to the plan's fundamental element.

And if he had hoped to parlay the proposal into the Republican presidential nomination in 1976, he was given plenty of reason to think the possibility is remote.

The proposal would lock into the state Constitution the percentage of Californians' income the state could take by taxation.

Reagan sent his fellow governors the plan last March 22, and last Monday he explained it in detail at a session closed to the press.

Only New Hampshire's Meldrim Thompson and Arizona's Jack Williams were other than critical, and Williams limited himself to saying that he did "not object" to the plan.

Most of the governors based their objections on their belief that the Constitution was not the place for taxation particulars, but Thompson said enthusiastically, "The Reagan plan would take from politicians and bureaucrats the last word on state spending and give this great power back to the people, where it should have remained all alone."

He said he hoped the "plan for controlled spending would not only catch on with other states, but would become a part of the federal constitution."

Although New Hampshire does not have either an income or a sales tax, Gov. Thompson still feels the principle is applicable to his state.

He plans to ask a constitutional convention next year to adopt the Reagan idea of placing a ceiling on spending, because "otherwise we could spend so much that we exceed the capacity of the taxes we do have to support the budget, and might then try to impose income and sales taxes."

But his fellow governors were not persuaded by Reagan's assurances. Even Colorado's John A. Love, a conservative considered quite friendly to Reagan, had a reservation.

"The reservation I have is that we have a three-tiered government, and if one tier is limited, another may assume greater power or authority than intended," he said.

Governors Daniel Evans of Washington and Nelson Rickefeller of New York, both Republicans, had similar reservations.

"Limiting the capability of state government to meet ... problems would move the responsibility to other levels of government," Rockefeller said.

The pendulum is starting to swing back away from federal to local control," Evans said. "If the states started foreclosing their own capabilities to meet their problems, it would not be good."

While the governors' reactions may not be of immediate concern to Reagan, they must be a factor as he weighs his chances to secure the Republican presidential nomination in 1976.

Meanwhile, the professional campaign staff employed to obtain enough signatures to qualify the proposal for a Nov. 6 election plans to intensify their signature-gathering efforts this week.

Richard Kazen, who left a $22,780-per-year job in Reagan's administration last April to direct the statewide campaign, said the governor went directly to the Los Angeles campaign headquarters from Lake Tahoe Wednesday to "give the workers a pep talk."

Colson blames Mitchell, not Nixon

By CHRISTOPHER LYDON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Charles W. Colson says that late last January, and again in February and March, while he was still special counsel at the White House, he warned President Nixon that he must force former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell to admit that he had played a role in planning the Watergate burglary.

However, Colson, one of Nixon's closest political confidantes, says that as late as mid-March the President told him that he did not believe Mitchell or any of his senior aides were guilty and that, with specific reference to Mitchell, he would not make a scape-goat of an innocent man.

As interpreted by Colson in an extended interview this week, the President's remarks constitute proof that Nixon knew no more than he has publicly stated about the burglary of the Democrats' headquarters or the subsequent coverup. Essentially, they show that the President accepted all the official denials until "new charges" came to his attention on March 21, in Colson's view.

COLSON said that, on the basis of daily conversations with Nixon last year and frequent consultations this year, before and after returning to private law practice on March 1, "I would stake my life" on the President's disclaimers, "only because I can't think of anything that he and I didn't talk about openly."

William Hundley, Mitchell's lawyer, responded to the Colson interview by saying, "The whole tenor of Mr. Colson's allegations against Mr. Mitchell is untrue. When Mr. Mitchell lays out his story before the proper forum, the untruthfulness of Mr. Colson's version will be clear. To answer the story now — particularly the inferences, the innuendo and the hearsay — we would have to lay out Mr. Mitchell's whole story — and on my advice we are not going to do that in the press."

In a familiar role as counterattacker in behalf of Nixon, Colson spoke in angry reaction to charges that the President had been deeply involved in the scandal. Most recently such charges have come from James W. McCord Jr., the convicted Watergate burglar, and indirectly from John W. Dean III, the former White House counsel.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

COLSON dismissed McCord as a "convicted felon," using "second- and third-hand hearsay." He said Dean had had very limited access to the President's office and is now manufacturing sensational charges in the hope of bargaining for immunity from prosecution.

"When they lower me away 6-feet under," said the 43-year-old Colson, "I will go away a Nixon loyalist."

Yet the Colson defense of the President also charges that other Nixon loyalists, notably H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, formerly the President's top aides, diverted important information about the Watergate affair from their chief and may have been participants in the cover-up.

In early February, Colson has told federal prosecutors, he informed Haldeman that he was worried about possible perjury and obstruction of justice at the first Watergate trial, held last January. Payments by Nixon associates to the Watergate defendants could be construed as criminal "hush money," he remembers telling Haldeman. But he has testified that Haldeman responded that he knew about the payments and was not concerned.

COLSON has told the prosecutors that he has no evidence connecting Ehrlichman to the Watergate affair. But he has expressed concern that as late as mid-April, when he delivered to Ehrlichman further evidence against key Nixon aides, Ehrlichman relayed the information to Haldeman and Dean before giving it to Nixon.

In the sharpest confirmation yet of the hostile mood among old Nixon associates, Colson said that the main reason he had withheld his story from reporters was the fear that his former colleagues in response, would frame a case against him.

"I've been scared to death to tell my story for fear that Haldeman and Ehrlichman will contrive a story against me," Colson said, "or for fear that I'll be pitted one guy against another, or for fear that I'll get myself dragged in, or I'll get a prosecutor mad at me, or that the grand jury will think I'm playing games."

Last weekend, as McCord and Dean sharpened their attacks on Nixon, Colson changed his mind about talking. "Let's get the goddamn thing out on the record," he said.

COLSON, who saw himself as the President's political "eyes and ears" but was often described as the White House "hatchet man," took a private lie-detector test in April to support his contention that he had had nothing to do with the Watergate break-in.

He has remained, nonetheless, a central figure in informed speculation about the over-all Watergate affair. Last Thursday Archibald Cox, the special prosecutor in the case, remarked in an interview that he would be examining possible links between Colson and Donald H. Segretti, a "dirty tricks" agent of the Nixon re-election campaign whom Colson professes he never heard of until newspapers named him last October.

According to an article Saturday in the Washington Post, Colson allegedly suggested to John J. Caulfield, a former White House intelligence operative, that an office in the Brookings Institution be burglarized and fire-bombed.

The Post said that, according to allegations made to Watergate investigators by Caulfield and Dean, the target was an office then occupied by Morton H. Halperin, an associate of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg, who made the Pentagon papers available to the press. The

Three-front crisis
Sick economy plagues Nixon

By WILLIAM BROOM
National Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON — The wholesale price index, congressional Democrats and international money markets dealt heavy blows and posed a new challenge to the Nixon administration last week.

The developments elevated the inflation control problem to near crisis proportions. Members of Congress speculated more and more that the President's handling of the issue will provide a critical test of whether he can govern effectively in the wake of the Watergate scandal.

The new crisis arrived just as the President began to make headway in the Watergate scandal by restoring order to his house.

Appointments of ex-Defense Secretary Melvin Laird and Gen. Alexander Haig to top posts propped up the administration's stock on the hill.

BUT THAT gain, with its long-term promise of a White House once again on the move, was being overtaken by events.

Labor Department statistics released Thursday showed a 2.1 per cent rise during May in wholesale prices. They now stand 12.9 per cent higher than a year ago. Almost eight dollars is needed now to purchase what $7 brought then.

Wholesale food prices, the housewife's most sensitive thermometer of inflation fever, rose 4.1 per cent in May. Food prices are now 29.1 per cent higher than a year ago.

Those numbers and the overseas run on the dollar caused congressional Democrats to escalate demands for decisive and dramatic steps to halt inflation. Senate Democrats voted to bring up this week a proposal to freeze prices, wages, salaries, rents, dividends and interest rates for 90 days, during which the President would be directed to draft a comprehensive wage-price control program.

THE MOVE will be widely supported, and prospects for concurrence by the House of Representatives were rated as good.

Barring some dramatic presidential action in the meantime, Nixon would thus be confronted by the none too palatable choice of vetoing the legislation or bowing to a congressional initiative.

Most Nixon-watchers lean toward the hypothesis that the President will react to the congressional challenge with dramatic proposals to bring the price spiral under control.

Such a course would reassure the national that his political grip remains firms, and remind the world that his administration has not succumbed to Watergate sickness.

The signals from the White House, as usual, provided contradictory evidence of what direction the embattled President intends to move.

One version, published in Business Week Magazine, held that the White House continues to stagger under the Watergate revelations and is unable to act quickly or boldly despite strong prodding to do so by economic advisers.

One source said the President just "looked out the window" when Treasury Secretary Goerge P. Shultz and part time adviser John B. Connally proposed tough, anti-inflation control measures.

As usual, there was another White House source to provide the familiar version of a President and staff eagerly formulating a cure and prodding reluctant advisers to abandon their caution.

Under this theory the President was pictured as favoring stronger, more dramatic action to fight inflation than his key advisers—notably Shultz and economist Herbert Stein—have been willing to recommend.

"My impressiong is that he wants a bigger show," an official was quoted.

Administration sources said the basic problem the President has been struggling with is whether to resrot to the freeze that Congress is demanding or more rigorous controls on prices, or a combination of both.

A freeze would have the effect of hurting many workers whose earnings are lagging behind greatly increased consumer prices, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., pointed out. But Baker nevertheless joined Democrats in urging prompt action, because, he said fears arising from the Watergate scandal are unsettling the economy at home and the dollar abroad.

With Watergate and spouting prices interwined so closely, the President's actions this week could be critical in establishing the climate of confidence that will give him a fighting chance to function effectively on a whole range of other problems during the remainder of his term.

Colson attacks on Nixon behalf institution is an independent center for the study of public policy questions.

COLSON has denied the allegations, according to the Post. An associate of Colson acknowledged, the Post said, that Colson had been involved with other White House officials, probably in 1971, in discussions about how to remove certain material from the Brookings Institution.

In Grand Jury testimony E. Howard Hunt Jr., one of the Watergate conspirators, has reportedly said that Colson instructed him to write false diplomatic cables implicating President Kennedy in the 1963 assassination of President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam. Colson said that Hunt may have misunderstood some suggestion he had made.

Friday Colson testified before a Los Angeles grand jury about the burglary of the office of Ellsberg's former psychiatrist in September, 1971, a White House project that Colson financed with $5,000 in private funds, though he says he was not informed beforehand that the project would involve a crime.

The heart of his defense, both with the prosecutors and in a long, two-part interview in his law office here, is the contention that, in his surprised reaction to the first news of the Watergate break-in on June 17, 1972, he tried to remove himself from the case altogether, even to the point of refusing for five months to talk with his old friend Hunt.

"It was a mistake on my part, I now realize," Colson said. "But I thought the only way they could nail the President was to make the case that I had masterminded the Watergate. So I built a protective shield around myself. I wanted to be able to say I don't know the first Goddamn thing about it, because I thought that was the way to protect the President."

IN HINDSIGHT, Colson says, he also had ample reason to suspect that Mitchell, a personal enemy who was a rival for the President's attention, bore significant responsibility for the Watergate crime.

Colson says that, in the first reaction to the news of the burglary, Nixon denounced the entire management of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, which Mitchell had been directing since March 1, 1972.

Even toward the end of June, Colson recalls, neither he nor Nixon suspected Mitchell of complicity in the Watergate raid. But he said it puzzled him when Mitchell left the reelection committee on July 1, that the press generally accepted the explanation that a threat of divorce from Mitchell's wife, Martha, had forced the former attorney general to leave politics.

By August, Colson says, he privately concluded that the top campaign managers — Mitchell and his deputy, Jeb Stuart Magruder — knew more than they were admitting.

Mitchell appears to have harbored suspicions about Colson. Haldeman has stated, in a civil deposition made public Thursday, that Mitchell felt that the pressure on Mr. Magruder to field an agressive intelligence effort against the Democrats had come from Colson.

Colson, too, has told investigators that, when he first voiced his suspicions about Mitchell and Magruder last January, "Haldeman's rejoinder was: 'If John Mitchell goes down, he'll take you down with him. He's never liked you.' " He said the same thing about Magruder: "He's always been jealous of you."

Chotiner 'engineered' Nixon re-election, says ex-wife

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Newport Beach attorney Murray Chotiner, who engineered the career of Richard Milhous Nixon from an obscure Navy lieutenant to President of the United States, was the secret strategist behind Nixon's controversial 1972 re-election campaign, Chotiner's ex-wife contends.

However, says Mimi Chotiner in an interview in her plush Newport Beach home, she has no evidence linking her former husband to the Watergate scandal.

"REMEMBER, Murray's office was conveniently located one floor below Republican Headquarters at 1700 Pennsylvania Ave., across the street from the White House...

" ... and he lived next door to the Watergate ...

" ... and when he resigned as special counsel to the President in March of 1971, he didn't deny reports that he would become closely involved in Nixon's 1972 presidential re-election campaign — which he obviously did...

"AND JOHN MITCHELL, the official campaign manager, didn't know anything about politics — he never ran anyone even for precinct captain, much less president." the sharp-witted ex-Mrs. Chotiner says frankly.

Meanwhile, Chotiner, in private law practice in Washington, refused comment on "any statement she might make."

Her memories of her ex-husband and Nixon, which date back to when Nixon was a wide-eyed Navy lieutenant and Chotiner was the campaign strategist for then-Gov. Earl Warren and then-Sen. William Knowland, will be detailed in a book she is writing, entitled, "In Care of the White House."

Chotiner, she says, not only takes credit for starting Nixon's successful political career, but also for saving it twice.

The Nixon-Chotiner relationship, the ex-Mrs. Chotiner says, started when someone telephoned Chotiner, said there was a young Navy lieutenant from Whittier who wanted to run for Congress and asked if he had time to run the campaign.

When Chotiner saw Nixon, Mrs. Chotiner said, his only remark was: "Just stand there in your pretty uniform, keep your mouth shut and 'Ill get you elected to Congress."

"AND MURRAY did it," the ex-wife says, "but it was the dirtiest campaign in history.

"When I went through his scrap books — he keeps all his press clippings in leather-bound books — I was aghast, especially at the pink sheets itemizing alleged Communist affiliations of his opponent. I asked if he had really done these things..they were terrible. I said, 'No wonder they call you a hatchet man...a dirty politician', and he looked at me with that aren't-I-a-cute-bright-boy-look and said with a big grin and blinking eye, 'Just because I happened to pick pink stock."

BUT NIXON, the woman admits, learned more from Chotiner than how to win elections.

"Murray started teaching Nixon things like putting a legal pad on his knees and taking notes. To this day Chotiner and Nixon do the same things.

"Nixon picked up so many of Murray's mannerisms, it's frightening. Neither one can look you in the eye...their eyes are always looking over your shoulder and around the room...the eyes never quit darting and never rest on your face. They're always more concerned with what's going on around and who might be listening or what they should be hearing. It's subconscious, but it's ingrained.

"As far as politics is concerned," Mrs. Chotiner claims, "the pupil now has outmentored the mentor."

But it wasn't always so, she says, and at least twice when Nixon was on the road to oblivion, Chotiner stepped in to save him.

In 1952, following Nixon's famed "Checkers" speech — which, Mrs. Chotiner says, was written by her ex-husband — presidential nominee Dwight Eisenhower wired Nixon to come back to Virginia, apparently for a personal explanation of the slush fund.

"MURRAY SAID he was walking down the hall at 2 a.m. 'accidentally' — first of all, there's nothing 'accidental' about Murray. I imagine he was patrolling the hall because he knew Rosemary Wood, Nixon's personal secretary for many years, was with Nixon. But he said he happened to be in the hall at 2 a.m. when Rosemary came down the hall carrying a telegram.

"Nixon had got mad and had wired Ike that he was not about to be called on the carpet like some little kid, so Murray tore it up and told Rosemary, 'Don't you ever send a telegram without bringing it to me first.'

"ROSEMARY told me later she took the blame for tearing up the telegram until a few days later when Nixon realized it was the right thing to do. Then she told him Murray did it.

"You have to give the devil his due—if he hadn't torn up that telegram, it would have been the end of Nixon—Ike would have dumped him."

Several years later, she says, Chotiner's actions again saved the day for Nixon.

"MURRAY TOLD me that Bobby Kennedy asked him to come back to Washington to testify before the McClellan Committee. The case in point was that there were two Jewish gentlemen who were indicted for bilking the government on GI uniforms and they were Murray's clients.

"Murray said he was risking contempt of Congress, but he stalled for 10 days because that was the time that Eisenhower was dragging his feet in announcing that Nixon would be his running mate the second time. I think it was fellow-Republicans who sicced the committee into investigating Chotiner as Nixon's campaign manager and embarrass Nixon to the point that Eisenhower would have a good excuse to dump him because Eisenhower didn't want him any more the second time than he wanted him the first time.

"BUT MURRAY stalled long enough. When newspapermen asked him why he waited so long to appear before the committee he said he had to wait until his shirts got out of the laundry.

"His stall saved Nixon," she says frankly.

Her ex-husband's work in politics, she claims, always has been behind the scenes and he rarely admits connection.

"He always said he wasn't involved in the campaign when Nixon ran for governor, yet he was always on the phone to Finch (Robert Finch, Nixon's then- campaign manager) and in his secret drawer I found memos about the campaign with copies to Dick Nixon, Herb Klein, Finch and Kalmbach (Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's personal lawyer)."

IN THE drawer she also found the original paste-up of a brochure linking Pat Brown, then running against Nixon, with the CDC and left-wing causes. A note sent to H. R. Haldeman (Nixon's newly resigned special assistant) accompanied the brochure, indicating Chotiner didn't want to be second-guessed on it.

The 1968 campaign, Mrs. Chotiner said, was similar.

"Murray wasn't that welcome in the very beginning, but Nixon brings him back when there's an emergency. First he was in charge of the Southern states— then it was the 13 major states and the next thing you know he started sending me notes on a little pad that said, 'Murray Chotiner, Special Assistant to the Campaign Manager.' It finally ended up with him in charge of everything."

It was during that 1968 campaign, Mrs. Chotiner says, that her husband hired a 'spy' to keep Nixon's opponent—Hubert Humphrey—under surveillance.

I GOT SO sick and tired of that blasted spy," the trim brunette says with some amount of exasperation. "They were paying some Los Angeles newspaper- man $1,000 a week to follow Humphrey's trail and he would call at all hours to report on every move Humphrey made, including the times he went to the bathroom. He called right up to election night when we were in New York.

"This was Murray's idea. He hired him. He bragged to me that the Democrats have a whole book out on campaign strategy that they had taken verbatim from campaign strategy courses he had given—they even gave him some credit.

"BUT I KNOW this—Chotiner reported to Nixon on everything, even minor points. Murray never did anything without telling Nixon and the whole staff felt the same. They were too afraid of the 'old man', as Chotiner called him, to take any chances."

Chotiner's reward for his work in the '68 campaign, Mrs. Chotiner says, was a written offer from Nixon promising to make him chairman of the Republican National Committee. The promise, she says, was never kept, so to mollify him, two of Nixon's staffers—John Mitchell and Robert Finch —took him to dinner and offered him any one of three jobs.

THE THREE jobs included Postmaster General, Selective Service Director or chief of the Office of Civil Defense. Chotiner, she says, turned them down and finally in April of 1969 was given the job of General Counsel to the Special Representative for International Trade Negotiations. The job was a civil service post and carried a salary of $30,000 a year. However, Nixon quietly signed an executive order raising the salary to $36,000 and making it a presidential appointment.

He later was elevated to the post of White House special counsel—a post he resigned in March of 1971, presumably to devote full time to Nixon's campaign for re-election.

"THE STRANGE thing —and this is true of Nixon, too—is that the people whose campaign Murray has run will not speak to him. Warren, Knowland...all avoid him.

"Before Reagan (Gov. Ronald Reagan) ran for governor, he had three meetings with Murray asking his opinion and getting input from him—yet when we met him in public he looked right through us—it's as if they never knew him.

"Other than playing dirty politics," Mrs. Chotiner claims, "the only thing Murray has ever been charged with is influence peddling. This is why he was called before the McClennan Committee and this is why he has been named — along with Kalmbach — currently in a federal suit about milk price fixing."

1972 flood recalled

Rapid City 'rerising'

By TERRY WOSTER

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — It's been a year since freakish rainfalls burst a dam and brought death and destruction to the foothills here. The rebuilding still is going on and a residue of fear remains.

June 9, 1972 didn't seem very different from most spring days in the Black Hills National Forest. It started out clear and turned cloudy. Rapid City residents made plans for the arrival of the season's first tourists, expected to stop en route to Mt. Rushmore.

They didn't know that a freakish weather pattern was developing and would bring a normal year's rainfall in only a few hours.

That rainfall on the eastern slope of the Black Hills ran off into a canyon dam. The pressure crumbled the earthen walls and a five-foot wall of water roared through the center of the city along the path of Rapid Creek whose banks were a favorite spot for home builders and developers of trailer parks.

BY LATE afternoon there were signs of flooding deep in the Black Hills. Motorists were driving through water a foot deep and the storm clouds were moving east toward Rapid City. There already had been 10 to 14 inches of rain.

By 8:30 p.m., the rains had become torrential. Warnings went out to people living in the flood plain to evacuate, but many refused. There had been minor flooding along the creek many times.

The Canyon Lake Dam burst shortly before 11 p.m., sending a wall of water along Rapid Creek, ripping houses off foundations, pulling trees from the ground and turning them into battering rams, piling the hundreds of trailer homes into stacks like match boxes and killing 238 persons. About 2,000 families were homeless; property damage was estimated finally at $100 million.

One year later, Rapid City is being rebuilt.

THE CITY received a $48 million federal urban renewal grant and is purchasing some 1,100 parcels of property along the floodway.

"We've about reached the halfway mark in appraisals," said Leonard Swanson, the city's director of urban renewal. "We were slow getting started ... I expect that a year from now the process will be completed.

"When the project is completed, in about eight years, I think we will have a town that will be unique," Swanson said. "We'll have a park from one end of Rapid City to the other.

"THE CITY is currently experiencing a mild economic boom," he added. "There has been tremendous building going on, partly because of the need to recover from the flood, and partly in anticipation of future growth. From that standpoint, our tax structure looks pretty good."

Steve Byrnes, travel director for the South Dakota Highway Department, said signs were good for the 1973 tourist season.

"All the major indicators we use to determine and predict tourism in the state point to the best year ever," Byrnes said.

Motel operators say business is brisk early in the tourist season, despite fears of a gasoline shortage and possible adverse effects to the area from the 70-day occupation of historic Wounded Knee — 150 miles southwest of Rapid City — by militants.

CONTRACTS have been let and work scheduled on rebuilding the state fish hatchery destroyed by the rampaging water. Robert Hansen, state fisheries director for the Department of Game, Fish and Parks, said, "We are scheduled to complete the rebuilding in October and should be back in production next year."

The city still has many problems, however.

Rapid City still bears physical scars of the flood: hastily constructed roads and bridges, broken sidewalks and curbing, twisted fences and skeletons of wood and metal that once were homes.

Other scars are intangible.

A GROUP of mental health workers goes quietly about the process of locating persons whose state of mind was affected by the disaster, trying to help them return to normal life.

Garbage crisis
Cities smother in waste

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — America's cities are smothering in garbage and nearly half of them will run out of places to dump their trash within five years, a major study has found.

According to the study, entitled "Cities and the Nation's Disposal Crisis" by the National League of Cities and the United States Conference of Mayors, federal action is urgently needed to avoid strangulation of cities on their own solid wastes.

Cities, the study finds, are annually accumulating a trash heap of 250 million tons — 26 billion bottles, 48 billion cans, four million tons of plastic, 30 million tons of paper, 100 million tires, and other three million junk cars.

"And," warns Mayor John G. Hutchinson of Charleston, W. Va., who directed the three-month study, "what we are throwing away doesn't really go away at all — it has to be put some place."

Cities arg concerned because the wastefulness of Americans is reaching crisis proportions. While the amount of solid waste discarded by the population has doubled in the last 50 years, it has doubled in the cities in the last 20 years.

The future looks even bleaker, mainly because of the fascination with packaging, which the study predicts will have increased 63 per cent between 1958 and 1976. Ninety per cent of all packaging is tossed on the trash heap.

While mayors and city managers dealing with the problem insist they do not oppose environmental protection laws passed in recent years, they point out in the study that these very laws have intensified the problem of disposal.

"Federal policies and regulations aimed at protection of the nation's air and water," the report states, "have produced immense waste disposal consequences for cities. Both the increase of semiliguid sludges and the prohibition against incineration in major cities have raised significantly the land requirements for municipal disposal."

Not only do federal policies exacerbate the problem cities face in disposing of solid wastes, according to the study, but federal laws also effectively close off the best alternative solution — resource recovery.

ALTHOUGH an estimated 16 to 24 per cent of the nation's solid waste is potentially recoverable and reusable, city officials assert, they now spend $6 billion annually (only 2 per cent of which is provided by the federal government) to dispose of it in other ways although there exists in the trash heap metals alone worth $5 billion if they were recovered and reused, they say.

"The markets for recycled materials," the study reports, "are severely limited due to federal policies which favor the use of virgin materials and discourage, even penalize, the use of recycled materials."

Such policies include depletion allowances for extractors of natural materials, a capital gains tax structure that favors miners, and transportation freight rates that discriminate against shipment of scrap materials, the report says.

"IT IS NOT the choice of cities that only 1 per cent of municipal wastes are recycled," city officials say. "It is an aggregate choice compelled by federal policies, limited markets and consumer preferences. And for a nation facing inevitable resource scarcity, it is highly significant that current federal policy shows no awareness of the relationship between the generation and disposal of solid wastes and the depletion of national resources."

The cities are calling for federal policies that would promote experimentation — like New York City's consideration of a plan to burn waste to generate electrical power — and promote recycling.

Among the reports recommendations are the following:

— Adjustment of discriminatory freight rates, depletion allowances and tax incentives that favor wirgin materials over recycled resources.

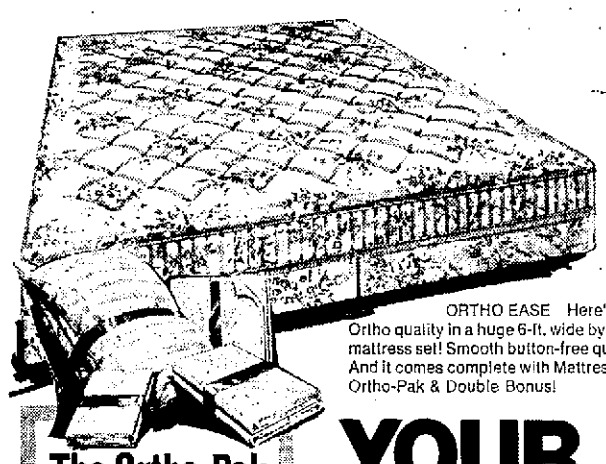

— Provision of below market interest rate loans from the federal government for the construction of solid waste management and resource recovery facilities at the local level.

— Government practices that would favor the purchase of recyclable or reusable materials to encourage their use on a national level.

— Removal of interstate and intrastate barriers to the transportation of solid wastes to encourage multi-jurisdictional disposal programs.

"This report," the league and conference pointed out in conclusion, "is printed on recycled paper."

CONSUMER NOTES

Recipes for infant care

A new and completely revised edition of "Infant Care," a 72-page booklet by the Children's Bureau, Office of Child Development of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, contains recipes for child care.

The booklet offers basic information of everything from handling the infant to caring for it when it's sick.

It discusses feeding, the "difficult" baby, normal rates of growth and development, common problems and worries of new parents, and emergency first aid measures.

Copies of "Infant Care" are 75 cents and are available from Consumer Product Information, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Mobile Home owners protection

Owners of mobile homes are protected under Assembly Bill 1158 against needless repair expense, the Orange County Office of Consumer Affairs reports.

The new law provides a warranty for one year, requiring the manufacturer as well as the dealer to take appropriate corrective measures, at the site of the mobile home, in instances of substantial defects in materials and workmanship.

The only requirement is the consumer give written notice of the defect not later than one year and 10 days after delivery of the new mobile home.

Additional information regarding Assembly Bill 1158 may be obtained from the OC Office of Consumer Affairs, 511 N. Sycamore Ave., Santa Ana.

Who's looking out for whom?

John T. Kehoe, director of the state department, of Consumer Affairs at the Public Utilities Commission's hearings on household goods carriers recently in Sacramento, said presently neither the legislative approach nor industry action reflects true consumer concern or interest.

"We are disturbed by the moving industry's slowness in reacting to obvious improper practices and the inability to self-regulate those members who continue to misuse public confidence."

The director further stated that the legislative approach, Assembly Bill 930, promises no real relief for the consumer from deceptive practices by those perpetrating fraud.

"It does seem to penalize the majority of the industry who are conscientiously serving the public and thus jeopardizes the consumers' basic need for service. . . the proposed action of the Legislature (is) unresponsive to the real issues," Kehoe said.

Tips on Charter Flights

Sometimes the most obvious things are the ones we forget first—because, they're so obvious.

A few tips on how to avoid fly-by-night promoters of charter flights this summer is to check out the obvious questions first.

The State Bureau of Consumer Affairs suggests:

—Find out the full price of the charter, including all features included in the price. For example, some charter flights don't include meals and you may find yourself winging over the North Pole, landing in Frankfurt 13 hours after take off—hungry.

—Check out the name of the airline carrying the charter and the equipment used. In California, travel promoters are required by regulations imposed by the Bureau of Consumer Affairs earlier this year to file with the Department the name and address of the air or sea carrier with whom the travel promoter has contracted, as well as the location of the trust or name of the bonding company holding the bond.

—Remember to ask for the both the airport of origin and the airport of arrival.

—Also, remember to ask for the date of travel in both directions, and the charter contract number.

Bridle paths?

Rich debate ways to use share funds

New York Times Service

REDDING, Conn. — Tennis courts, bridle paths and a dog pound are among the proposals being seriously debated by the residents of this affluent rural township as it decides how to spend $69,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds before the end of the month.

It is generally acknowledged by the 3,700 adults in this Fairfield County town of Rolling Hills, Revolutionary War-era houses and trim white fences that revenue sharing — the Nixon administration's program of returning tax dollars to cities and towns — is not as badly needed here as in Danbury to the north, or in Norwalk to the south, or in hundreds of localities across the country where the debate is often a hard choice between sewage-treatment plants or slum-clearance projects.

But when a questionnaire went out to citizens recently asking for ideas on how to spend the bonanza, a flurry of suggestions on improving the amenities of life here came back.

Included were requests that a bridle path be cut for the horse owners who enjoy a morning ride before driving to executive jobs in New York, Greenwich, Danbury and Stamford; tennis courts for their weekends, the restoration of historic buildings, the purchase of open land for conservation and improvements in the town's new park.

"The crying need here is tennis courts," said Jesse B. Sanford, the first selectman, or mayor. "Every other town has tennis courts and our big need now is tennis courts. And we need a dog pound. We've been boarding the dogs in commercial kennels around here."

"Some people want to spend it on buying more open land for the town," Sanford said. "But hell, Redding already has more damned open space than any town in Fairfield County."

"I can't think of any real problems we have here," said James Edwards, chairman of the town's Board of Finance. "This is a beautiful place."

Nixon medical plans called 'step backward'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A Vanderbilt Medical University officials Saturday branded President Nixon's proposed 1974 health budget a "giant step backward."

Dr. John E. Chapman, acting vice chancellor for medical affairs, said the proposed budget will necessitate cutbacks in medical education, biomedical research and health care across the nation.

"The federal cutbacks are severe and serious, and medical education and health care will suffer if this becomes law unless other support can be found," Chapman said.

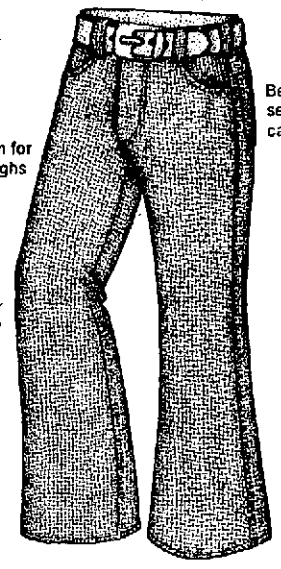

Nixon is asking for 1500 million less in 1974 for medical schools than sought in his 1973 budget.

Cabinet-level proposal

New energy agency

By ROBERTA HORNIG
Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration is expected to announce this week a major reorganization plan that would create a new Cabinet-level Department of Energy and Natural Resources and would transform the Atmoic Energy Commission into a new Energy Research and Development Administration.

Administration sources reported that the plan, designed to deal partially with emerging energy problems, involves:

— A new Department of Energy and Natural Resources, which would replace the present Interior Department but would include most of Interior's present functions. The new department would also absorb: the Forest Service from the Agriculture Department; the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration from the Commerce Department; portions of the United States Army Corps of Engineers from the Defense Department and the Office of Pipeline Safety from the Department of Transportation.

EXCLUSIVE

— A new Energy Research and Development Administration, which in effect would be an upgrading of the AEC. The new agency would take over research and development functions from the AEC as well as all energy-related research now going on in the Interior Department, such as coal research being carried out by the Bureau of Mines.

— A new regulatory commission, which would handle portions of AEC's responsibilities, principally its licensing and safety standard roles.

The activities in the three new organizations would be coordinated by an "energy czar" in the White House.

The reorganization proposal, expected to be announced in midweek, would require approval by Congress.

THE PLAN was spearheaded by Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of

ROY L. ASH

Management and Budget, who had worked on other governmental reorganization plans proposed by the White House.

The proposed new department would be an expansion of the Department of Natural Resources the administration had formally proposed in 1971. The present Interior Department has the leading responsibility on energy matters and natural resources.

For example, the Interior Department leases offshore lands for oil drilling, and is expected to announce other energy projects such as coal mining, oil shale and geothermal development on land it manages.

THE PROPOSED new Energy Research and Development Administration would be scientifically oriented and would be concerned with developing new sources of energy, such as converting coal into gas and more exotic projects such as the use of solar energy.

OEO lobbies against itself

Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — Howard Phillips, acting director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, has set up a political speech-writing shop in the anti-poverty agency's Office of Program Review, using employes whose normal job is to review grants to the poor. The speeches attack the entire range of OEO programs.

The speeches frequently cite specific community agencies which have wasted funds in salaries for workers who did little or nothing for the agency's mission.

Scott Tyler, who serves as public information officer for the Office of Inspection, asked whether using staff who usually prepare antipoverty grants to write political speeches was not, in itself, a waste of antipoverty funds, said, "I have no comment."

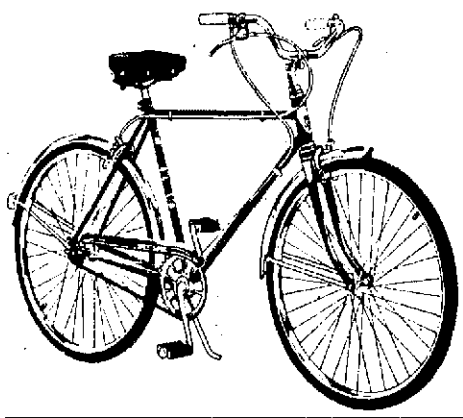

The speeches were first brought to light by Susanne F. Horton, a typist at the agency, who has submitted an affidavit and a selection of speeches whcih she says she typed to the U.S. District Court here, which recently ordered Phillips to stop interfering with the normal flow of antipoverty funds.

Miss Horton said she also reported the matter to representatives of her union, the American Federation of Government Employes.

The union sent a selection of the speeches to the President's Office of Management and Budget. Shortly afterwards, Miss Horton said she was abruptly transferred to another office.

Federal raises in offing

Big hikes eyed for top levels

By RONALD SARRO
Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — A special federal salary commission reportedly is "thinking in terms" of recommending that the salaries of senators and congressmen be increased to $55,000 a year effective in January.

Comparable salary increases are expected to be recommended for cabinet members and their subordinates, Supreme Court justices and other federal judges, and other top officials of the three branches of government.

Both Capitol Hill and administration sources expect such recommendations to be included in the report of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries which is to be submitted to President Nixon in three weeks.

Members of the commission, headed by a management consultant, Arch A. Patton of Washington and Bermuda, refused to comment on the contents of their report, which is currently in a final drafting stage.

EXCLUSIVE

A HIKE in congressional salaries to $55,000 would be a 29.4 per cent increase over the $42,500 members have been paid since a 41 per cent raise in January, 1969.

Under a 1967 law establishing the commission, the President can reduce the recommended salary increases. In 1968, the first such commission recommended congressional salaries of $50,000. But President Johnson cut that back to $42,500.

The President submits the salary recommendations when he presents his budget to Capitol Hill in January. The proposals would take effect within 30 days unless either house or Congress adopted a resolution disapproving all or any of them.

The commission is supposed to be named every four years, but the current one is a year behind because of delays in appointment of its members by the President and the top officers of the Supreme Court, Senate and House.

THIS situation will give congress a political dilemma in January, since it will be confronted with what will probably be a recommendation for a sizable salary increase in a congressional election year.

Meantime, a host of bureaucrats in top jobs are anxious for Congress to raise their salaries and those of top administration officials because their current levels have placed a $36,000 ceiling on pay for civil service ratings GS 16, 17 and 18.

IF THE salary increases should be rejected in January, they reason, it would be four more years before another special commission was appointed and new rates submitted to Congress by the President.

The situation has caused some moves, although not very forceful yet, to change the law on salaries. One group would have Congress return to the pre-commission practice of approving its own salary increases, so that the political timing can be carefully arranged.

Another group would require the House and Senate to vote affirmatively to accept the raises before they could become effective. The latest to propose such a procedure is Rep. Donald G. Brotzman, R-Colo., who says taxpayers have a right to know where members stand on congressional pay raises.

The growth of congressional paychecks has been accelerating more rapidly in recent years. In 1935, the pay was $10,000.

Some real 'going, going, gone' ideas

BILL MONT, who lives at 4861 Lincoln Ave., Cypress, has run an employment agency, is a fund-raiser for women's clubs, owns an island and is a nut about auctions.

"They're really exciting," he said.

"What?" I asked. "Women's clubs?"

"No, auctions. You never know what you're going to pick up at an auction."

It was at an auction that he picked up the island he owns in his homeland, Nova Scotia, the Canadian province that juts out into the Atlantic like a wharf lying parallel to the coasts of Maine and New Brunswick.

"Maybe this summer I'll go back to Devil's Island—that's the name of my island—and start digging for the treasure," Mont said.

The treasure? "Yeh, Captain Kidd's treasure is supposed to be buried there."

At that moment, though, Bill Mont was more interested in telling me about Mark Spitz's swim trunks and other unusual items he'd acquired when, this past week, he once again succumbed to the tantalizing lure of the "going, going, gone" craze.

IT WAS AT the Celebrity Fair, a Help the Animals benefit staged by Doris Day and other movie greats at Burbank Studios, Burbank.

"The place was loaded with movie stars," Mont said. "There were a lot of events, but I couldn't pull myself away from the auction. They sold a lot of personal items donated by movie and TV personalities. Some other interesting things, too."

Like what? "Like lunch with George Putnam or Doris Day's mother, or putting on a Mickey Mouse costume and marching around in the Disneyland Parade.

"Also, they sold Elvis Presley's scarf, Loren Green's 'Bonanza' cowboy hat and George Putnam's sterling silver cufflinks—the ones shaped like a mike."

So what did Mont buy?

"Besides Mark Spitz's swim trunks, I picked up David Cassidy's guitar pick and, best of all, a beautiful silver tray that had belonged to Zsa Zsa Gabor. She's my favorite.

"I figure this item should be of special interest to people in Long Beach," Mont surmissed. "It's inscribed, 'ZSA ZSA GABOR—Distinguished Citizen's Award. From the Women's Division, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, Jan. 28, 1967."

I DO, indeed, find that interesting. I'm a charter member of the C of C Women's Division and Zsa Zsa's silver tray is one item I'd have bid on. Maybe the Women's Division could have recycled it.

Also, with the gasoline shortage, I would have been interested in Mary Poppins' umbrella if it had been for sale.

But I think chairman Doris Day missed a real bet by not auctioning off Rock Hudson's pushbutton bachelor pad—the one in their hit movie, "Pillow Talk."

Remember the layout? I'll never forget Doris' expression when she, an interior decorator, went over to redo Rock's apartment and started activating all those pushbuttons which simultaneously turned the music up, the lights down and unfolded a hideaway bed.

AND THAT reminds me of a couple unique features I didn't have space to tell you in Thursday's column about developer William T. Dawson's Marina-Pacifica waterfront condominiums.

Prospective buyers who view floor plans at the MP sales pavilion, 6262 Pacific Coast Hwy., are pretty amazed at some of their pushbutton ideas.

Like in the studio homes. You just press a button and, shades of "Pillow Talk," a queen-size bed appears in the sunken living room area, emerging from under the raised floor of the dining room. Touch another button and the bed disappears. Outasite!

And for those who choose condominiums with loft bedrooms, an MP designer has come up with a remote control device in the boudoir that closes the living room drapes without a guy having to stumble downstairs in his skivvies.

But the most exciting feature, as I've said before, is that the marine community development, when its intricate system of man-made waterways is completed, will "pull the plug on the Pacific Ocean."

That great phrase, by the way, is not original with me—it's an MP promotional slogan dreamed up by Norm Danoff, marketing director for Marina-Pacifica.

Supervisor James Hayes

Serve mankind, LBSU grads told

By GEORGE LAINE
Staff Writer

Supervisor James Hayes Saturday warned graduating seniors at Long Beach State University to commit themselves, not to their chosen professions but to making their world a better place in which to live.

The Fourth District supervisor, who was singled out for two awards from the university, told approximately 1,000 graduates and an additional 1,500 family and friends that the 70s have ushered in a new era for college graduates.

"The educated person of the past did nothing to correct problems," Hayes said, "because it would have been none of his or her business.

"The role of the educated person of today must reach beyond his or her discipline. With pollution of the air, of water and of land as a monster growing around us, educated persons must band their intelligences and energies together in order to behead this monster.

"It means total involvement in the world around you, without succumbing to the old adage of 'Let someone else worry about that'."

Hayes chided those who are engaged in "bad-mouthing, idle curiosity or passive understanding" as not responsive to the needs of the 70s and little more than "finger-pointing critics."

Instead, Hayes urged the graduates, today's educated person must widely expand his horizons to insure constructive participation in all governmental problems.

Included, Hayes said, are all the throny issues facing governmental agencies— "from taxation reforms to the elimination of discrimination, from how to use and preserve our land and beaches to how to develop workable child care and lunch programs."

Hayes entered an attack on partisan politics when he told the graduates of "incompetent people" elected only because they wore the Democrat or Republican label in districts largely peopled by those parties. Hayes said that most politicians called such elected representatives "accidents of democracy" but added that it wasn't to be considered a joke.

Hayes was singled out for a plaque from the LBSU School of Letters and Sciences for his services to the university, with the award presented by Dean Jerome Manheim.

JAMES HAYES

Pilot program

Barrio kids improve in school test

By MIKE JEFF
Staff Writer

Eight months ago a quiet revolution began in the Norwalk-La Mirada school district. At its core, its leader said, is the simple idea of treating Mexican-American high school students "as people, not robots."

Its aim is to help students from the barrios improve their school performance, cut absences and stay in school.

The federally-funded program is experimental. Project Director Ben Luna says the Title III project (named for the section of a law which provides the money) is the only one like it in the state.

However, the gains made by the Title III program mean it may set a model for school districts throughout the Southwest.

IN EVERY area, Luna says, the program met or exceeded its goals.

Irv Marks, research analyst for Title III, provided these facts:

—Of the 225 Title III students and 225 control group students (all ninth and tenth graders), 59 per cent of the control group students dropped out of school, compared to only 18 per cent of the Title III group.

Marks points out "these kids were picked originally because they were potential dropouts."

—In a "self-image" test, Title III students showed an average gain of 131.2 points (for a total 685.2 out of the possible 740 points). Those in the control group showed an average loss of 8.1 points.

—In reading, where, Marks said, "a five month gain (in reading level) would be significant," Title III students gained eight months.

By contrast, control group students lost an average of 16 months. When a kid loses that much reading ability in one school year, "it means he's really been turned off," Marks says.

The program for Title III students includes three hours of special, personal instruction in math, reading and social studies each day, plus three hours of regular classes with other students.

As impressive as the program's statistics are, Luna takes greatest satisfaction from the "human" gains that doesn't show in statistics.

"This is the look of pride on the faces of kids this week when they got awards for outstanding improvement at a Title III banquet. This is the first time in their lives they've gotten any recognition, he says.

WESTERN AIRLINES PRESIDENT ART KELLY
. . . Thinks He Has Formula for the 'O-O-Only Way to Fly' —Staff Photo

Western DC10 to Hawaii — still the only way to fly

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

The champagne-sipping bird is back and this year he's touting a Long Beach-built space ship as "The o-o-only way to fly!"

Western Airlines, identified through copyrights and registered trademarks with both the bibulous bird and the bubbly beverage, has adopted "Space Ship" as the marketing motif for the McDonnell Douglas DC10, its first wide-body transport.

Western will be the first U.S. carrier to fly the DC10 between Los Angeles and Honolulu when it inaugurates service with the wide-cabin trijet on Saturday. The return trip to Los Angeles the same day will continue on to Minneapolis-St. Paul to initiate Western wide-body service on that route.

The "Space Ship" designation is the latest of the slogans coined by the airline to promote special services. Two sturdy survivors of previous sales campaigns are the bird symbol and his catchy message, recently revived after a year or so vacation from billboards and other advertising media, and the "Champagne Airline", in recognition of Western's policy of free sparkling libations for all aboard of legal age.

The new catch-phrase would seem to indicate that Western management is breathing a collective sigh of relief that they finally have closed a wide-body service gap after three years of competing on mainland-Hawaii routes with carriers operating the Boeing 747 jumbo jet.

Not so, according to Arthur F. Kelly, Western's genial new president. Kelly moved up the ladder from executive vice president in January when former president J. Judson Taylor became a vice chairman of the company.

"We didn't buy the DC10 simply because it is a wide-body aircraft," Kelly said in his jumbo-scaled office overlooking Century Boulevard at Los Angeles International Airport. "We need the capacity it can provide on our prime flights.

"We don't intend to cut back any schedules because of the additional seats of the DC10. It gives us the capacity we need now in major markets—Hawaii, Mexico, Minneapolis-St. Paul - and eventually Alaska."

Kelly pointed out that Western's original $72 million order for four DC10s from Douglas Aircraft Co. has been increased by 50 per cent, with delivery of two more of the wide-cabin trijets scheduled for the spring of 1974 and 1975 from the Long Beach assembly line.

"But backing this up is another order for 20 more Boeing 727 stretch-models, " he said. "We want a balanced fleet with the capacity to meet all the demands on our route system. We always have believed that flight frequency is a very important factor of service. I'm going to continue that policy and I'm going to put the chassis of the DC10 on the schedules that justify it."

But still a people-to-people program

Peace Corps has changed with times

By TOM WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Peace Corps! Is it still going?

It sure is, and Chuck Shackelton will jump right in front of the organization's 6,000 volunteers to tell you so.

CHUCK SHACKELTON
. . . 'Corps Still Alive'

Shackelton, who first joined Peace Corps in 1965, has just finished nearly eight years with the agency in May. During that time he served variously as a volunteer, regional director and training officer in the Philippines, Korea and Washington.

"Contrary to what many people think, the Peace Corps is still going strong. It is true that the novelty is gone and Peace Corps doesn't capture headlines like it used to, but there are still programs in over 60 countries and Peace Corps officials expect to initiate another three to five programs in the next six months.

"Congress has appropriated another $80 million for the year's operations so things look bright," Shackelton said.

The 31-year-old former Peace Corps staffer graduated from Long Beach Poly High School, then attended University of Redlands where he received his masters in education before becoming a volunteer.

Since its inception in 1961 Peace Corps has undergone many changes. In 1971 it was merged with Vista (Volunteers in Service to America) and other volunteer agencies under an umbrella organization called Action.

Shackelton has some interesting first-hand observations about the changing face of Peace Corps.

"Today's volunteers seem a bit more self-centered than we were when I first entered. Maybe they're just a little more practical, but they seem more intent on getting something out of the program. But I don't see anything particularly wrong with that attitude," he said.

Shackelton explained that the 12-year-old agency has always been a "people to people program" but he points out that Peace Corps is nothing if not innovative.

The emphasis on psychological testing of volunteers is another area where Peace Corps has adjusted itself. Until recently, according to Shackelton, much of the training of volunteers addressed itself to psychological tests, personality profiles, and projections of a volunteer's success in the field.

"The psychological slant has been de-emphasized. We have found that volunteers come into training very high on serving. But by the time they had gone through all the processing, testing and red tape, they were turned off. Now training programs concentrate on giving volunteers the information he needs to perform well in the field," he said.

During the past eight years the Peace Corps has grown and so has Shackelton.

He has been married for 2 ½ years to his beautiful Philippine wife Mei Ling. They and their nine-month-old baby Don Charles are staying with his parents in Long Beach, while he searches for another job in social service, local government or college administration.

Of his time as an American altruist?

"Most volunteers feel they have taken more from their experience than they gave. I know I grew a lot. The gift is in human relations. The friendships I've made, and the experiences I've had — that's where Peace Corps as a people to people thing— has its impact. And that's what I'll remember about ," he said.

$10,000 to find jobs for teen-agers

An urgent plea for financial support from business leaders and private citizens has been issued by the Long Beach Community Improvement League, which is attempting to raise $10,000 to provide summer jobs for underprivileged youths.

Willie E. Martin, executive director of the league, said his organization hoped to provide 400 summer jobs for disadvantaged youngsters between the ages of 14 and 18.

Though Martin said the total cost of the program would be about $40,000, he added that the Community Improvement League (CIL) is seeking funding for 300 of the jobs through various organizations.

"But we still need about $10,000 to finance a comprehensive job program last summer but could provide only 100 jobs. "We realized that 100 slots did not even make a dent in the needs of the community," he added.

"To be in a position of having to pass over some youngsters for other youngsters is simply not an ideal situation for a program of this type," said the director.

Jimmie Swan, a CIL representative, explained that the program is aimed at "the hard-core youngsters in terms of need."

Swan said the CIL hoped to "absorb the problem youths in the schools, put them in positions where they will learn responsibility and return to school in the fall with a better awareness of their citizen roles in the community."

Martin said those involved in the program would be paid $1.65 an hour and be assigned to jobs as child care aids, clerical aids, gardener aids, community aids, recreational aids or nutritional aids.

In addition, each youth will receive 18 hours of counseling included.

Swan added, "if maybe nine of 10 businesses would each donate $1,000, we'd have the $10,000; or if 20 organizations or businesses donate $500 each, we'd have the money for those 100 jobs."

The director said donations hb the program should be mailed to the Long Beach Community Improvement League, Summer Employment Program for Youth, 555 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Suite 213.

He added that checks, made payable to the Community Improvement League, would be "gratefully" accepted from anyone.

LBCC registration for summer starting

Registration for more than 400 summer classes at Long Beach City College will begin Thursday at the Liberal Arts Campus, 4901 East Carson St., and the Business and Technology Campus, 1305 East Pacific Coast Highway.

The priority registration process to reduce enrollment-line waiting requires new students to obtain appointments to register at either campus in the period ending June 13.

Open to adults with or without high school diplomas and high school graduates younger than 18 years, the classes are tuition-free.

The first summer session for day classes will be held June 18 to July 25. The second summer session for day classes begins July 26 and ends August 31. Evening classes will be presented June 18 to August 10.

Class schedules are available free at the college and at public libraries in Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill.

President Nixon's duty

The central issue in the Watergate case is one that will be addressed in time by the Senate investigating committee. It is one that should be addressed now by the President.

The issue is the extent of the President's involvement in the illegal activities of Watergate and in the ensuing coverup.

Few think it likely that the President specifically ordered the Watergate burglary and other criminal acts. He has assured the nation that he did not. If that statement can be accepted, much else touching the President's involvement in the affair remains murky.

ONLY THE PRESIDENT can clear these waters.

He has suggested that he will not do so now because his own information is "fragmentary and contradictory," because he does not wish to prejudice the case against possible defendants, and because presidential disclosures might endanger national security.

Unfortunately, his credibility and his administration are damaged by silence broken only by presidential statements that are themselves fragmentary, if not contradictory.

The President must shed his reluctance to speak. He must come forward and tell the whole story.

OF COURSE he has only fragmentary and contradictory information about the conversations and activities of others. But he can speak with authority of his own conversations and directives.

He need not present his conclusions as to the guilt of others. He need only speak of what he said to others and what they said to him. No rule of justice requires that all information be kept secret until a trial.

THE QUESTION OF national security is vexing. It is not insoluble.

President Nixon has assured the nation that he intends to take congressional leaders of both parties into his councils and work closely with them. Let him take a few senior leaders into his confidence on Watergate.

Such men as Senators Sam Ervin, Howard Baker, Barry Goldwater and Mike Mansfield can be trusted with national security secrets. They are patriots, too.

If they are satisfied that national security requires that some information relative to Watergate be kept secret, let them tell the nation of that. They will be believed. The President will then be believed as well.

The President has the right to keep silent, but he has the duty to speak.

AMERICA HAS THE right to hold its President to a higher duty than it would expect of the ordinary citizen whose activities have come into question.

If the truth is so embarrassing that the President cannot speak it and sustain public confidence, let him speak it and take the consequences. If the truth is not that embarrassing, let him speak it, restore his credibility and get on with the business of government.

Nixon's inflation crisis deepens

Rowland Evans

Inside Report

Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The paralyzing impact of the Watergate crisis on the Nixon administration has become dangerously clear in the on-again, off-again indecision over whether to tighten up the disastrous Phase 3 anti-inflation program, now once more under top-level review at the White House.

Time and again in the past five weeks, outside economic advisers have been instructed by presidential agents to prepare various estimates, both economic and political, on how to handle the worst inflation in this century. In each case, they were told at the last minute action would be delayed.

True, a decision for a new gas tax and tougher price controls, so often delayed by a distracted Mr. Nixon, could be announced at any moment. But even so, the valuable time already lost has eroded consumer confidence in Mr. Nixon and brought White House adviser John B. Connally nearly to the point of quitting.

SO ISOLATED has President Nixon become from the workaday business of the economy and his failing anti-inflation program that even the illustrious Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has been unable to arrange a meeting between Mr. Nixon and Rep. Wilbur Mills.

Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, finally took the floor of the House to lay out publicly what he normally would have given the President in confidence: a new anti-inflation program pegged to a price freeze.

Mr. Nixon's refusal to see Mills on the rising crisis of the economy is entirely consistent with other presidential omissions apparently forced on him by White House preoccupation with the Watergate scandal.

THUS, BEFORE leaving the country for his summit meeting in Iceland, Mr. Nixon gave his top economic advisers carte blanche to come up with a hard anti-inflation plan for the President's study — and presumed approval — when he returned. Included among the advisers was the President's new part-time consultant, John B. Connally.

With Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, presiding, this presidentially ordered meeting duly took place last Thursday (May 31). Sitting in for Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz was deputy secretary William E. Simon, the former Wall Street investment banker. Unlike laissez-faire Shultz, always a hater of price controls, Simon is an activist with a shrewd understanding of the politics as well as the economics of inflation.

But on returning from Iceland, Mr. Nixon once again did nothing — except to call another top-level meeting at the White House, this one last Monday. Still unwilling to order a tightening-up of Phase 3 following the Monday meeting, the President ordered that yet another session be held Tuesday, with himself present.

AT THIS WRITING Mr. Nixon's administration appears to be trapped in a stalemate making it impossible to break the vicious cycle of inflation. What makes this agonizing for political activists like Connally is irrefutable evidence that lack of voter confidence in Mr. Nixon today derives from inflation as much as Watergate.

Consumer pollster Albert Sindlinger, whose surveys are avidly studied in the White House Oval office, recently reported to his clients that consumer confidence reached "recession levels" by the end of May — the first time it struck bottom in 19 months. The reason: inflation and the fear that Mr. Nixon was not doing enough to stop it.

The White House is well aware that Sindlinger's surveys, plus others, show that an overwhelming ratio of voters, up to 78 per cent, now insist on a return to some form of Phase 1 or Phase 2 anti-inflation controls program. Whatever the merits of economic conflicts between the Shultz-Stein team, and almost every other economic voice Mr. Nixon hears, the political case for immediate presidential action is beyond dispute.

MORE THAN anyone else, Connally, the master politician, understands that fact. Yet, even Connally's vaunted persuasive talents seem humbled by the President's apparent inability to make up his mind. As a result, Connally is known to be deeply disillusioned.

Simon, Connally, Burns, Mills and a vast majority of both parties in Congress now hope a break may come. But so much time has been lost to the Watergate crisis that it may be too late to reverse the anti-Nixon consumer tide brought on by runaway inflation.

John Dean's education

WASHINGTON, D.C.—As late as March 1, John Wesley Dean III believed President Nixon or Special Assistant John D. Ehrlichman effectively could bar a former White House lawyer from testifying about information he received while counseling with the President.

Dean was working up to two months ago to convince another former White House aide that the traditional client-lawyer relationship and the principle of executive privilege would keep the aide from testifying on communications with the President and other White House staff members.

Now John Dean himself is the Watergate witness most feared by the

Clark Mollenhoff

President for what he may testify about the inner workings of the White House.

President Nixon enunciated his controversial policy on expanded executive privilege in March. It isn't clear at this stage whether that policy memo was the brain child of John Dean, who wished to use it to protect himself from appearance before the federal grand jury and the congressional committees, or whether it was imposed on him by President Nixon and Ehrlichman.

DEAN'S PROBLEM in the last week in February and through the first week in March was two-fold:

1. President Nixon had promised the press a new memorandum on executive privilege because fresh problems had arisen in connection with the cost-overrun case involving Air Force cost analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the nomination of L. Patrick Gray III as permanent FBI director and a threatened Watergate probe.

2. As former special counsel to the President, I said I wouldn't be bound by any executive privilege policy and would testify in Fitzgerald's hearing before the Civil Service Commission is the White House did not take steps to correct the injustice to Fitzgerald. I was willing to testify on information gathered while in the White House.

In the beginning, Dean was unfamiliar with the subject of executive privilege, had not researched the law and case histories and was operating from a background limited largely to John Ehrlichman's statements on the subject and in the atmosphere of obsessive secrecy created by White House Chief of Staff H.R. "Bob" Haldeman.

Ehrlichman's thesis was that White House lawyers had a double bar to disclosure of information they learned as White House staff members.

"We've got you locked in two ways—with the lawyer-client privilege and the executive privilege," Ehrlichman cautioned White House lawyers in 1969 and 1970.

As of the last week of February, John Dean still hadn't examined how the President or others in the White House hoped to bar my testimony before a Civil Service Commission hearing in the Fitzgerald case.

However, Dean warned me: "I hope that you are taking into account the lawyer-client privilege that raises some serious ethical questions with regard to your testimony on any information you received as a White House staff member.

I informed him that I had researched the executive privilege problem thoroughly and was unaware of any manner in which the lawyer-client privilege would apply to information I had obtained on the Fitzgerald case while I was on the White House staff.

"There is nothing that you could do or that the President could do to bar me from giving testimony on Fitzgerald's behalf, if the hearing examiner will permit me to testify," I advised Dean.

I ALSO NOTED that I had written a book on executive privilege that he could use as a starting point in his research.

Dean hurriedly noted that he was just embarking on his research and didn't pretend that he had any depth understanding of the subject.

John Dean went on to complete the presidential memorandum on executive privilege that claimed an immunity from testimony for all current and former White House staff members and essentially all officials of the executive branch.

President Nixon in his March 2, 1973, press conference adopted this Ehrlichman thesis and claimed Dean was covered "by a double privilege" as counsel to the President. The absurdity of that position made President Nixon and the White House the subject of ridicule by lawyers, congressional leaders of both parties and editorial writers.

Letters to the editor

Widow's choice

EDITOR:

Mrs. Smith, 65, has just lost her husband. She is alone and now has difficult and heart-breaking decisions to make. Immediately.

Shall she turn to an established undertaker for a traditional service and burial — or should she think modern and have her beloved husband's remains (Oops! I should have said "body") summarily disposed of in the most simple and realistic manner available?

A hot fire and a practical scattering of ashes over the sea. What could be easier and less expensive? All that is left then is to get rid of her late husband's pictures and personal belongings and anything that might invoke his memory — and thus obliterate him for all time from her life and her recollection.

The catch is that things are not always that simple, for people are rarely that simple. Those who believe in the perpetuity of the human soul may not be satisfied with such a simplistic and expeditious way of consigning a loved one to eternity.

Certainly the above-described method should be available to those who want it, but to imply that in this age of "enlightenment" this is by far the best way to go is indefensible.

It is understandable that the California Funeral Directors Association would resist the new method. Competition forces many undertakers to demonstrate considerable business acumen. Some of them may be downright deceptive and opportunistic. Comprehensive reforms may be needed.

I am in no way connected with the "business of handling the dead," but I am convinced that there are undertakers who are sincerely interested in the feelings of their clients and who offer options in keeping with ability to pay.

Countless thousands consider many of the older ways better ways. These people should not be made to feel that their thinking is archaic. They should not be derogated by those who often seem to be convinced that change for the sake of change is always desirable. Surely the funeral approach that best fills the needs of the average person is the moderate approach — one that serves the spiritual as well as the economic condition of people.

The survivors should by law be apprised of the options open to them. The services that most console and sustain them — and are financially feasible — are those that should be carried out.

No executive privilege

EDITOR:

When I heard that President Richard Nixon, when asked to testify, under oath, about the Watergate incident, refused claiming "executive privilege," I cringed inside. If the American people grant the President executive privilege surely our republic cannot long survive.

In a constitutional republic, such as ours, the President is an executor. The President of the United States is not a ruler, he is not a king. He is an American citizen holding the office and responsibility of the executor of our constitutional republic. The constitution and the laws of this country apply equally to the President as well as to any other American citizen. It would be a tragedy to allow the President to claim any such privilege. Unless we wish to see the title of "President" fade into the title of "King," we had better not allow President Nixon to claim any executive privilege and thereby exempt himself from any of the laws of our country.

Mea culpa, CRP

EDITOR:

As a Democrat, it is my belief that we asked for bugging when we allowed the kooky element to take over our party during last year's Democratic convention.

I know this comment will get an angry response from the knee jerk liberals. They are quick to criticize but find it unbearable to accept criticism from those who do not share their views.

Public gullible

EDITOR:

I deeply regret having "dismayed" Mr. Bob Dulavey in my letter published in your paper May 21, and also wish to apprise Mark A. Harden of the fact that I have five decades of involvement in American politics behind me, and the experience acquired during that time has driven the stars from my eyes and destroyed my belief in Santa Claus and the tooth fairy.

I do not condone "thieves, liars, saboteurs, blackmailers or wire tappers," but I do know they have infiltrated the field of politics and their machinations are not limited to one party. This type of thing is encouraged not by cynics like me but by the unbelievable gullibility of the hand-picked "man in the street" interviewed by certain listing-to-the-left and antagonistic-to-the-President radio and television stations.

The Watergate thing was deplorable, but sadder still is the grim secret kept so well in the cold waters of Chappaquiddick. The exposure of Billie Sol Estes and the end of his nonexistent empire destroyed the lives and shattered the hopes and dreams of thousands of investors.

Apparently bursting with righteous indignation, and rubbing their hands with glee, the very people who probably set the trap in the Watergate case are now trying to railroad the President of the United States. It has in it the whisper of the saboteur and the screams of the lynching party. So I have come, not to bury our President but to praise him.

Don't hide truth

EDITOR:

I was appalled to read the June 3 Southland Sunday article — "Satisfaction or frustration: Religion can bring either" — by Eli S. Chesen.

To deny a small child to hear the Bible stories of our Lord is absurd. Any fear that may come from the Bible and the teaching of Jesus Christ cannot compare with a young child's exposure of daily living. Television, picture shows, magazines and newspaper articles are so full of fear and they are discussed daily in the home.

The Bible does speak of fear, hell and damnation, but it is the truth. As a newborn infant we must start living with the truth and accept it. To be deprived of God's Word at any age is a sin.

Too much militance

EDITOR:

As a local taxpayer in the Long Beach Unified School District, I was annoyed by the sanctions called against the school district by the California Teachers Association. I am a teacher in a nearby school district and I was a member of the California Teachers Association for years. I quit the CTA because of their increasing militancy. Long Beach residents should support our school district while they are under attack by the militant teachers' association.

Lakewood MRS. NANCY RUDOFF

Looking for a president? Try nation's statehouses

SACRAMENTO — "A table full of governors," said Washington's Dan Evans, who is one, "is a pretty good place to look for 1976 presidential candidates," and he is probably one of those, too.

There were perhaps a dozen potential candidates among the 47 chief executives who attended the National Governors' Conference last week at Lake Tahoe, where Evans made his observation.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

NEW YORK'S Nelson Rockefeller, the oldest, will be 65 next July 8, and other potential Republican candidates, in addition to the 47-year-old Evans, include California's Ronald Reagan, 62; Colorado's John Love, 56; Michigan's William G. Milliken, 51; and Virginia's Linwood Holton, 49.

Among the Democrats there is George Wallace of Alabama, 53; Ohio's John J. Gilligan, 52; Georgia's Jimmy Carter, 48; Arkansas' Dale Bumpers, 47; Florida's Reubin Askew, 44; and Minnesota's Wendell Anderson. 40.

Some, Reagan certainly and possibly Rockefeller, will be aggressive candidates. Others may patiently wait for the early front runners to run out of steam and hope then to be designated as a compromise candidate.

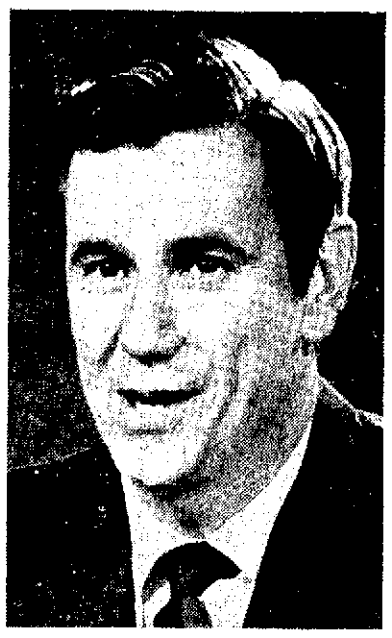

And some may not even be contemplating the possibility, but find themselves thrust unexpectedly into national prominence some time during the next three years.

THE VERY FACT that so many governors' names are mentioned reflects the governors' own desire, as a body, to play a more active role in the determination of national domestic policy.

Evans, the incoming chairman of the governors' conference, intends to increase the organization's lobbying activities in the nation's capital.

"We're (the states) being outlobbied by the cities and the counties," he said. "I think we should beef up our staff in Washington and increase our research and program development capabilities. I think we should work closely with the National League of Cities and the National Association of County Officials, but I think we should be as active as they are and I don't think we have been."

Bumpers of Arkansas complained that under revenue sharing, "the states have no veto power over any city or county which chooses to go their independent way and ignore a state's comprehensive plan."

REUBIN ASKEW

DALE BUMPERS

JIMMY CARTER

DAN EVANS

THE GOVERNORS expressed the wish that Vice President Agnew, a former Maryland governor who was originally designated by President Nixon to serve as a liaison between the White House and the state houses, would once again be given that responsibility.

At any rate, either through more intensive and/or more effective lobbying, or through the election of one of them into the White House, the governors are determined to have a greater voice in the development of the country's domestic policies.

Achieving that voice through the circumstance of a governor occupying the White House is not as remote as some United States senators might wish.

And if, as some observers feel, 1976 is a Democratic year, it may also be a southern year.

Wallace's health may not permit him to run, but he will obviously have much to say about the success of those who do. He insisted last week that "the national Democratic committee knows well that I represented middle America perhaps better than any other candidate in 1972."

HE STILL DOES, he said, adding that he was leaning toward running for reelection next year, and in any event "I'm going to remain active in politics."

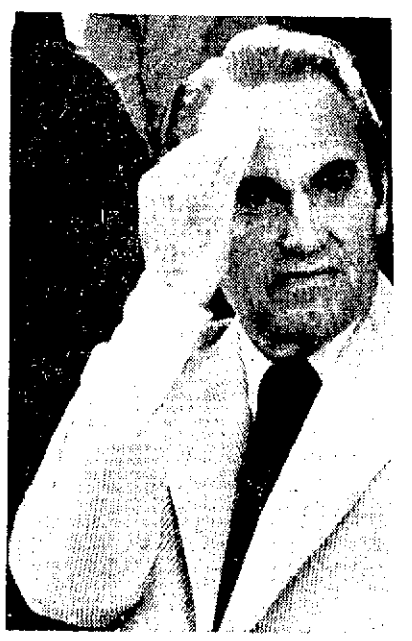

Wallace, incidentally, who was once the predominant symbol of racism in the country, is now the recipient of outright affection from his colleagues and from the press.

RONALD REAGAN

NELSON ROCKEFELLER

GEORGE WALLACE

One reporter kidded him about the length of his hair, a bit longer than it was 10 years ago Monday when he barred the door of the University of Alabama against the admission of federally escorted black students.

"I try to keep up, all right," Wallace chuckled.

Bumpers and Florida's Askew are also names which will be mentioned often as 1976 approaches, but the Democrat who might receive the most mention is Georgia's Jimmy Carter.

GENTLE-APPEARING, soft-spoken, Carter has to be tougher than he looks. He will be the coordinator next year of the national Democratic campaign effort, and will be in a position to pick up IOU's all over the country.

He gives the impression that he is highly intelligent and totally dedicated, and came to last week's conference obviously prepared to discuss the issued before the governors.

Dan Evans is right. The nation's governors, for the most part, are impressive. There may very well have been a future president sitting around the table last week. And as far as being aware both of what the people need and how to get what they need to them, a governor in the White House is not a bad idea.

L.A.C. Says

Fast communications reduce war dangers

We are today living in a world where people know more about what is happening in other nations than ever before in history. That, many observers believe, is the greatest deterrent of war we have.

The televised visits of President Nixon to Peking and Moscow have opened a new attitude between the U.S. and these countries. The visit of Russia's leader Leonid Brezhnev to the U.S. this month and the Chinese demonstrations of friendship are major developments indicating a better understanding and dependence upon each other among nations than has ever before existed.

We are living in a world of nearness and instant communication not existent 25 years ago. Our Skylab astronauts activities are visible over television through-out the world as quickly as they are seen in the U.S. What happens in most other countries may be shown instantly on U.S. television by way of Comsat. Some of the other great changes are shown in a U.S. News and World Report group of charts.

IN 1947 a traveler across the Atlantic on a commercial plane took 17½ hours. Today it can be made between lunch and dinner or 6½ hours. In 1950 there were about 650,000 Americans going overseas. In 1972 they totaled 7.7 million. For the same periods foreigners coming to the U.S. were 288,000 in 1950 compared with 3.8 million in 1972. These were increases of over 1000 per cent.

Overseas telephone calls for these periods jumped from 900,000 in 1950 to 35 million in 1972, an increase of 3789 per cent. Mail pieces from the U.S. to other countries doubled. Trade between the free-world nations increased from 55.8 billion in 1950 to $371 billion in 1972 an increase of 565 per cent.

U.S. direct investments in other countries amounted to $11.8 billion in 1950 but increased to $86 billion in 1972. At the same time foreign direct investments in the U.S. increased from $3.4 billion in 1950 to $13.7 billion in 1972. Foreign students studying in the U.S. totaled 40,700 in 1955. There are now over 140,000. U.S. students studying abroad were 9,900 in 1955, which has increased to over 32,000.

DURING THESE years nuclear bombs and their delivery have been developed to a point where they can destroy cities thousands of miles away. They are so devastating no nation can feel safe in using them because retaliation would come instantly. It has brought about the realization by most world leaders that big wars are no longer the danger they were a quarter century ago.

The instant communications between nations and the 10 million people a year traveling to other countries has given a greater understanding of the problems of each other. The Communist nations are starting to enlarge their trade with the non-Communist nations. They are looking for technical and industrial equipment and credits to modernize their production economy, to give their people more of the luxuries now accepted as necessities by the people of the free nations.

It is probable there will always be "little wars" between neighboring nations. But in effect the world has shrunk in size as concerns time of communications and travel. No nation can safely let itself become so weak it could not retaliate against an attack. But with that assurance those nations can turn their energies and resources to a better understanding and cooperation in improving the way of life of their people. It could be suicidal for any that did not do this. That is the greatest hope for the future.

Has AAA sold out to automakers?

WASHINGTON — The millions of motorists, who depend on the American Automobile Association for road service, highway maps and bail money, should take another look behind the familiar triple-A emblem.

This is the advice of Ralph Nader and his fellow travelers, who have just concluded an exhaustive investigation of the AAA. Their findings, still confidential, have been made available to us.

THEY HAVE DUMPED an avalanche of derogatory detail upon the AAA. Sifted down to the essentials, the Nader study charges that the AAA has sold out to the automakers and highway lobbyists. It depicts a self-perpetuating AAA bureaucracy that feeds on its members, takes an ecology-be-damned attitude and follows proindustry safety policies.

Responds AAA's executive vice president, James Creal: "Nader has perpetually tried to put us in bed with the auto manufacturers. That's a lot of baloney." Creal dismisses much of the study as "just shenanigans," noting that the AAA has picked up 1.5 million members since Nader began his attacks on the organization two years ago. The total membership: an impressive 15 million.

But Nader's raiders are not impressed. "No one in Washington is faster with a press release," they proclaim, "than the publicity hounds who run AAA." The Nader study charges, for example, that the AAA's safety drives are "ineffectual, spurious — one per cent safety, 99 per cent self-promotion."

We have verified that Nader's chief AAA prober, Ron Landsman, vainly urged AAA to back a strong auto safety bill. It would have compelled the motor moguls to pay for all safety-related defects, going as far back as the monoxide-blowing heaters in the old Corvairs. Instead, AAA suggested free safety repairs 'might' be cut off in five years. This is close to the position of the automakers themselves.

From his nationwide survey of AAA affiliates, Nader found only the maverick Auto Club of Missouri doing an effective job. The club has an automotive diagnostic center in St. Louis, for instance, where members can find out whether they are being gypped by dealers and garages. A typical example: The center discovered that a member, who had paid $77.18 for the replacement of a good water pump, never got the water pump replaced.

Yet AAA officials, rather than call upon all affiliates to set up similar centers, have started a whispering campaign against the Missouri operation, alleges the Nader study.

THE STUDY IS critical of AAA's emergency road service, also of its huge mark-up on auto equipment. New tires cost the members $27.61, for example, although AAA pays only $11.61 for them from General Tire. The batteries that are sold to members for $25.95 cost AAA only $9.26. The profits go to AAA, its affiliates and the garages.

Another AAA money maker is its travel business, although our own survey indicates Nader may have exaggerated the abuse. He charges that AAA, as official U.S. sales agent for Olympic tickets, used the tickets as an inducement to persuade customers to buy its expensive package tours.

The tickets were supposed to be sold on a first-come-first-served bases. Nader claims, however, that 1,000 to 3,000 tickets were tied to the tours. Our own figures indicate only about 700 tickets, less than one per cent of all tickets AAA sold, were offered as part of a package.

Probably the most serious Nader charge is that AAA executives keep themselves in power and the members in the dark. Gettting behind the AAA's paper curtain, he says, is like trying to pierce "the CIA, the White House or the KGB."

IN ILLINOIS, for instance, members of the affiliated Chicago Motor Club went to court to seek copies of their own by-laws. Club officials are fighting the move with the members' own dues. So tight-lipped are the Chicago AAA officials that they won't even reveal the proper procedure for trying to unseat current directors.

In Indiana, the affiliated Hoosier Auto Club's "active" members elect the directors. But the "active" members are handpicked by the directors. The club manager, James Parks, refused to tell either Nader or us how many members there are. However, he confided to an AAA executive from Michigan, according to the Nader study, that "our board has pretty much made themselves self-perpetuating."

In some states, members have a right to vote, but it takes thousands of signatures to get a dissident nominee on the slate.

IN CALIFORNIA, Illinois and Michigan, the directors refuse to let dissidents see membership lists so they can learn whom to solicit for signatures, Nader reports.

The AAA is supposed to be nonprofit, but the officials have organized money-making sidelines. They collect the profits from these operations in the name of the AAA and then set their own salaries as high as they like.

Officials of the Auto Club of New York, for example, personally own three insurance agencies. The president of the auto club is Gilbert Phillips, the same man who is president of the insurance agency. The same offices, typewriters and clerks are used both for the club and the agency. But Phillips, his two top aides and a few lesser AAA officials get the dividends from the insurance business.

The affable Phillips refused to tell us how much he collects in dividends. The most he would say was that only about 11,000 of his club's 480,000 members actually buy insurance through his agency.

In Minnesota, the Auto Club of St. Paul is forbidden by law to sell insurance. So it gets around the law by selling insurance through a wholly owned insurance subsidiary, which has the same board of directors as the auto club. Until last year, the agency would meet at 2 p.m., according to one former director, and break up at 4 p.m. Each director would draw $75 for attending the meeting. Then, at 4:05 p.m., the board would reconvene as the auto club directorate without pay.

In the past, the triple-A emblem has been a sign of integrity and dependability. Now it has been splattered with mud by Ralph Nader and his road runners.

Thousands to receive diplomas here this week

Commencement Week begins today in Long Beach with vesper services at six high schools and culminates Friday when City College awards 1,865 degrees.

Seven high schools here will award diplomas to 4,293 young men and women, some 262 fewer than last year. An additional 963 graduates from Evening High School/School for Adults brings the total class size to 5,256.

This week's schedule: JORDAN, 598 graduates

Today, 6 p.m., vespers, Jordan Memorial Stadium, student speaker Sally Werner. Commencement Wednesday, 8 p.m., stadium, student speakers Joe King and Cynthia Pridy; diploma presentation by Associate Supt. Vernon A. Hinze representing the Board of Education. LAKEWOOD, 1,024 graduates

Today, 4 p.m., vespers, Lakewood Stadium, Rev. John Foley of St. Cyprian's Church, speaker. Commencement Wednesday, 8 p.m., stadium; student speakers Christy Ann Ragon and Dale L. Kunkel, diploma presentation by board President James P. Zarifes. EILLIKAN, 1,103 graduates

Today, 4 p.m., vespers, stadium, student speakers Jeff Hayes and David Swift. Commencement Wednesday, 8 p.m., stadium; student speakers Dave Adelman and Bob Infelise; diploma presentation by board member James H. Gray. POLY, 702 graduates

Today, 3 p.m., baccalaureate service, Long Beach Arena, address by Joseph T. Brooks, U.S. Civil Rights Commission field representative. Commencement Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Arena, student speakers Sam C. Organo, Mary G. Lord and Harve Stein, diploma presentation by board member Mrs. Elizabeth W. Wallace. WILSON, 789 graduates

Today, 4 p.m., vespers, Stephens Field, program conducted by student officers. Commencement Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Blair Field, student speakers Sharon Arys Kirkpatrick and Candace Lynn Moore, diploma presentation by board member Dr. James W. Crawford and School Supt. W. Odie Wright.

REID, 45 seniors

Commencement Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Long Beach City College business and technology campus, student speakers Effie Woodward and Joseph Soriano, diploma presentation by Associate Supt. Francis Laufenberg.

AVALON, 32 graduates

Today, 5 p.m., vespers, high school auditorium, prayer, scripture and benediction by Rev. H. Huntley Lagasse, address by Rev. Father Laurence Coen. Commencement Thursday, 8 p.m., Wrigley Field House, salutatorian Michael Perry Upton, valedictorian Mark Jeff Keppel, diploma presentation by board member James H. Gray. SCHOOL FOR ADULTS EVENING HIGH, 963 graduates

Commencement Thursday, 8 p.m., Wilson High School auditorium student speakers Warren Olson and Mrs. Zita Hogan, diploma presentation by board President James P. Zarifes.

And the 49th annual Long Beach City College commencement parade is scheduled to begin Friday at 9:30 a.m. on the liberal arts campus. Some 1,865 new graduates will receive either associate of arts or science degrees from board chief Zarifes.

Dr. Earl V. Pullias, USC professor of higher education, will present the commencement address: "Things to Remember in a Time of Change."

Summer 'drug camp' slated

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

A new approach to preventing drug abuse will be used in Norwalk this summer, as the county Parks and Recreation Department opens its "Sports Addict Day Camp" at Norwalk High School, 11356 E. Leffingwell Road.

Beginning June 25, up to 150 youngsters aged 8 through 13 will take part in daily programs of sports, arts and crafts, rhythms, field trips and a three- day mountain campout.

A five dollar fee is charged for each child. Enrollments will be taken at the high school through Monday.

For the five dollar fee, the youngster experiences eight weeks of camp in which, county officials say, he learns how to solve problems and make decisions through informal games.

Joe Quarles, a teacher at Cerritos High School in Cerritos, will head the Norwalk camp, one of 15 throughout the county.

He says the new approach being used at the day camps doesn't use a "hard sell" about drugs. Instead, camp staff members offer a little drug information, but stress "giving them (the youngsters) alternatives so they can form their own decisions," Quarles says.

County Parks and Recreation officials say the "Sports Addict" program grew out of a three-year experiment in Gardena. Follow-up studies of the 600 youngsters who took part in the Gardena program show that none turned to drugs, county officials say.

The Norwalk camp will be offered in cooperation with the Southeast Recreation and Parks District and the Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District.

Dolores Thompson, recreation supervisor for the Recreation and Parks District, says the program will include a swimming program at the pool across the street from the high school.

Y Day Camp program to start June 18

Two Day Camp programs will be operated this summer at the Lakewood Family YMCA, 5425 Centralia St.

There will be 10 weeks of Day Camp activity for boys and girls in the first through sixth grades starting June 18. They will be broken into five, two-week periods.

A Tots Day Camp, for youngsters 2½ through 5, will be offered at the Y for the first time. It will be directed by Mel Williams, who operates a year around child care program at the institution.

Day Camps differ from regular Y camp programs in that the youngsters stay home nights and are picked up at local schools in the mornings for a day's activity.

Sweepstakes winners

Three subscribers from Long Beach, Carson and Bellflower are the winners of the Independent, Press-Telegram's "Las Vegas Sweepstakes" for free weekend vacations in Las Vegas.

Their carrier boys each won 10-speed bicycles.

I.P-T circulation director E.H. Lowdermilk said the winning subscribers and carriers were:

Waldie to speak in Rossmoor

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Congressman Jerome R. Waldie, a Democratic candidate for governor in 1974, will speak and answer questions at a 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, meeting in the David Engelberg residence, 2752 Engel Dr., Rossmoor, sponsored by the Rossmoor-Los Alamitos and Tom Paine Democratic Clubs, both affiliates of the California Democratic Council.

The meeting is open to the public for a $1.50 donation.

Waldie, of Antioch, represents the Contra Costa County 14th Congressional District. He was elected to the California Assembly in 1958 and was majority floor leader from 1960 to 1966 when he was elected to Congress.

He is one of only three congressmen to have made full financial disclosure, having published his federal and state income tax returns in the Congressional Record for the last three years.

Bunker Hill to be sold for scrap

A scrap firm has won the battle for the USS Bunker Hill.

About 2,000 former crew members had organized an association in hopes of making the 31-year-old carrier a floating memorial.

The ship has been used for the past seven years by the Naval Electronics Laboratory in San Diego for a test site for new shipboard communications and electronic warfare systems.

Bunker Hill will be taken from her berth at North Island Naval Air Station during the next three months and sold for scrap.

"Old age is what defeated her," a Navy spokesman said. "The hull and superstructure are so weak we doubt if she could be towed safely out of San Diego."

Under government regulations only U.S. firms will be permitted to bid on her, the spokesman added.

The carrier's combat career ended May 11, 1945 off Okinawa when two Japanese kamikazes crashed on her deck. The 3,000-man crew fought gasoline fires while ammunition exploded.

Toll was 346 killed, 264 wounded and 43 missing.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: New work, heavier involvement in community or corporate endeavors are probable. New contacts are not likely to develop into permanent relationships. Today's natives are positive, persistent and capable of drastic actions.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Finances and the papers related to them need rearrangement. Be industrious and thorough.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Successful action is the day's keynote. Begin the week as though it were your first in wherever you are.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Be self-sufficient. Distant memories stir when you encounter someone associated with them. Sidelines offer profits.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Don't postpone anything of importance. Special attention to details, formalities, technical matters is essential.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Not much happens, but what does take place today is generally pleasant and constructive.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Most activities you initiate can be helpful — meeting enough people insures sufficient contacts for the future.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A decision is made, either you must act and make it or your hesitation will permit others to do so.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's easier to make needed changes this Monday. Be candid, definite, assert the truth.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition leads you through a delicate situation. You must do difficult or unpleasant deeds for your friends.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If it's past, let it be. Put your time and resources into fresh enterprises. Trivial details elude consideration.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your workweek starts quite well. Live up to your potentials by careful planning, consistent diligence. Make deals today.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Wherever you can, attend routines yourself. Offer no advice until you're asked. It's a great week for new studies.

Secret Witness 'wanted' list summarized

As part of the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program, summaries of cases in which rewards of specified amounts are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. Rewards paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other criminal cases, not covered in these summaries, will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense. The summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $4,000, including $2,000 guaranteed by the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program and $2,000 offered by the Compton City Council, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 55-year-old Compton city employe Raymond Adams. Adams was shot to death by an unknown gunman as he was operating a city street sweeper at 4:45 a.m. Sunday at the northwest corner of Compton and Long Beach Boulevards. Officers answering a call of shots fired in the central Compton area found Adams slumped over the wheel of his sweeping machine, which was standing at the corner with the motor still running.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 21-year-old Joyce King, of 5221 Cortland Ave., Lynwood, slain in the early morning hours of Jan. 1, 1972. Miss King left her home shortly after midnight to walk to a nearby drive-in restaurant. Her partially-clothed body, slashed by 40 to 50 knife wounds, was found approximately eight hours later in an alley behind the 11600 block of Louise Avenue in Lynwood.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Julia Holan, 88, who died April 14 of injuries received when she was knocked down by a purse thief on Eighth Street near Pacific Avenue on the previous day. The killer thief was described as white, about 18 years old, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, medium build, and with neatly trimmed brown hair.

A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the driver responsible for the hit-run manslaughter death March 23 of 6-year-old Gary Perkins, of 625 Magnolia Ave. Gary, son of Eugene and Barbara Perkins, was walking with two adult friends of his parents to a nearby delicatessen and had stepped out in front of them to cross the street at Seventh Street and Magnolia Avenue when a car speeding south on Magnolia ran the red light,and struck the boy, and kept going. Police found the car, a 1965 red Mustang, abandoned near the Queen Mary the next day. The owner said it had been stolen.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Deborah Ann Baker, 18, whose strangled body was found March 21 in a vacant field adjacent to Los Coyotes Country Club, near Beach Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Fullerton. Fullerton police theorize the young woman's body was dumped in the field after she was killed in the early morning hours on that date in another location. Miss Baker was last seen alive by a girl friend with whom she was temporarily sharing an apartment at 1313 E. Wilshire Ave., Fullerton, at 1 p.m. on the previous day. At that time, she left the apartment and told her friend she was going on a job interview.

— Rewards totaling $4,000 — including $2,000 each from the Secret Witness programs of the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram and the Santa Monica Evening Outlook — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Kathleen Ann La Chance, aspiring Long Beach 24-year-old actress. Miss La Chance was last seen alive at 5 p.m. on Nov. 15, 1972, when she left an actors' workshop play rehearsal at the apartment of a friend in Los Angeles. Her nude body, arms bound by leather straps and mouth stuffed with sand, was found late that night near the pier on the Santa Monica beachfront. She had been raped and stabbed repeatedly.

— Rewards totaling $2,500 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murder of Mrs. Judith Cooper, 31, stabbed to death by a robber on the morning of last April 2, in a television rental shop at 8580 Washington Blvd. in Culver City, where she was employed as a secretary. Mrs. Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Older of Long Beach, was slain with more than 50 knife wounds by the bandit who took $1,500 from the store's safe.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Fletcher Jordan Herndon, 58, of San Pedro, on the night of last Feb. 6. Herndon and his wife had just returned home from dining out and Mrs. Herndon was parking the car when an unknown assassin hiding outside the house at 985 Channel St. felled Herndon with two shotgun blasts in the chest as he walked up to the front door.

— A $2,025 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of pharmacist Patrick Horgan, 59, at the Horgan Pharmacy, 1403 Cherry Ave., on March 9. Horgan was shot in the back as he waited on three men who fled without taking any money after the shot was fired. The killers, black men in their early or middle 30s, drove away in a 1963 or 1964 maroon Chevrolet convertible.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Victor Joseph Zalneraitis, of Long Beach, whose body was found lying in the oil fields southwest of Cherry Avenue and Burnett Street in Signal Hill last March 30. Zalneraitis had been slain by multiple stab wounds in the chest and back, apparently inflicted with a pocket knife. The 6-foot, 180-pound victim was last seen alive in a pool parlow at 2499 E. Pacific Coast Highway in Signal Hill late on the night before the body was discovered by an industrial worker.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Helga Dorothea Brown, 64, whose nude body was found in Scherer Park last Sept. 23. Mrs. Brown, last seen alive by her husband and friends on the morning of Sept. 17, had been beaten and strangled by someone who hid the body on an island in the duck pond part of the park. Her empty purse and part of her clothing were found near a picnic table in the park area.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Freddie Tidmore, alias Fred Douglas Mabson, 20, sought in connection with the holdup shooting of John Bell, 33-year-old clerk at the Wooden Shoe Liquor store, 2053 Orange Ave., last Dec. 20. Bell, critically wounded, identified Tidmore as his assailant. Tidmore, who is black, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 155 pounds, is believed to be still in the Long Beach-Compton area.

— Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 11-year-old Teri Lynn Hollis, of 2036 Dalemeade St., Torrance, who was kidnapped from the front yard of her home last Thanksgiving Day. Her body, clad only in a white T-shirt, was found on a rocky and desolate stretch of beach 11 miles south of Oxnard on the following day. The little blonde girl had been raped and strangled. Teri was last seen alive by an informant who told Torrance police she was riding near her home on a bicycle pedaled by a young man about 21 years old, dark-haired, and about 5 feet, 6 inches tall.

— Rewards totaling $4,000 will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Velma Harris, 44, shot to death in her Long Beach home at 5020 Centralia St. on Aug. 17, 1971. Her body was discovered by her husband, Ralph K. Harris, 47, when he came home from work at 11 a.m. Mr. Harris has posted a $2,000 reward in the case, and this amount is being matched by the Secret Witness service.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrests and convictions of the members of a Long Beach area auto theft gang who steal cars from throughout the Southland and then, at one of a number of auto repair shops, strip them for parts.

— A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head.

— A $2,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a holdup at the Atlantic Inn, 1854 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 16, 1971. The killer is described as a Negro, about 25 years old, 5-feet-7, 130 pounds with a two inch Afro hairdo. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and smooth, medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture and is well-groomed.

— A $2,500 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent, Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9, 1972, upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before they were murdered. He is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5-feet-10 to 6-feet-1 in height, with wavy dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and pock-marked square face with high cheekbones.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Long Beach auto wholesaler Robert Wilson Cogley, 44, shot to death in the parking lot of the Highway Center Liquor Store, Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue, at 1:40 a.m. last Aug. 12. Cogley's killers are described as Negros between 16 and 19 years old and from 5-feet-7 to 5-feet-10 in height.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of other criminals. For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identies of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal, or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information resulting in arrests and convictions in cases not published by Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays, and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to Secret Witness at the following address: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself ... any name, as long as it's not your own ... and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

Western DC10 to Hawaii still only way to fly

As a 35-year veteran of Western's sales campaigns, Kelly has had more than a little to do with creating marketing programs, including the beaked bird, the bubbling beaker and the DC10 space ship concept. How does he justify the current campaign after choosing the Douglas trijet for its additional seats instead of the width of its cabin?

"We think we've discovered something other airlines have overlooked," he explained. "Passengers are interested in vertical space and back-to-front space as well as left-to-right space. We've proved this in the Hawaiian market, where we have been strongly competitive simply by flying our 707s with first-class leg space between all the seats."

Three years ago Western began Hawaii service without benefit of wide-bodied aircraft, bucking United, Pan Am and Continental, all flying 747 jumbo jets. Kelly, then senior vice president of marketing, set his sights on 14 per cent of the total traffic as Western's fair share.

RELYING on greater flight frequency and ample leg room to compensate for the lack of wide-body aircraft, the airline has achieved the goal regularly from the start. At the advent of its DC10 wide-cabin service, Western's market share stands at 14.5 per cent.

"It doesn't make any difference whether an airplane is wide-bodied or not if the seat in front is up against your knees, as in standard tourist class," Kelly said. "For the passenger, that's an uncomforable flight. That's why we haven't had too much of a problem in competing with wide-body aircraft.

"What we've done with the DC10 is to give it a new dimension, to make it not only a wide-body aircraft but a front-to-back airplane with full leg comfort all the way. That's the point of our 'Space Ship' slogan."

Western's wide-cabin trijet is arranged with 46 first-class seats and 193 in coach, all with first-class seat spacing. The total of 239 is slightly less than the normal DC10 configuration and the proportion of first-class accommodations is somewhat higher.

"WE ARE going after the first-class market," Kelly said. "It's a relatively narrow field, but a very real one. We know it's available on the Los Angeles-Mexico route —one of the few in the U.S. where the first-class demand exceeds the supply of seats — and we'll start Mexicos City DC10 service on August 1.

"We also have a significant demand for first-class service between Los Angeles and Minneapolis-St. Paul, which will justify our DC10 configuration, and we believe there is a very good first-class market to Hawaii. In the last year we have noticed an increase of about 12 per cent in the first-class segment of our Hawaii service demand.

"One of the surprises we found in announcing DC10 service to Hawaii is that there is a considerable traffic originating in the islands to the mainland. The DC10 is such a spectacular aircraft that it is generating its own market in Hawaii. This is a very refreshing development."

OTHER elements of Western's "Space Ship" concept of the DC10 include kitchen facilities on the deck below the passenger cabin and the eight-abreast seating in the coach section, with pairs of seats on either side of the two aisles. Kelly believes both are distinct advantages over the upstairs galleys and nine-abreast seating of the 747s flown by competitors on the Hawaii routes.

"The lower lobe galley gives the DC10 a very clean, sharp cabin," he said. "We're not cluttered up with dishes and kitchen noise. That's a real plus for passengers. The two-by-two seating means nobody in coach has to climb over two or three other passengers to get to an aisle."

THE NUMBER of flight attendants on Western's DC10s will vary from six to ten, determined shortly in advance of individual flights by the passenger load, Kelly said. Another feature of previous Hawaii service is Western's unique soft-pad stereo listening headsets in the first-class section. These cover the ears instead of plugging in.

"I haven't met a stero fan who hasn't complained about the lack of fidelity in the regular pneumatic-tube headsets, not to mention the discomfort of sticking them into your ears," Kelly commented.

The airline's chief executive emphasized that all aspects of the DC10 marketing program are the results of teamwork by top-level management.

"That goes for our earlier campaigns, including the big bird and the free champagne," he said. If you asked me, I would claim credit for all of those ideas. But there are at least half a dozen others in the company who could say the same.

"You might be interested to know that over the years we have invested about $11 million in the bird through various advertising promotions. That's one reason, in addition to popular demand, that we have brought him back on stage.

"I'M NO marketing genius. I've always been identified with sales, but I always have operated the so-called marketing effort as an administrator. The secret of this is to surround yourself with the best people you can find, give them authority and responsibility, and then discipline yourself not to meddle with them.

"Since I've been president of the company, I've done very little in the field of marketing itself, except to lend a hand. Being a line man all my life, I think my best function in this position is to be careful not to interfere with the work of the fine professional staff we have assembled."

Laguna Beach joins action to halt planned housing tract

The Laguna Beach City Council has decided to become party to an Orange County Superior Court suit involving property outside its boundaries.

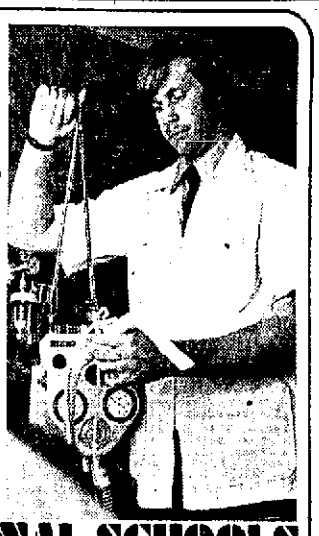

The city joined Laguna Greenbelt, Inc., a conservation group, in asking the court for a writ to halt development of a 178-acre tract by Rossmoor Laguna Hills Leisure World, which plans to build 1,400 dwelling units on the property. It is at Laguna Canyon Road and El Toro Road.

Laguna Beach City Attorney Tully Seymour, who recommended to the council that the city enter the suit in the Santa Ana court, said that the city was interested because the property was within the Laguna Beach watershed, and the city feared pollution and runoff problems resulting from the construction.

Seymour added that the city also objected because the project would interfere with a "preferred" routing of Oso Parkway if it is extended.

The suit asks for a writ to compel County Building Director Floyd G. McLellan to appeal a grading permit to the county Grading Board of Appeals. Arguments will be June 22; if a writ is issued by the court, Rossmoore's grading for the construction would be halted.

Sarah Miles not so hardhearted

NEW YORK — Sarah Miles began to cry.

The supposedly hardhearted heartbreaker was having lunch with me at SeaFare of the Aegean. I wasn't harassing her about Burt Reynolds and the death of her former business manager David Whiting. In fact, it was when she said, "Somebody ought to write something nice about Burt," and I said I would. At that she began to dab at her eyes.

"Poor old Burt," she said, "he's as innocent as a babe. All he did was help a damsel in distress. They've made up all sorts of suggestions about us. Listen, I didn't even know Burt Reynolds. I don't even know him now.

"But I do know he's a much better actor than he's given credit for. He's so harassed on this thing that his talent is forgotten. You've got another Clark Gable on your hands. He's a kind and lovely gentleman," she continued, "and he loves Dinah Shore."

Sarah undertook to explain her sniveling.

"When people are nasty, I laugh. I pretend to be a toughie. When anybody's nice, I burst into tears. Yes, when anybody's nice, I cry and collapse."

IT WAS Sarah talking about her partner in headlines and in "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing." Sarah said the apparent suicide of David Whiting had a bad effect on her.

"I deplore it because it has made me a hot property. That is how sick the world is today."

"David," I started to say . . .

"David was not in love with me. He was in love with F. Scott Fitzgerald. He always carried a copy of 'The Great Gatsby.' He was unbalanced which we didn't know at first. He had made a muddle of his life. He had a wife but he never told me he was married. . .

"Oh, I get caught up with people. I'm a failure!

"I should be breeding the best horses but I'm also a failure at that, because I can't sell them. They're too beautiful to sell. I'm not making myself a rich Sarah Miles. I'm going to make myself a poor Sarah Miles.

"I'm very insecure. . ."

Her tears were dried. She was smiling. She was laughing. And I was writing a piece about Burt Reynolds.

New H'wood fad: see-through clothes — for men . . . At Roseland they believe Nixon'll never be impeached — the Democrats know he's better for them in the White House since he's now so vulnerable . . . L'Etoile's being converted to an airlines destination center called Satellite I . . . Joe Levine'll sign Glenda Jackson to more romantic comedies because of her splendid "Touch of Class."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Watergate has revived old song hits, according to Jack Ruth. In Washington they're humming "Those Little White House Lies."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Bob Limandri wishes they'd move the calendar ahead one day so it would always rain on Mondays instead of Sundays.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: The best way to inspire courteous treatment by other motorists is to drive a police car.—Hal Chadwick.

EARL'S PEARLS: Bet those English lords wished those call girls had taken up a different calling.

Flip Wilson claims he has a friend who manufactures Republican furniture—Watergate beds. That's earl, brother.

It's Wayne Week by proclamation

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Dan Evans has proclaimed the week of June 10-16 as John Wayne Week in Washington.

The state Department of Commerce and Economic Development said the veteran actor was being honored for his contribution to the nation's entertainment industry and the state's economy.

Wayne is in Seattle for the world premier of his latest picture, "Cahill, U.S. Marshal," next week and the filming of another picture, "McQ."

For a cleaner harbor

Although Van Camp Sea Food Co. announced this week it was moving its Terminal Island canning plant to San Diego, the company is currently testing its new $175,000 waste water treatment system now in operation at its Terminal Island plant.

The new system, which uses a dissolved air flotation technique, is the first such pollution control equipment to be installed in any tuna cannery, according to Richard Martinson, executive vice president. The labyrinth of piping, valves, detectors, and holding tanks are designed to remove solids, oil, and grease from the water used in canning the fish that is the main ingredient of a tuna salad.

Installation of the complex equipment began last summer, and the system became operational on an experimental basis last month. Martinson said additional engineering studies were under way for more equipment and plant modifications estimated to cost at least $150,000 additionally to complete the company's waste water control program.

The company's waste water — not its sewage — currently flows into the outer reaches of Los Angeles Harbor. The company, along with all other canners on the island, have been ordered by the state to clean up the quality of the waste water flowing into the harbor.

A change in plans

Delay in constructing the trans-Alaska pipeline has prompted Atlantic Richfield to assign new duties to its newly launched 120,000 dead weight ton tanker, Arco Anchorage, which originally had been designed to bring Alaskan North Slope oil to the Long Beach Harbor.

The 883-foot oil carrier will call at Long Beach, but in its holds will be Persian Gulf oil until — when and if — the trans-Alaskan pipeline is built linking Prudhoe Bay with the Port of Valdez.

The big tanker, second largest commercial vessel built in the U.S., was launched last Saturday at Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Sparrows Point Ship Yard in Maryland. The ship is the third of five oil carriers the company has ordered from the ship builders.

The Arco Anchorage has an elaborate antipollution protection system, including a 2,400-gallon a day onboard sewage treatment plant and an oil waste separating system with a capacity 7,700 barrels to remove oil from tank washings thus avoiding dumping the waste into the ocean.

Environmental staff to grow

Due to the work load imposed upon the Los Angeles Harbor Department staff following the enactment of the California Environmental Quality Act of 1970 and the passage of the California Coastal Zone Conservation Act of 1972, the present one-man staff of Marine Environmentalists will be increased to a staff of five.

Authorized by the Board of Harbor Commissioners were the addition of three professional environmentalist, W. Calvin Hurst, believed to be the first to be retained by any U.S. port, is presently foundering under a workload of preparing environmental impact reports, taking environmental inventories, evaluation of biological data, supplying technical and scientific assistance to the engineering division, and appearing as an expert witness before a number of federal, state, and local agencies.

Deepening recommended

The Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors of the Corps of Engineers, has recommended the deepening of the entrance and inner harbor channels in Los Angeles Harbor at a cost of $21,000,000.

The federal portion of the cost is estimated at $5,434,000 — a sum about equal to that which the Harbor Department will spend. Some of the funds will be expended by other agencies, utility companies, and private firms to relocate and lower utility lines and pipelines crossing the channel.

The board has estimated the deepening will result in transportation benefits estimated at $7,302,000 with land enchancement benefits at $887,000.

Plans call for deepening the channels 10 feet creating water 45 feet deep. At present ships of more than 35 feet draft cannot use the main channel due to its relatively shallow depth. Long Beach has water 60 feet deep. Deepening of the Los Angeles channels is bound to make that port more competitive with Long Beach.

The board said that actual dredging should not be started until hydraulic models of the two-port complex being built by the Corps of Engineers at Vicksburg, Miss., has been completed and the effects of tidal flushing have been determined.

New shipping service

There is good news for shippers shuttling goods between Yap and Koror (Palau).

Seatrain Lines which calls at Long Beach Harbor has announced its intention to extend its service to the Western Pacific Islands.

New licenses required

Effective Sept. 1, 1973, the operators of all towing vessels 26 feet or longer will be required to be licensed by the Coast Guard.

The new requirement would not apply to the operator of a pleasure craft giving a tow to a distressed boat. The law applies only to commercial vessels engaged in the service of towing.

Fountain Park designed for relaxed lifestyle

Greenbelts, parks, meandering walkways, landscaping and extensive recreation facilities—including a private recreation club with a pool and cabana—will create a rich living environment and more relaxed lifestyle for residents of the newest housing development of The William Lyon Company, Newport Beach.

This development is Fountain Park, 193-unit townhome project under construction on Edinger Avenue at Euclid Street in Fountain Valley.

Additional recreation facilities are adjacent to Fountain Park in the Mile Square Park.

Fountain Park represents the most advanced trend for making townhomes more liveable and eliminating the feeling of congestion in cluster housing through use of new open space concepts.

As an example of the advanced planning, Fountain Park has an intriguing "perimeter street land plan" which enables most residents to go anywhere in the community by way of manicured greenbelts and mini-parks while rarely crossing a street, an especially important feature for families with small children.

Acres of landscaping also highlight the development. "The common landscaped area represents a full third of the entire gross acreage of the site," said Lyon.

Center of the recreation complex will be a 1437-square-foot recreation club complete with massive fireplace, large multi-purpose game and meeting rooms, kitchen facilities, and women's and men's showers and baths. A large free form pool, heated in cool weather, and more than 5,000 square feet of deck for lounging and sun bathing, a cabana and gas barbecues are in the complex.

Three models, all two-story with two and three bedrooms and with a bath and a half each and enclosed two-car garages with storage shelves will be offered at prices from $28,990 to $31,990. Buyers will own their home as well as the land on which it is located.

Each home will have a private fully-fenced patio for outdoor living and dining with a pass through serving bar from the kitchen. The homes feature formal entries, large living room with wood-burning fireplaces with tile hearths; formal and informal dining areas, inside laundry areas and U-shaped kitchens with built-in range, disposal and kitchen nooks. Luxurious wall-to-wall carpeting in living room, hall, stairs and master bedroom suite is also a standard feature of every plan.

Huge master bedroom suites feature large wardrobe and private dressing areas and many overlook the landscaped parkways. The secondary bedrooms provide ample room for the growing family or can double for use as a den, hobby room or quiet retreat.

The sales office can be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway or Garden Grove Freeway to Beach Boulevard exit, going south on Beach to Edinger, and east on Edinger to the project.

Plans announced for Lake Mission Viejo complex

Mission Viejo Company has announced it will begin construction this summer on one of the largest fresh water recreational lakes in Southern California.

Lake Mission Viejo, scheduled to be ready for use early in 1975, will be a mile long and 800 feet wide at its narrowest point, dependent on final design.

It will feature sail boating, fishing and swimming, and will be open to the public on a controlled basis.

Philip J. Reilly, president of Mission Viejo Company, noted the $5.6-million lake will be built and financed entirely by Mission Viejo Company.

The lake will cover an area of 130 to 145 acres, providing approximately 3.4 miles of shoreline.

Reilly said the lake will be stocked with fish, which are expected to thrive in the environment with lake depths up to 90-feet.

DISTINCTIVE lake-oriented housing will be built around the perimeter, and a large percentage of the homes will feature views of the lake.

G. H. Lodder, vice president operations, housing development division, said three types of housing programs will be offered initially.

Single-family homes in two price ranges, and a neighborhood of townhouses will be developed, beginning on the southwestern perimeter of the lake.

Recreational facilities planned, will include a marina, storage facilities for rental boats, and a spacious beach for swimming.

One of the most important features of the lake is that it will be clean, and built to withstand a 100-year storm.

Beginning with a natural base of impervious clay from which there is little or no leakage, the lake will be filled directly with potable water.

THE Santa Margarita water district has already approved the purchase of 4300 acre-feet of water to fill the lake and also to supply the lake project with water to maintain a near constant water level.

No drainage of any kind will be permitted into the lake, and runoff water from the surrounding hills will be directed into by-pass storm drains.

Douglas Ostman, director of operations for Lake Mission Viejo, noted that the amount of water that will be required to offset evaporation and seepage will be less than is used to irrigate the Mission Viejo golf courses.

While the dam will be 130 feet high at the southern end, extensive landscaping on the slope face will blend the dam into the natural contours of the land.

The dam will be planted with grass and trees so that it will complement the surrounding landscape.

LAKE Mission Viejo and its adjacent parks and beaches will represent a major commitment to pernament open space to conform with Orange County's land use plans.

Combined with the Casta del Sol golf course, under construction adjoining the lake, and planned parks downstream, the area provides a continuous system of open spaces across the entire community.

Access to Lake Mission Viejo via the San Diego Freeway will be provided by a planned six-lane extension of Alicia Parkway and the new interchange.

A four-lane extension of Marguerite Parkway is also planned. In addition, a new six-lane highway, to be called Santo Diego Parkway, is planned along the northerly edge of the lake area.

Mission Viejo is a planned community of approximately 25,000 persons at the present time. The master plan for the community calls for a total population of 100,000 persons by 1990.

Main entrance to Mission Viejo is via the La Paz exit of the San Diego Freeway.

Opening of Garden Park heralded in GG

A distinctive new townhome community—featuring spacious units accented by a variety of recreational facilities and extensive landscaping—is celebrating its grand opening in Garden Grove.

The new community, Garden Park, has been developed by S & S Construction, principal subsidiary of Shapell Industries, Inc.

Designed with growing families in mind, Garden Park offers two, three and four-bedroom townhomes priced from $26,950.

Five decorator-furnished models are open to the public at the community, which will have a total of 175 units when completed.

"We feel our new Garden Park townhomes offer more in design and interior amenities than other comparably priced townhomes in the area," stated Mark Bader, general sales manager.

"In addition, the community has been developed with an emphasis on open space and greenbelt areas to provide a true family living environment.

"Townhome living has proven to be one of the most popular forms of housing and we think Garden Park exemplifies the appeal of a more casual and convenient lifestyle," he added.

"Since all exterior maintenance is handled by professional crews, our residents have more leisure time to enjoy the recreational facilities available to them."

EACH Garden Park townhome features wall-to-wall carpeting, an enclosed private garden patio, distinctive wood or masonry trim exterior, cedar shake roofing, ceramic tiling in kitchen and bath areas, custom hand-finished natural wood cabinetry, and complete ceiling and sidewall insulation.

Additional amenities include vinyl tile entries, gas range and oven, dishwasher, cultured marble pullmans, steel sinks and tubs, and decorator light fixtures.

The one and two story townhomes are designed around expansive greenbelt areas and the community recreation center. Homeowners automatically become members of the center and have full use of the large swimming pool, whirlpool, and clubhouse, which includes a fireside lounge, complete kitchen, and bar.

"While our standard features are not commonly found in this price range, our list of options provides the buyer with countless items which enhance the custom-like design of his home," Bader said. "We have a wide variety of exterior designs, as well as a choice of tile and interior color schemes."

Homebuyers may also take advantage of the services provided by Shapell's Decorating Studios, which offer a complete line of home furnishings and accessories and free professional decorating counsel.

Garden Park is located at 12876 Newhope Street, conveniently close to major shopping and educational centers in the area, as well as key employment centers in Garden Grove and Santa Ana.

Garden Park may be reached by taking the Garden Grove Freeway to the Euclid Street exit, proceeding north to Garden Grove Boulevard and east to the model complex.

S & S Construction's parent firm, Shapell, is one of the largest homebuilders in the nation, listed on the New York and Pacific Stock Exchanges. The company began its operations nearly 20 years ago in Orange County and has developed more than 17,000 homes throughout the state and in Colorado.

FAMILY-STYLE RECREATION . . . planned at new Garden Park townhome units

Last weekend for lower prices at Casas del Patio

Prices in effect at the new Casas del Patio Townhomes on Orange Avenue, between Alondra and Artesia Boulevards in Paramount, will be raised a minimum of $1250.00 beginning Monday, June 11, according to Mrs. Jean McKinney, Walker & Lee project manager for the builder, M. B. Johnson Development Co.

AIR CONDITIONING, CARPETS, DRAPES . . . at Casas del Patio townhomes

"We've been holding the current prices as long as we could," Mrs. McKinney stated, "but we can no longer do so. And we are still offering 7 per cent interest, but we have no idea how long that can continue to be in effect.

"So, if families are interested in buying a new home in our close-in convenient location, now is definitely the time to do so, before the prices of our two-story, two and three-bedroom, 1½ and 2½-bath homes go up on the 11th."

The sales price includes a complete move-in package, Mrs. McKinney noted. "Refrigerated air conditioning is included, as are carpets and drapes throughout; kitchens with built-in range, oven, dishwasher and disposer: attached enclosed two-car garages with entrance directly into each home; a fine recreational facility with a heated pool, cabana and fully equipped clubhouse," she said.

Casas del Patio is within a 15 to 30-minute drive of the principal employment centers of the Southeast and southern areas of Los Angeles, the South Bay area, Long Beach and Lakewood.

The juncture of the Artesia (91) Freeway with the Long Beach (7) Freeway is less than a five minute drive with many exits in every direction to serve commuters.

Decorated model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, supervised by Mrs. McKinney, at the location on Orange Avenue, on the border of the city of Long Beach in Paramount.

Westport Cerritos villas close to work, activities

Convenience of location is one of the big factors which has led to the success of the two and three-bedroom townhome community of Westport Cerritos Villas.

Located in Cerritos, the homes are within 30-minute drives of downtown Los Angeles, some of the finest beaches of Southern California, and the center of Orange County.

Recreational facilities, sports centers, major shopping, industry, education, and entertainment areas are all within reach.

Priced from $22,500, the single and two-story villas are replete with extras characteristic of the quality of homes constructed by Westport Home Builders, Inc.

The Anaheim-based building firm has included wall-to-wall carpeting in all primary areas with vinyl asbestos flooring in secondary areas; work saving kitchens feature luminous ceiling panels and all built-in appliances including dishwasher; separate dining areas open onto private patios via sliding glass doors; some plans include vaulted, beamed living room ceiling; plus many other family pleasing features.

The sales facility and furnished models, located on 166th Street, between Norwalk Boulevard and Bloomfield Avenue, is open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Merrick concludes lease

V & S Transportation has moved from the City of Commerce to Long Reach and leased a 7,600-square-foot warehouse at 1100 DeForest Avenue from Reserve Oil and Gas Company.

The building will be used as a truck terminal and general warehouse.

Both lessor and lessee were represented by T. F. Merrick Company, Realtors and Appraisers, Long Beach.

New Brookdale models ready

Models are completed but not decorated at New Brookdale, the McCarthy Company townhome development in Garden Grove, according to William Schulz, executive vice president of marketing for the Southern California Division.

"There is a full sales office at the development site where complete information is available on all floorplans and the location of the individual units within the project," continued Schulz.

"The completed models will give prospective homebuyers an opportunity to see what each plan is like and also allows them to picture the homes with their present furniture."

There will be four different floorplans with two and three bedrooms. Each plan will have its own private patio and enclosed garage.

The homes will be priced from $25,995. Conventional financing will be available with 5 per cent down payment. There will be no second trust deeds or balloon payments and seller will pay all buyers closing costs.

The townhomes will be built in clusters with no one living above or below each individual unit. The new community will have 138 units when completed.

All exterior maintenance of the townhomes, landscaped common areas, parking and walk areas will be done professionally and supervised by the Brookdale Homeowners Association.

The sales office is located at 13351 Newland St., Garden Grove. It is reached via the Garden Grove Freeway to the Beach Boulevard or Magnolia turnoffs. Turn north on Beach or Magnolia to Garden Grove Boulevard and follow the signs to Newland.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Dismay over controls

By DON CAMPBELL

When President Nixon imposed wage, price and rent controls in the late summer of 1971, the wails of dismay wafted across the land like a tropical thunderhead but not because the move was unpopular. Polls indicate that it had tremendous support. The wails of dismay came from those who had lived through controls before and remembered the nightmare of bureaucratic red tape, complexities and plain lack of understanding that surrounds them.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I read your column in the paper and would like you to give me some information. I own a four-family apartment home and would like to know if I'm under any rent control or the present rent freeze.

I live in one of the apartments and rent the other three. — Mrs. R.M. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: You're home free. The cut-off point is four dwelling units — under that number you're exempt from rent controls and over that number you fall under the freeze. I might point out that the magic number is four whether you occupy one of the units, or not. In other words, if you had a five-unit apartment you would still be free of rent controls as long as you were occupying one of them yourself.

MR. CAMPBELL:

We own a home that is worth about $22,000 and we owe nothing on it. We plan to buy a larger home in another area that will cost $26,000. It is a Veteran's Administration home.

We plan to keep our first home and rent it for about $200 a month, which we are told would be very easy to do. On our tax form we realize that we would have to declare the $2,400 as income, although the taxes and the fee to the real estate rental firm would be counted as an expense.

The first question: Would we be able to depreciate the first home on our tax form? One reason we would like to keep the home is that it is all paid for and there is room to build another home later for income property if we desired. Is this a wise decision to make?

Which would be economically our wisest decision? Should we rent our present home and use the income as part of the down payment on the VA house that we plan to buy? Or, should we sell this house and pay cash for the next home in two or three years after we have saved enough to make up the difference? If we waited that long it would not make any difference on the prices of the two homes because they would both go up together. — Mr. V.J. (San Diego, Cal.)

ANSWER: I don't know — somehow I have the distinct impression that the question wandered off in one direction while I took the other fork in the road. Just what IS the question? Is this move really necessary because more room is required? Or are you simply trying to put a heavy equity in an existing home into some sort of a more productive investment?

You insist that you want to keep your present home and buy a larger one — with nothing down — and, on the other hand, you tear down your whole strategy. Once you have rented your home and turned it (for tax purposes) into a piece of income-producing property, the depreciation on it becomes a deductible business expense. But this doesn't strike me as the key problem. You seem to be wallowing in a morass of indecision.

If you MUST get rid of your present home because of space requirements, but want to retain it as a rental property, I suggest that you buy the second home with a substantial down payment, obtain a mortgage that contains no penalty clause for prepayment, and then apply as much of the rental income as possible from the first home against the second home.

I don't know what the whole thing will prove, but it sounds like a lot of exciting, and expensive, paperwork.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I own and manage a small apartment complex and, a few months ago, I rented a two-bedroom unit to a young couple without any children.

Everything was fine until a few weeks ago when, suddenly, the couple was joined by the young man's brother, his wife, and two small children — that makes six people living in a small, two-bedroom apartment and it's a real mess.

I've complained to the tenant but he keeps stalling me on the argument that his brother is "down on his luck" and that the arrangement is temporary. But the other tenants are up in arms over the noise, mainly from the two kids who are real terrors. I don't know which way to turn. — Mr. W.W.P. (Plymouth, Md.)

ANSWER: It's too bad about the brother's bad luck but, at the rate you're going, you're going to end up with a one-apartment tenancy and a vacancy factor that will boggle the mind.

You're going to have to get hard-nosed on the matter. Give the squatters five days to vacate the apartment or evict the whole pack of them. Whether the lease (rental) is oral or written, the apartment was rented to a childless couple. Period.

(Campbell welcomes letters. Questions and problems of general interest will be answered in forthcoming columns. Write him in care of this newspaper.)

Huntington Landmark set for active adults

Huntington Landmark, Signal Landmark Properties' all-adult condominium community in Huntington Beach, is designed to cater to the tastes of active adults desiring a relaxed, recreation-oriented lifestyle.

"The community features a complete range of recreational facilities," said Cliff Pahlman, sales director at the site. "The large recreation center has a beautiful clubhouse with facilities for numerous group and social activities. There are dining and card rooms, a billiard room, classrooms, art studio, photo lab, pottery and wood shops and all purpose rooms.

"Outdoor recreation includes a putting green, large swimming pool, a hot water whirlpool bath and two tennis courts."

Security of residents is also assured. A block wall surrounds the community and an entrance which is manned 24-hours-a-day by security guards.

Pahlman said the first phase of 176 units is more than one-third sold. Homes in the $4.7 million first phase are priced from $20,990 to $34,790, with excellent conventional financing terms available.

"Huntington Landmark has been designed to meet the needs of the residents in terms of comfort and enjoyment," Pahlman added. "The large lawns, beautiful walkways and complete landscaping will provide the community with a relaxed, environmentally pleasing atmosphere which is certain to enhance the attractiveness of living here."

SIX FLOOR plans are offered in the first phase of the project. They feature one, two or three bedrooms and one or two baths. Each unit is allocated an enclosed garage with built in storage, as well as an additional parking space.

There are one and two story buildings, with all plans available on either a first or second floor.

Special features include wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, bedrooms and hallways, and electric cable ceiling heat to insure silent, efficient and clean heating.

Other features are walk-in closets in most models, deluxe-equipped all-electric kitchens, and utility rooms that include and installed washer-dryer.

All homes also have either a private patio or a view balcony overlooking the expansive greenbelt areas.

The Huntington Landmark site is located on Atlanta Avenue between Newland and Magnolia Streets. It may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by taking either Magnolia Street or Beach Boulevard south to Atlanta. From the Pacific Coast Highway, take Beach Boulevard north to Atlanta.

The sales office and models are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Boise Cascade to up its expenditures

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The president of Boise Cascade says the climate appears ripe for good growth in several of its businesses. As a result, the corporation announced Tuesday that it plans to spend $115 million this year on capital expansion instead of the $75 million previously planned.

John B. Fery, nearing the end of his first year as chief executive, said the additional outlay "will enable the company to take advantage of a number of investment opportunities offering excellent returns."

Boise Cascade ventured into new fields a few years ago and suddenly found itself over-extended. The firm retrenched, selling off its unprofitable properties in Latin America, recreation development and real estate.

Cash from those sales, Fery said, put Boise Cascade in a good position to invest.

Fery said the corporation will pay cash for this year's expansion and will not have to acquire new debts.

The original expansion plan this year called for construction of a new composite can plant, a manufactured housing facility, two office products distribution centers and a small log sawmill.

FERY SAID the company now also plans to expand production capacities and improve operating efficiency at a number of other facilities which manufacture wood products, kitchen cabinets, paper, corrugated containers and composite cans.

Fery said Boise Cascade plans to fully develop existing operations and diversify into closely related businesses before looking into any more new fields. He said the firm plans to add to its timber holdings, which now cover over seven million acres of owned and leased lands.

DESIGN FOR PEOPLE

Dark colors back

By EMILY MALINO

It's true! Dark colors are back in style and for all kinds of reasons this is good news. Like a mask, dark colors provide both mystery and a disguise.

The mysterious quality results from contrast — between the bright white we have used so uniformly for a decade and the new deep, richness of the blues, rusts, greens and browns we are seeing reborn in today's interiors.

That dark colors disguise is plain common sense. White is a grand background for splendid furniture and great paintings or sculpture. White enhances each shape because the forms are so easily revealed against the light color.

DARK colors, on the other hand, swallow shapes and details. If you have a lot of miscellaneous furniture as most of us do, the best way to blur it all together is a good, rich, deep color.

Dark tones help a room with a lot of blank wall space and very little art. A rich rust or deep blue wall can easily take up the slack by filling the room with color.

The freshest of the new deep colors is brown. It is a very old-fashioned color that virtually disappeared from the home fashions palette in paint, floor coverings and upholstery for at least 20 years.

But today brown is big. Not only does it adapt equally well to both traditional and modern shapes, it also provides a happy bridge between the two in the new electric style that adapts so happily to our way of life.

IN A ROOM of rather ordinary proportions, for example, I painted the walls in a rich deep brown about the color of milk chocolate. For contrast, I painted the trim white and used white shutters at the windows to balance the dark color.

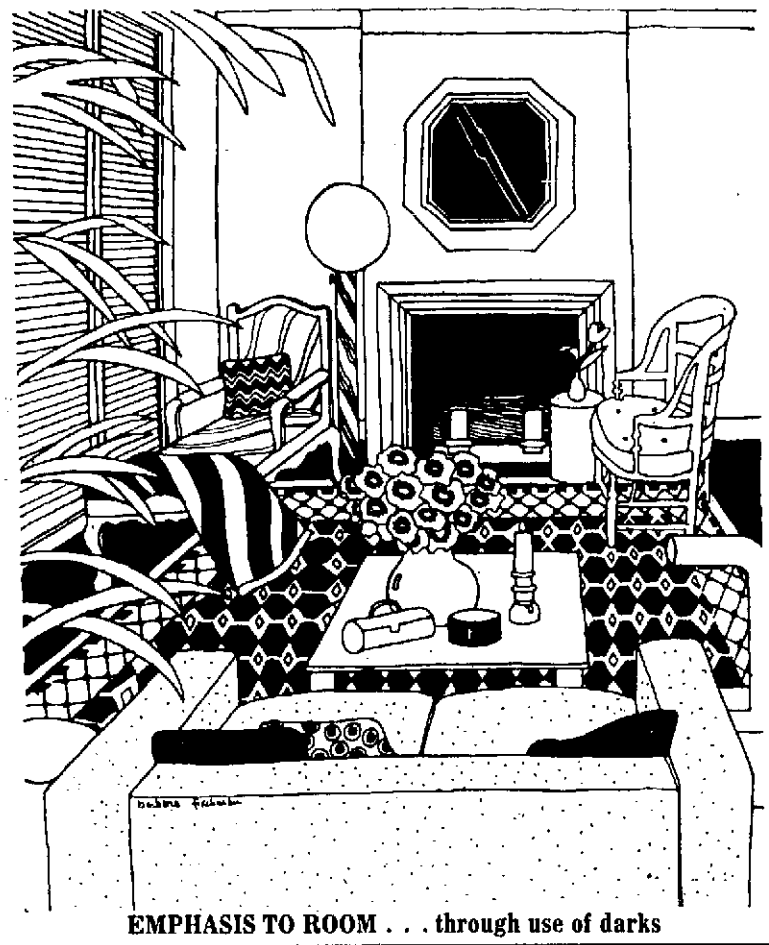

The furniture I wanted to group was a melange of modern: a classic sofa, glass-topped table and modern lamps and found treasures — a chaise of dubious derivation and a delicate chair.

This antique of no value had at one time been upholstered all over, but some thoughtful owner had simply knocked the stuffing out of the back leaving the frame which, when painted white, looks unbelieveably elegant.

AN AREA rug in a geometric combining browns, black and white is just the opening statement in a blend of patterns that includes upholstery and occasional pillows.

All of these oddities of pattern and style and size are happily married in the brown background of the walls, bringing it all together very much like the almonds in a chocolate bar and just as delicious to look at.

Name to Dart Resorts

Dart Industries Inc. of Los Angeles has announced a change in name for its division engaged in the creation and development of exclusive resort-residential communities.

Formerly known as Lakeworld, the division now is called Dart Resorts.

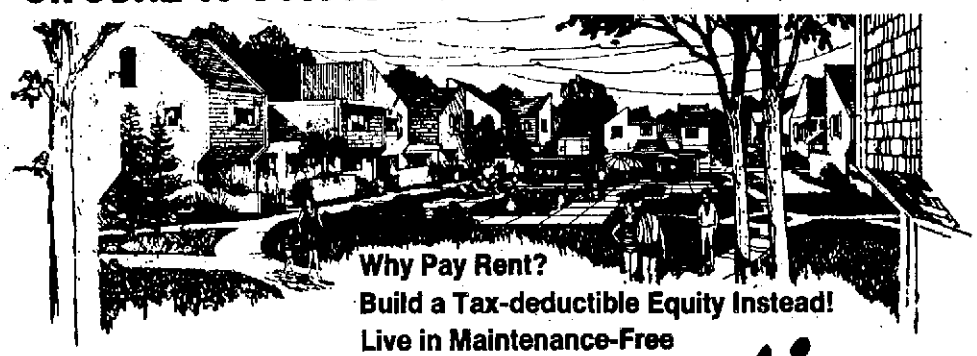

Terence Ragan, president, said the new name more accurately describes the activities and nature of the division.

"Dart Resorts, headquartered in Marina del Rey, is engaged in the creation of high quality resort residential communities, offering resort home living in a private club setting, designed specifically for the enjoyment of the entire family," Ragan said.

"We are not in the recreational land sales business and we are definitely not in the land investment business. Lakes are just one of the varied resort facilities offered at our communities."

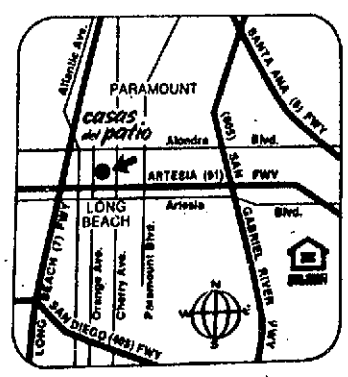

Dart Resorts is developing Tahoe Donner, in the High Sierra, 16 miles north of Lake Tahoe.

Hodges open in Cerritos-Artesia

Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L Hodges Realty Company, has announced the opening of Hodges' new Cerritos-Artesia sales center at 17607 Pioneer Blvd., part of a new shopping center on Pioneer just south of Artesia Boulevard.

WESTMYER (L), ROCHA . . . at opening

It will service the rapid growing Cerritos-Artesia area.

This is Hodges' 18th Southern California residential resale center managed by Alex Rocha, who previously managed the Bellflower office.

"We're ideally located in the center of the fastest growing part of Orange County," Rocha stated. "Several Hodges sales associates already have requested transfer to the new facility, designed for 18 sales associates.

"We specialize in GI no-down payments, FHA and 95 per cent loan programs in addition to offering Rex Hodges exclusive no-payment equity loans for families being transferred or awaiting sale of their previous home," Rocha said.

REX L HODGES serves 45 communities through a network of neighborhood offices. Three additional locations are presently under construction and are scheduled for opening in July and August.

Sales associates are trained for the expansion program in a separate Hodges training center centrally located in Cypress, which incorporates closed-circuit television, audio-visual, classroom workshop and field techniques.

Construction has been completed on two buildings in Los Alamitos by Vanderson Construction, Inc., of San Jose and both have been leased to Viking Delivery Service of Santa Clara, announce George F. Van Sickle, president of the construction firm.

Richard Bingham is president of the contract trucking service and Tracy Baxter the manager of the Los Alamitos operation.

Don Arnett of Grubb & Ellis Co.'s Los Angeles office represented both purchaser and seller of the property, Mrs. Otelia Nelson of Paramount.

The buildings are located on two acres at the corner of Sausalito, Regan and Serpentine.

Olson's program Monday

Forest E. Olson, Inc., Realtors, offer a presentation, "Meet the Professionals," Monday at 8 p.m. in the Monopoly Room of the Royal Inn, Anaheim, for men and women considering real estate as a new career, according to Jack LaMontia, director of personnel.

Open to the public with no admission fee, the event will feature John Lumbleau, president of the Lumbleau Real Estate Schools, who will speak on "Real Estate As Your Career," and Rose Lane, marketing manager at Forest Olson, who will speak on the high potential for women in real estate.

Hosting will be Olson sales management staff and top sales representatives.

Old barriers for handicapped seen

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Many "unintentional" moats exist in buildings today and are just as effective as those of the Middle Ages in keeping millions of persons from entering numerous structures.

That's the view of Dr. Lois Schwab, an associate professor at the University of Nebraska in the Education and Family Resources Division.

She described as "moats" flights of steps, heavy, narrow or revolving doors, or a series of doors too close together.

For the 22 million persons in the United States who have chronic physical handicaps, these architectural barriers are virtual "keep out" signs barring these individuals from entering buildings, she said.

Dr. Schwab said the situation is not unavoidable because in most cases, buildings can be constructed so they are accessible to persons in wheelchairs, those using crutches, or those with limited energy.

She noted further than laws now require that all buildings constructed with federal and/or state money must be accessible to all perons — that is built without architectural barriers.

The laws make mandatory the Buildings Standards approved by the U.S. Standards Institute and include these specifications:

— At least one building entrance at ground level.

— Doors 32 inches wide.

— Doors that open easily.

— Thresholds flush with the floor and when feasible, ramps with a gradual slope instead of stairs.

— Level walks with no curbs at crossways.

Industrial building financed

Western Mortgage Corporation has arranged $275,000 in permanent financing for an industrial warehouse building in Irvine.

The warehouse, located at the corner of Airway and McCormick, is owned by Allan Fainbarg.

The 28,867-square-foot structure contains 3,420 square feet of air-conditioned office space and amenities in the office area include accoustical ceilings with flush fluorescent lighting, sheet rock walls, and carpet and vinyl tile floors.

The warehouse portion features four dock-high steel roll-up doors and has a 23-foot minimum clearance under trusses.

Grant Company picks W. Claus

William H. Claus III has been named vice president-marketing for Grant Company of California, it was announced by Anthony Allen, president of the Santa Ana-based division of Grant Corporation.

Claus returns to southern California after serving as vice president-marketing for another Grant division, Grant Company of Hawaii in Honolulu, for two years.

Prior to joining the Grant organization, Claus was assistant vice president and general sales manager for Avco Community Developers at Rancho Bernardo.

He also was affiliated with Macco Realty Company as manager of residential sales, and operated his own real estate agency in Yucca Valley.

Grant Corporation, headquartered in Newport Beach, is the homebuilding and land development subsidiary of Santa Anita Consolidated, Inc.

The firm, which has built more than 12,000 homes, currently has 11 major residential projects under development in Northern and Southern California, Hawaii, Arizona and Nevada.

IN GARDEN GROVE

Commercial center planned by Deutsch

Builder-developer Naftali "Tuli" Deutsch has announced tentative plans to develop a commercial center featuring a 32-lane bowling alley at the corner of Valley View Street and Chapman Avenue in Garden Grove.

Deutsch said the $3 million center will also include a luxurious 8,000-square-foot restaurant and an 80-room Senior Citizen Retirement Residence. The project will cover more than six cres on the southwest corner of the intersection.

Deutsch is a principal of Westbrook Development Company, currently building a commercial and residential project on Westminster Avenue in Garden Grove. That project includes the 130-unit Westbrook Townhomes and a commercial center highlighted by the largest privately owned indoor ice arena in the country.

"Application has been made to the City of Garden Grove for approval of this new project," Deutsch said.

The architect for the project will be John Reed of Reed & Reed of Beverly Hills. Construction financing will be provided by Southern California Savings & Loan.

La Mirada Landmark nears completion

Progress of construction is seen at La Mirada Landmark, Glenwood Properties' all-adult condominium community in La Mirada.

The models and sales office are nearly completed, with the first production units and portions of the complex to follow shortly.

The community will feature six floor plans in a variety of building types, some of which will be split-level to take advantage of the rolling hills at the site.

Eventually to total nearly 1400 units, valued at more than $43 million.

TREASURER

Arnold Gietz, formerly an officer of Beverly Hills Bancorp., has been named corporate treasurer for The Larwin Group, Inc., housing producer.

Adult units' financing arranged

First California Title Company will provide conventional financing terms to buyers at Pacific Park Homes, an all-adult condominium community in Santa Ana.

Rod Roesch, president of Mattwood Property Development Corporation, operating the apartment conversion project, said the terms will include a 5 per cent down payment plan and an APR interest rate of 8½ per cent.

Three floor plans are featured in the project at prices ranging from $15,950 to $19,950. A home-trade plan is also available through sales counsellors Walker & Lee. The sales office is at 2101 S. Pacific Ave., Santa Ana.

Day Realty opens in Clemente

Home offices for the newly established firm of Charles P. Day Realty, Inc. have been opened in San Clemente to handle new home developments for builders.

C. P. DAY

Owner and founder, Charles P. Day, has been active in the sales and marketing field for 20 years.

He has represented prominent builders including Douglass-Pacific Corp., Carlsberg Construction Company, Biddle-Kavanaugh Development Company, William T. Lyons and Cabot, Cabot and Forbes and Great Oak Management Company.

The sales staff in the San Clemente office will coordinate activities with branch offices in areas local to builder's developments, Day said.

The new offices are located at 647 Camino de LLOS Mares, San Clemente.

What realty boards are doing

CLYDE BROWN, President of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, has announced the Long Beach Board again is sponsoring an essay contest.

Purpose is to involve the young adults of California in the Realtors' public relations program of motivating young people to think and write about the country in which they live.

The essay should be entitled: "Dialogue on Making America Better." Any young adult 25 years of age or under wishing to express his views may participate.

One winner of high school level or under and one winner of college level to 25 years of age shall be selected.

An introductory paragraph should be developed to identify the subject matter of the "Dialogue." The "Dialogue" should be a minimum of 500 words and a maximum of 1,000 words. It should be typed, printed, or legibly written in double spaced lines, on one side of paper, and present a "clean and neat appearance," Brown said.

Official covers for the dialogue may be obtained from the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, 3747 Long Beach Blvd. Deadline for all entries is July 15th.

This contest winner will participate in the state contest (California Real Estate Association).

Winner of that contest will receive $500 cash, a plaque properly inscribed and all expenses paid to the annual California Real Estate Association state convention in October.

ED DEAL, program chairman, said the speaker for Tuesday, at 7:15 a.m. at the Queen's Restaurant, will be Larry Dickey, customer rela-ons area manager, West st Title Co.

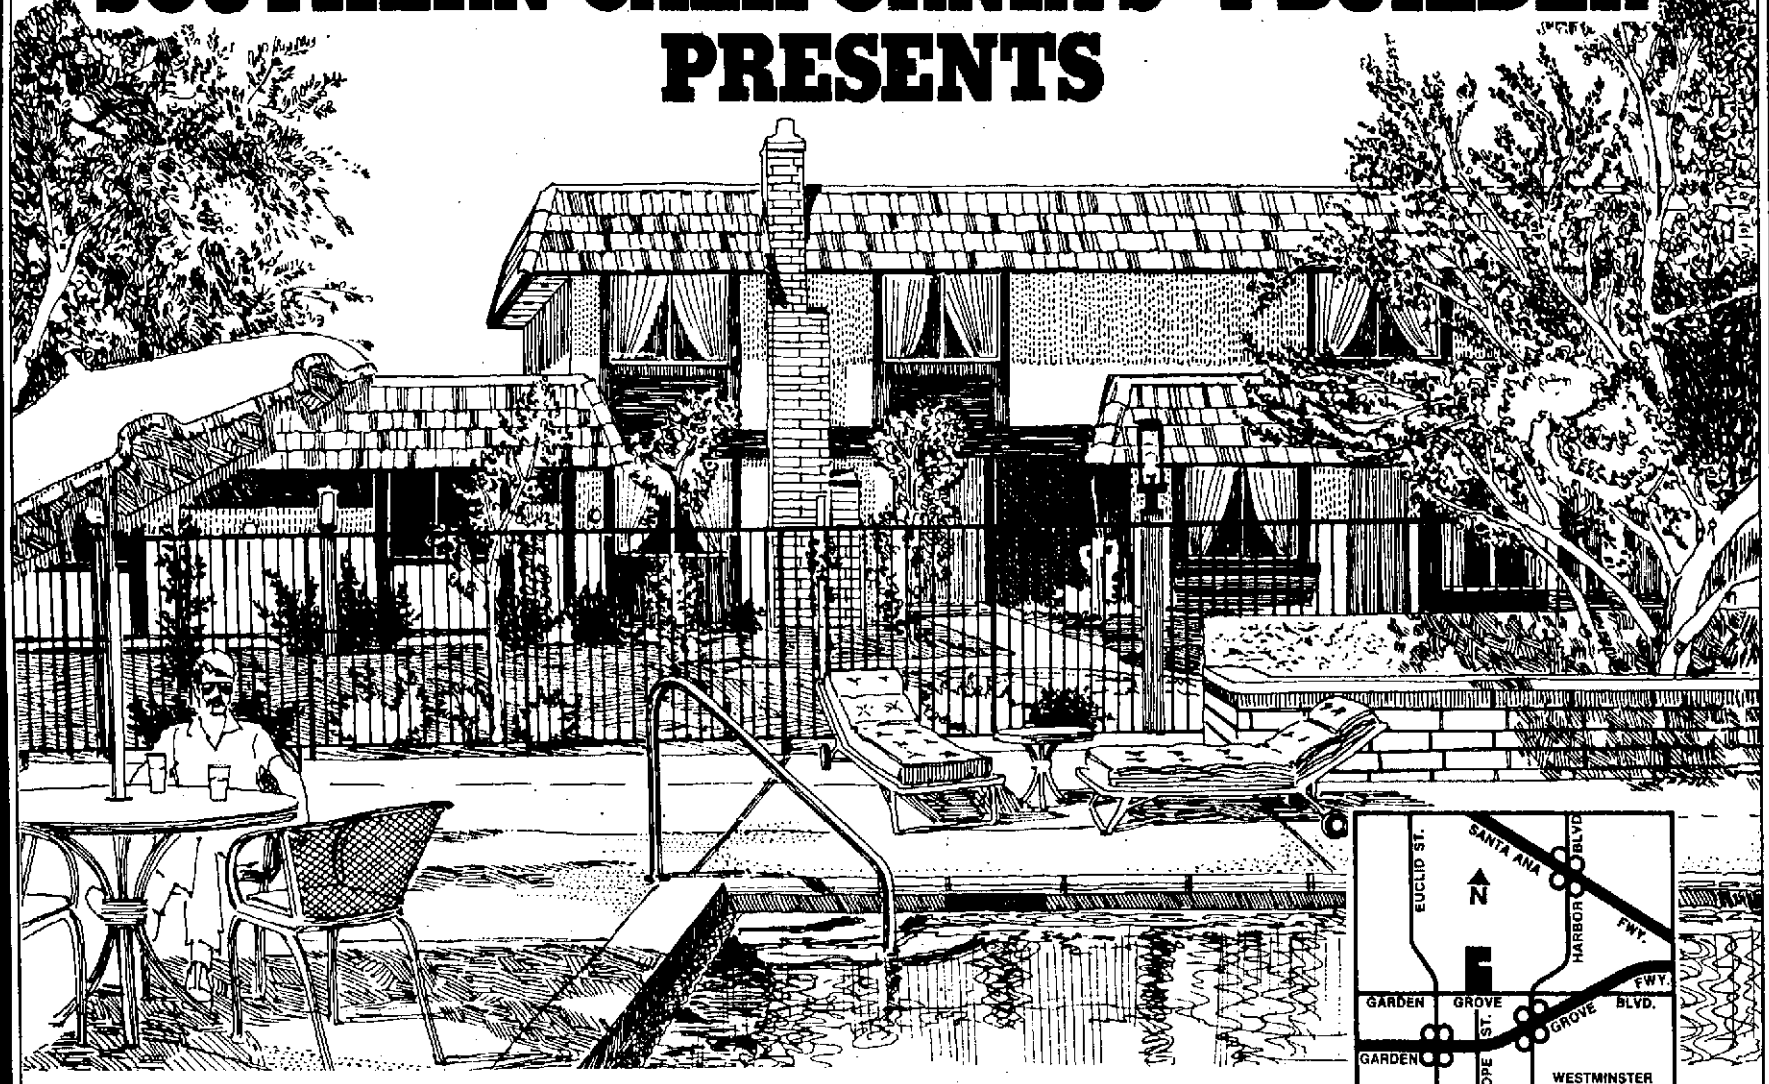

ickey will show a e entitled "You Pack wn Shoot."

RLC

The Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors co-sponsored an educational seminar with the California Real Estate Association last week on the subject, "Selling Real Estate," by Patrick J. Neylan, president of the board, said.

Held at the Rancho Los Cerritos Board Office, 10140 E. Alondra Blvd., Bellflower, the all-day session was open to anyone, but earned a unit of credit for Board and CREA members toward the Graduate, Realtors Institute (GRI) certificate and designation.

PROFESSIONAL (2) SALESMEN
If you are over 40 & not earning $25,000 per year, you may be selling your talent short!
We are a 50 year L.B. established firm, selling a much needed product that requires the highest caliber sales talent.
Recently we hired a salesman who introduced a new selling technique to our business that will earn him $35,000 this year. His sales effort is confined into the L.B. area.
Appointments are pre-set by phone. Commissions average over $200 per sale, with a 60% to 80% close ratio. We have asked him to find two (2) men to train in his method. He has agreed to share his success story with you, if you're the man we're looking for.

There's Something Unchanging About Classified Ads

She read Classified Ads when little Billy's mother was a baby ... just as her daughter reads Independent, Press-Telegram Classified Ads today. That's because now, as it was in the past, there's no better place to find good buys in things baby needs ... cribs, strollers, chests, play pens, high chairs, baby scales, toys, diaper service — and, even a baby sitter when Grandmother is busy.

Turn to today's Classified Ads and see how many items and services you find to make life happier and easier for you and your baby.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

HELEN A. BINGHAM

Personal attention to every detail, with experience and reliability, has been the keynote of her large referral business, according to Helen A. Bingham, this week's Realtor of the Week.

After 8 years as a Real Estate Salesman, Mrs. Bingham became a Broker and opened her office at 1509 East Artesia Blvd., Long Beach, where she is still located.

A native Iowan, Mrs. Bingham has been living in Long Beach since 1933. As a wife and mother, she has always been active in Church and Community affairs, including the North Long Beach United Methodist Church, various Girl Scout and Camp Fire Girl Organizations and many other groups. A willing worker for United Way, Heart Fund, March of Dimes and many other campaigns, her first love has always been youth groups.

A good rapport with all ages, a willingness to listen to people's problems, being honest and ethical, have all contributed to her success as a Realtor.

THE RUNNERS ARE COMING

MORE THAN 1,000 runners were in a hurry at the start of Saturday's 7th Palos Verdes Marathon just so they wouldn't run over one another. Not all of those who started out from Rolling Hills High finished 26 mile, 385-yard grind, but one, Harbor JC student Thomas Powell, did win. Additional details on Pg. S-4.

HI YO, SECRETARIAT—AWAY!

'What's keeping you guys?'

Jockey Ron Turcotte turns in disbelief, wondering what's happened to rest of field in Belmont Stakes Saturday. Mrs. Penny Tweedy, owner of Secretariat, doesn't hide her feelings after horse completed winning Triple Crown with unbelievable 31-length victory in American record 2:24.0 for mile and one-half.

31-length record romp climaxes first Triple Crown in 25 years

NEW YORK (UPI) — Secretariat, running everyone else into the ground with one of the most eye-popping performances in turf history, stamped himself a horse for the ages Saturday when he smashed an American record while winning the $150,200 Belmont Stakes by an unbelievable 31 lengths to capture the first Triple Crown in 25 years.

In 1948, Citation accomplished the feat, but of Secretariat his trainer, Lucien Laurin, said, "I think he's a better horse."

Off his unprecedented performance, Secretariat very well may be that.

No horse in the previous 104 runnings of this classic ever won the Belmont by such a large margin, and Secretariat's clocking of 2:24 flat set a record for the mile and a half distance.

The previous American record of 2:26 1/5 was set by Going Abroad at Aqueduct on Oct. 12, 1964. The fastest mile and a half ever run was a 2:23 performance by Fiddle Isle at Santa Anita on Feb. 23, 1970, but that mark was set on a downhill turf course.

"I wondered a bit when I saw those early fractions, wondered if he was going too fast," Laurin said. "But I told myself that Ronnie (jockey Ron Turcotte) knows the horse and that made me feel better.

"I felt better all through the stretch when he was drawing out and still running like a gem."

Turcotte, who has ridden Secretariat in all three of the Triple Crown victories — the Kentucky Derby, Preakness Stakes and now The Belmont — said he decided to go for the record Saturday when he was halfway through the stretch and could see the fractions on the tote board.

"I just let him run his own race, but when I saw the Tele-Timer and knew we could have a record, I did ask him for a little speed in the last 70 yards."

By that time Turcotte had plenty of room for clock-watching.

"Secretariat pulled away on his own down the backstretch and I never asked him to," Turcotte said.

"I knew he had a chance at the record. He had been fast, but he still had more when I asked him and he got the record. Real good, too."

As the huge crowd of 69,138 cheered their favorite every step of the way on a sunny, 90-degree day, Secretariat never let up as he easily broke the stakes record of 2:26 3/5 set in 1957 by Gallant Man.

series was a two-horse race — but only for half its distance.

Secretariat, who set a track record in winning the Kentucky Derby by 2½ lengths and then unofficially was credited with one in winning the Preakness Stakes by the same margin, battled arch rival Sham in the early stages of the event.

Brown's homer beats 2-hitter by Rudy, 1-0

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Bobby Winkles, caught up in a reflective mood, played professor and analyzed the character of Rudy May Saturday night.

"Maybe," the manager of the Angels volunteered, "we've messed with Rudy too much. Perhaps the secret is just to let him go out and pitch."

Winkles handed May the ball Saturday night and May responded eloquently, holding the Milwaukee Brewers to two hits.

Unfortunately, one of them was Ollie Brown's homer and that run was sufficient for Jim Colborn and Frank Linzy to zero the Angels, 1-0, before a handsome turnout of 22,576 at the Big A.

The Angels, of course, have been trying to find out what makes Rudy tick for years how. It is a puzzle that has proven tougher than a cure for cancer.

Possessed of rare, raw talent, May annually has to struggle to achieve mediocrity.

Chances are now that the Angels will let him do his thing—without parental guidance or interference.

Back in the rotation after missing a turn earlier this week because of an acute case of ineffectiveness, May opened the game by retiring the first 13 Brewers who stepped into the batter's box.

The 14th was Brown, Milwaukee's designated hitter. He ripped May's first pitch on the line over the left field fence to settle the issue then and there.

Colborn, plucked from the Chicago Cubs in the off-season, has emerged as a pitcher of prominence. His record is now 7-2 and his ERA is a microscopic 1.79.

Twice in succession he has shut out the Angels, although he needed eigth-inning relief held from Linzy Saturday after Tom McCraw walked with one out and Ken Berry delivered the second of his two singles—exactly one-half the Angel output.

Linzy promptly induced Al Gallagher to bounce into a double play.

Colborn entered the game having pitched two shutouts in his last three starts and he was working on a four-hitter when Milwaukee manager Del Crandall removed him.

The victory was the sev-

Say Hey for old time's sake: Mays does in Dodgers, 4-2

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

NEW YORK — It was kind of old times for Willie Mays Saturday.

There were 47,800 fans at Shea Stadium, cheering his every move. They yelled when he was introduced and howled when he swung the bat. They even applauded when the Dodgers finally struck him out.

He homered for the first time this year, made a fantastic diving, sprawling, tumbling catch of a drive by Willie Davis and scored one of the Mets' runs, racing home all the way from first.

It's the kind of things Willie Howard Mays Jr. used to do every day. At 42, he doesn't do them every day, or even once a week, anymore.

But Saturday, as the Mets clipped the Dodgers, 4-2, it was Mays at his finest, like he played two decades ago, first in Big Town, later in San Francisco.

"I felt good," he said after hitting his first homer to push his total base total past 6,000 — only the third man ever to do so.

"Tomorrow? I just don't know."

It is the tomorrows, not the yesterdays, which plague the former New York and San Francisco Giant.

It is said he's merely a showpiece for the Mets' owner, Mrs. Joan Payson, who purchased him at great expense last year from the Giants' Horace Stoneham.

While the deal supplied ample cash for the Giants' till, it also presented something of a migraine for Yogi Berra, the Mets' pixie manager.

Simply, if Willie can't play, who can? The answer: no one — so far, at least.

"I'll just have to see how Willie feels tomorrow," Berra said when asked if Mays will be able to play again in today's game. "I'll have to see how his shoulder feels."

It is an ailing right shoulder, a lingering injury, which forced the Mets to place Mays on the disabled list. He came off the list just last week, played in an exhibition game Thursday night in Virginia but couldn't play Friday night against the Dodgers.

Saturday he announced he could play. The Dodgers wished he hadn't.

"He swung as good as I've ever seen him swing," said an impressed Al Downing, the man who served up Willie's 655th career homer and first since August 18, 1972.

"The first time he was up I pitched him carefully," Downing said. "But after that I knew I wasn't going to overpower him. Yes, it was a fast ball he hit."

Mays says it's his infrequent playing, not his age, which prevents him from swinging good every time to the plate.

"You can't have a good swing playing once a week," he said.

"But I hope I am swinging better. Maybe I can help lift these guys a little. As for feeling good, sometimes I feel good and play bad, other times I feel bad but play good."

The Mets are sorely in need of hitting — any kind

Heat's on — 'Pre,' UCLA roll

Combined News Services

BATON ROUGE, La. — Oregon's Steve Prefontaine captured his fourth successive 3-mile championship in record time, UCLA won the team title again and eight runners broke four minutes in the mile Saturday to wrap up the 52nd annual National Collegiate Athletic Assn. track and field championships.

Prefontaine, running virtually alone in the latter stages of the race, covered the distance in 13:05.3 despite sweltering 90-degree temperatures at the Louisiana State University track stadium.

The time broke Prefontaine's own meet record of 13:20.1 set two years ago.

Defending champion Dave Wottle of Bowling Green captured the mile in 3:57.1, running the final quarter in 53 seconds to smash the meet record of 3:57.6 set by Villanova's Marty Liquori, a three-time champion in 1971.

In all, six NCAA meet records were broken on a day UCLA piled up 56 points to win its third team championship in a row.

Pac-8 rival Oregon (31 points), BYU and Arizona State (26 each) and Tennessee (24) trailed.

The Bruins had already wrapped up the championship Saturday before their mile relay team captured that event for the fifth year in a row.

Ron Gaddis, Gordon Peppars, Maxie Parks and Benny Brown clocked 3:04.3, seventh-tenths of a second ahead of both Texas and Arizona State.

The Bruins also got come through performances Saturday from Milan Tiff in the triple jump with a record 54-2¾; Brown and Parks who were second and fifth in the 440; Long Beach's Rory Kotinek who cleared a lifetime best 7-1 to claim fourth in the high jump and Dale Gordon who was fifth in the discus at 181-6.

Wottle appeared to coast down the final stretch, looking over both shoulders, at a pair of

There's no place like Wrigley Field to hit homers, sayeth Tony Perez

CHICAGO (UPI) — If Tony Perez had his life to live over he would spend it in Wrigley Field.

According to coach Alex Grammas, if Perez and teammate Johnny Bench were playing for the Chicago Cubs, they would break every home run mark ever established in baseball.

Perez and Bench teamed up to drive in four runs during a wild seven-run ninth inning rally Saturday to produce a shocking 8-4 decision over the Cubs before a national television audience.

Perez, who has now hit 19 home runs out of his total of 194 in Wrigely Field, commented: "I would like to spend my life in this ball park. In fact I know I could probably break Babe Ruth's record."

It was Bench's single off Jack Aker that gave Cincinnati a 5-4 lead.

"I think we proved something to ourselves today," Bench said. "We've been in games in which we had a chance but could not come through in the late innings. Other than earlier this week when we scored four in the 10th to beat the Mets its been rare for us to come from behind. But mentally now I think we've found we can score big."

The Reds, held in check by Dave LaRoche, who replaced starter Ferguson Jenkins in the top of the seventh, collected four singles, a double and a homer and were aided by two walks off four pitchers in putting together their biggest inning of the season.

When LaRoche walked rookie Dan Driessen to open the ninth, he was replaced by Bob Locker. Locker got Dave Concepcion on a fly ball but gave up consecutive singles to Cesar Geronimo and pinch-hitter Larry Stahl to make it 4-2.

Pete Rose grounded out to short to score Geronimo with the second run of the inning. Locker was replaced by loser Larry Gura, who walked Joe Morgan. Bobby tolan then slashed a single up the middle to score Stahl with the tying run and bring in Aker.

Bench greeted the veteran Aker with a sharp single to left to score Morgan with the go-ahead run. Perez than hit Aker's first pitch clear out of Wrigley Field for his 11th homer of the year.

DODGERS— Only 26 shy of Ruth of hitting — and if it comes from Mays, a man who's a rather expensive trinket, well, so much the better.

Rusty Staub, the only regular hitting over .270, supplied the biggest punch for the Mets who have won only four games in the last 21 days while watching Chicago open a gaping lead in the National League East.

Staub doubled twice, singled and drove in three of the four New York runs.

It was enough for young Jon Matlack to record his third win in 11 decisions, snapping a personal four-game losing streak.

The Dodgers opened quickly with a run in the first when Dave Lopes doubled — the first of his three hits to jump his average to .342 — stole third and scored on Davis' infield out.

The Mets got two in the first. The Dodgers tied it with an unearned run in the third when Lopes scored from third after Mays' capture of Davis' drive which carried to the wall, and then New York broke the tie in the bottom of the third on Mays' homer.

But the O'Malleys played themselves out of a possible big inning in the seventh.

Tom Paciorek opened with a pinch single and Lopes singled him to third. With Bill Buckner at the plate, Lopes broke for second and got caught in a run-down. Paciorek feigned a break for the plate several times before Lopes finally was caught. Then, amazingly, Paciorek darted for the plate and was thrown out by 15 feet.

For the baseball connoisseur, the double play was scored 1-3-6-3-4-3-9-2.

Everyone handled the ball except Mays which is one reason why it took so long to get 'em out.

DODGER DOPE: Yogi Berra was a triple winner Saturday. He won the game from the Dodgers, drove in a run in the Oldtimers Game that preceded the Dodgers-Mets game and also had his horse in the clubhouse Belmont Stakes pool scratched . . . Biggest baseball name in New York? It's still Joe DiMaggio. He got by far the biggest applause when he was introduced. A close second was Casey Stengel . . . The Mets formally retired the No. 14 uniform of their last manager, Gil Hodges.

Since learning he was the player of the month for May, Willie Crawford has gone 0-for-7, striking out five times. "The last two days I haven't had breakfast," said Willie. "You can bet I will Sunday" . . . Pitching today's series finale will be Claude Osteen (6-3) and Jerry Koosman (5-4). The game will be screened on KTTV (11) at 11:15 a.m.

DODGER OF DAY

DAVE LOPES doubled and singled twice in 4-2 loss to New York.

Aaron hits pair, raises career HR total to 688

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron hit two home runs Saturday night to close within 26 of Babe Ruth's career record and powered Atlanta to an 8-2 triumph over St. Louis, the Braves, fourth successive victory.

The 39-year-old Aaron, now in his 20th season, has 15 home runs this year and a career total of 688.

Aaron's homers were among four hit by the Braves in support of knuckleballer Phil Niekro who picked up his fifth victory against two defeats with only two days rest. Niekro worked seven innings before giving way to Tom House in the Eighth.

Marty Perez got the Braves started in the second with a two-run homer, his second of the season. Aaron made it 3-0 in the third when he led off with his first homer of the night and the Braves went out in front 6-0 in the fifth when Aaron hit No. 2. Dave Johnson followed with a two-run homer, his 10th of the year.

enth in eight games for the revitalized Brewers while the Angels slipped four games behind the Chicago White Sox in the American League West.

"Damn," moaned Winkles, "it's tough to lose 'em like that. Rudy's pitching was the whole story. There wasn't much else to get excited about."

May, who faced only 29 batters, struck out nine and walked one in his masterful performance.

Masterful, that is, except for one pitch. The one to Ollie Brown which he'd like to have back.

ANGEL ANGLES: Bob Oliver, still wrestling with a bout of the flu, was given the night off by manager Bobby Winkles Saturday. Ollie's average has also been sick, dipping .248 although he is tied with Frank Robinson for the club lead in RBI with 31. . . .Catcher John Stepehson was in the starting lineup for the first time since April 27.

The Milwaukee series winds up today with Bill Singer (10-2) dueling Jim Slaton (2-5). It will also be Disneyland Fun Day ... General manager Harry Dalton and his Milwaukee counterpart, Jim Wilson, were observed in serious discussion Saturday night. Could it be a deal for catcher Ellie Rodriguez is in the making?. . .The Angels have soared past the 300,000 mark in attendance and the crowd count is up almost 100,000 over last year.

The Angels announced a minor league transaction Saturday, sending infielder Ron Clark from Salt Lake City to Hawaii in exchange for veteran relief pitcher Aurelio Monteagudo.

Holtzman notches 11th victory with two-hitter

OAKLAND (UPI) — Reggie Jackson drove in three runs with a double and infield out and Ken Holtzman pitched a two-hit shutout for his 11th victory Saturday in leading Oakland to a 4-0 triumph over Detroit.

Jackson drove in Oakland's first run during a two-run first inning rally and delivered two more in the eighth to push his RBI total to nine in the last three games and to 46 for the season.

Holtzman gave up a single to Mickey Stanley leading off the game, then retired 20 batters in order before Willie Horton doubled with two out in the seventh. He wound up the game by retiring the next seven batters in order and needed only 88 pitches to accomplish the victory.

Holtzman struck out six and didn't issue a walk. His record now stands at 11-3. He also reduced his earned run average 1.50.

Jim Perry started for the Tigers and left in the middle of the seventh. He went down to his fourth loss in 11 decisions.

Trojans weather first-round joust

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Defending champion Southern Cal and Texas weathered first round tests after Oklahoma survived an elimination battle Saturday at the 27th College World Series.

Southern Cal struck with two first-inning runs and held on to edge Harvard, 4-1, behind the steady five-hit pitching of Mark Barr.

Ron Roznovsky had spaced six hits and freshman star Keith Moreland crashed a three-run homer, helping Texas to a 6-3 victory over stubborn Georgia Southern.

Southern Cal and Texas will meet in the evening windup of today's three-game program after Minnesota and Arizona State square off in the other matchup of first round winners. Georgia Southern and Harvard open the third-day card.

Oklahoma rode the one-hit pitching of another freshman standout — lefthander Bob Shirley — to a 6-0 victory that eliminated Penn State earlier Saturday. The only hit off Shirley was a two-out single in the eighth by Garry Koch.

Barr was in control throughout and the Trojans backed him with 10 hits against Harvard's Roz Brayton. Ed Bowman, who drove in two runs, and Roy Smalley each had three for Southern Cal.

Bowman's infield grounder and Ken Huizenga's double brought in runs in the Southern Cal first inning. Bowman singled home another run in the fifth and Smalley singled and scored the final run on a seventh-inning error in the outfield.

Barr lost his shutout bid in the third on a single off his pitching hand by Leigh Hogan. Brayton had opened the inning with a single off Barr's glove.

Roznovsky, a hard-throwing righthander, allowed no more than one hit in any inning, walked none and struck out four. Two of Georgia Southern's three runs were unearned in a game of seven errors.

Buccos blitz wild Wilson

HOUSTON (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates took advantage of Don Wilson's fifth inning wildness to score four runs and defeat Houston, 4-1, Saturday night.

After Wilson walked the bases loaded, Al Oliver drilled a single and Willie Stargell doubled home two more runs before Dave Roberts relieved Wilson.

Wilson, making his first start since May 28 after fracturing the little finger on his pitching hand, suffered his sixth defeat against four victories.

Bob Moose evened his record at 5-5, scoring his eighth lifetime victory over Houston against one defeat. Moose pitched a six-hitter and his third complete game of the season.

Houston scored its only run in the third when Tommy Helms singled, advanced on a sacrifice bunt, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on an error.

Lee May extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a second inning double and followed with a single in the fourth.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bill Melton tripled home two runs in the first inning and then scored a third run on a passed ball and Terry Forster provided strong relief pitching in Chicago's 6-3 victory over skidding Cleveland Saturday night.

The loss was the ninth in a row for the Indians as ace Gaylord Perry (6-7) failed in his fourth successive start.

Eddie Fisher won his sixth game in 10 decisions for the White Sox, but was replaced by Forster in the seventh after Oscar Gamble homered.

Melton's triple followed singles by Dick Sharp and Dick Allen and then the Chicago third baseman came home on a wild pitch by Perry.

Orioles explode to rock Twins

BALTIMORE (AP) — Boog Powell's home run highlighted a tie-breaking, two-run fifth inning that carried Baltimore to a 7-4 victory over Minnesota, Saturday night.

Powell's shot, his third homer of the year, snapped a 3-3 tie and the Orioles added another run on Paul Blair's single. The Orioles sewed it up as Powell knocked in a run with a single in the sixth for a 6-3 lead.

The rally made a winner of relief pitcher Bob Reynolds, who came on in the midst of a two-run Minnesota flurry in the top of the fifth.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the first on Tommy Davis' groundout and made it 3-0 in the second as Earl Williams hit a solo homer and Paul Blair came home on an infield error.

Minnesota scored a run in the third on Danny Thompson's RBI single and tied it in the fifth on a run-producing single by Tony Oliva and an infield error that allowed another run to score.

Montreal tops San Francisco

MONTREAL (AP) — Boots Day's two-run homer, his first in almost two years, keyed a four-run first-inning rally which helped the Montreal Expos to an 9-6 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday night.

The 31 hits by both teams tied a Montreal club record. A total of eight offensive Expo records were either tied or broken in the last two games with the Giants.

Jeff Severson: a hustler shows the way

The touch football game ends and the kids gather around the blond athlete in the burgundy and gold No. 44 jersey.

"What are your feelings about the game?" he asks one.

"Well, I felt bad because I dropped a pass," is the reply.

"How did you cope with your feelings?"

There is a shrug of the shoulders.

"When your parents get upset, how do they cope?"

"I guess they yell or pour themselves a drink," comes the answer with a ripple of laughter.

"Do you think this is a good way?" persists the athlete, who is Jeff Severson, late of the Washington

RICH ROBERTS

Redskins, once of Long Beach State and now of the Houston Oilers.

IT'S A PART of a soft-sell anti-drug program conducted by Severson through the Long Beach Recreation Dept. and the L.B. Drug Rehabilitation Center and sponsored by Allstate Savings and Loan.

"They're at 5901 Atlantic Blvd.," Jeff points out. "I'm technically a public relations employee of Allstate Savings so it would be nice if you could get that in there."

Severson's PR duty is to speak at schools and recreation areas, meeting youngsters on common ground.

"I came to Long Beach from North Dakota when I was in the third grade," he says. "The point I make to the kids is that I suffer the same experiences they do and enjoy the same experiences.

"You lost a girl friend or gain a girl friend. You get stood up or you're disappointed in school. We all have the same problems and we have to deal with our problems the same way. I don't bring up the subject of drugs. I let them bring it up.

"One of my biggest problems in this area is that I haven't taken any type of drugs at all. I don't even know how to smoke a cigarette."

"There isn't anything else I'd rather be doing than playing football, but no athlete can rely on it as an occupation. You have to save your money and make wise contacts." — Jeff Severson.

THE RAMS' Jack Snow, also a Long Beach native son, deals more directly with the problem out of the Drug Center, counseling addicts or potential users.

"That's 125 E. 8th St.," Severson says. "You probably should get that in there, too.

"When I talk at a park, we discuss things like what do you get out of school. I feel very fortunate that I had the opportunity to play under Ernie Johnson (then an assistant coach) at Long Beach State. He cared more about his players than any coach I've run into. This is one of the reasons why I feel an obligation to youth."

What Severson has gotten out of school is a bachelor's degree in physical education, with a minor in speech. He completed his final credits last week, two years after leaving LBSU, something many young pros talk about but few accomplish.

"Another big problem among young people is leadership," he says. "There are too many followers.

"Take clothes. Everybody wants to be in style. I like to wear Western clothes. I've got three cowboy hats, a couple pair of boots and maybe 15 shirts. I think I own one mod pair of pants.

"After we (the Redskins) beat the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC playoff in Washington, I was walking out of the locker room with my cowboy hat and boots on and the fans said, 'Come back next year.' I said, 'What for? I play for the Redskins.'

"But now that I'm in Houston, it's perfect. I was down there for four days of workouts and learned all the latest sayings — 'Finer than frog hair, can't get any finer,' and all that.

"I like to ride and I'm a big Country Western fan. In fact, I did three commercials for KFOX for the Drug Center, and when I was in Houston I made a contact with the head of the Country Western station down there. I'm possibly going to do some sports broadcasting for them"

HE ALSO HOPES to form his own Country Western group.

"I play the guitar a little bit and sing a little bit," he says. "I was gonna do it in Washington with (tight end) Jerry Smith, but I'm sure I can find a (bleep) kicker down in Houston. That's slang for a guy that plays the guitar and sings.

"In fact, tomorrow I'm meeting with a guy in Hollywood that does PR for Vikki Carr and some of those people. I met him on a plane going back to Washington one time and he told me to look him up in Hollywood. He wants me to get into modeling and commercials."

One might get the idea that Severson is a hustler. But he spends at least as much time hustling for the program as he does for Jeff Severson.

At the moment he is angling for TV shots on a couple of Los Angeles stations and has plans to videotape his June 22 session at El Dorado Park to send to the National Drug Clearing House in Washington D.C. for national exposure.

As a player in Washington, he swapped a pair of season tickets for free rent on an apartment and was given free use of a car.

"I did a commercial on TV," he explains. "In Washington it was easy, but out here it's tougher to get anything out of people. I'm very appreciative that Four Seasons Ford gave me a car to drive around to my drug presentations. It's kind of important that you mention that."

SEVERSON HAD a Volkswagen while he was setting an NCAA record for interceptions (23) during his two years at LBSU, but he hasn't owned a car since.

"I think cars are a poor investment," he says. "You lose 500 to a thousand dollars the minute you buy them."

Four Seasons will love that, but it's just that Jeff, still not firmly established in the National Football League, is careful with his money.

"It's a business but no athlete can rely on it as an occupation. You must save your money and make wise contacts, so I try to do these things, like getting a car and an apartment."

SEVERSON'S AMBITION of becoming "the best defensive back in football" was largely frustrated in Washington.

"It was frustrating as hell," he says. "A lot of people told me that George Allen's teams were the toughest to make as a rookie and the one thing I told him when I left was that I just wish I'd had the opportunity to play."

Severson served on the cab squad in 1971. He was activated in '72 but played mostly on the special teams, which was his only activity in the Super Bowl loss to Miami.

Last month Allen traded him and four others — tight end Mack Alston, defensive end Mike Fanucci, tackle Jim Snowden and wide receiver Clifton McNeil — to the Oilers for veteran safety Ken Houston. They went from an 11-3 record to 1-13.

"I don't know if Allen said it," Jeff smiles, "but somebody wrote that he sent five hamburgers to Houston for a piece of prime beef. So I labelled us five guys 'The Hamburger Boys.'

"I loved the Washington organization. They were winners, and I've never played on a losing team in my life, all the way up from the Belmont Bears.

"But this is a great opportunity for me to play. If the Hamburger Boys do anything, the Redskins are gonna look bad."

Finer than frog hair, Jeff. We'll get that in there, too.

COLUMNISTS' CORNER

Could top Ruth 'by 50 home runs'

Aaron has another fan: The Man

Stan Musial, with whom we dined a few evenings ago, thinks there's no question whatsoever that Henry Aaron will smash Babe Ruth's home run record. The Man thinks it's possible maybe even this season.

Musial enlarged even further.

"Henry may exceed the Babe's figure by 50 home runs," said The Man. "But the pressure is getting real terrible, much worse each day.

"Only a handful of men in baseball could take the awful pressure that Aaron's going through. You remember Roger Maris. He went to pieces during just one season when he broke Babe's one-year mark.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"The pressure started catching up with Aaron the year before last when people were speculating whether he or Willie Mays would come closest to Ruth's mark. Henry has contained himself extremely well. I doubt that Mays would have been able to cope with pressure like Aaron.

"All Aaron doesn't need now is the filth he's getting from the racists in Atlanta. What those people in Georgia are doing to Henry is despicable. This is one of the most unsportsmanlike things I've ever seen in sports. It's too bad that Atlanta has to be Henry's home park. Anywhere else, the hometown fans would support Aaron to the hilt. I wish that he was back in Milwaukee where the fans don't distinguish white from black.

"Hometown support is what Aaron needs. Such support undoubtedly would keep some pressure off Henry and undoubtedly make him closer to the Ruth record."

Does Musial think HE would have been able to stand the pressure that Aaron now is undergoing?

"I honestly don't know," replied The Man. "I've had many pressure situations, but thanks to the nature given to me by God, I've been fortunate to handle them. And for the most part, rather coolly.

"But this one, I don't know. It would be especially bad if I was a black ballplayer. That means a big difference."

WHAT DOES THE STANLEY STEAMER think about his beloved Cardinals' pitifully slow start this season in the National League East?

"I couldn't believe it," sighed Stanley. "The Cardinals are a club of extreme talent and when they lost 12 of their first 13, or whatever it was, I was stunned.

"I think it is a tremendous tribute to Red Schoendienst that the club got out of the bog and started winning one day after another. Just think how you'd feel if your club was 1-13, or whatever, and you had to win a dozen straight games to just reach the break-even mark.

"The Cardinals are in second place, finally, but still six games away from the first-place Cubs. The Cardinals' rise has been little short of fantastic.

"The Cardinals' rise was so fantastic that I think it might get them the division championship. That's not as funny as it might sound. After all, if a club can go from a dozen games behind the leader to six behind in a month, then nothing's impossible. Going by the same pace, the club could be in first place by the July All-Star break."

OKAY, STANLEY, your Cardinals are six games behind the front-running Cubs. If you're a manager, how do you make up six games?

"Put it this way. I'm glad the Cubs are ahead of us instead of the Pirates. The Cubs are morning glories. They always start fast, but they fold. If Pittsburgh was six games in front, I'd have to think the rest of the division was in deep trouble."

Which is the best team in baseball today?

"The Cardinals or maybe the Dodgers. It has to be a National League team. The month of May is a decisive month in baseball. The Cubs kept pace, but they didn't play nearly as well as the Dodgers and Cardinals. I didn't especially think too much of the Dodgers, but I have to give them extreme consideration now because their kids progressed so well.

"I figured Walt Alston was saddled with the usual amount of youngsters the Dodgers always have, then he'd have to substitute one inning after another.

"But that's not the case. This year's crop of Dodger youngsters is superb. They don't need substitution.

STAN MUSIAL
'Pressure terrible'

"If you're going to ask me about the Giants, forget it. I'm truly surprised they've done as well as they have, but they aren't that good. The big surprise to me is that the Pirates are drooping. Gawd, with their batting order the Pirates shouldn't lose a game. I'm a hitter, but I never had the backups the Pirate batters have today. The Pirates have so much power, it's scary."

YOU SAID THE BEST TEAM in baseball today has to be in the National League. Why?

"I don't mean to knock the American League, but the National League has so much contention from top to bottom that it makes that circuit so much more competitive. Look at the players who have switched from one league to another and played BETTER in the American League than they did in the National. That's a tipoff on which league is the strongest."

Would you have liked to perform in the American League instead of the National League?

"I don't think so, although I never really thought about it. I like to think whatever I did, I did against the best. As I said, it's my opinion that the best is in the National League. That goes for pitchers as well as batters."

Rod Dedeaux' 31-year love affair with college baseball

Because of his great respect for the truth, Rod Dedeaux often chooses not to abuse it by using it.

For example, Dedeaux swears up and down that he understands each word as it departs the lips of Casey Stengel. This is known to be altogether beyond the realm of human accomplishment by no less an authority than Edna Stengel, who is Mrs. Casey Stengel.

"Sir," he said, "in fairness to both sides, you would have to say my man was safe."

Rod knew within the very heart he was clutching that his man was out by a full step.

THEN THERE is this thing about the baseball series involving college all-star players from these shores and those of Japan. A total of seven games will determine the championship team of the two nations and the sites for all of this embrace a somewhat strange combination of communities including Los Angeles, Omaha and Anaheim.

When asked to serve as games chairman for the occasion, Dedeaux, with a minimum of urging, rose to accept.

"This series," Rod remarked, "is the highlight of the college baseball year. It is important to the friendship and understanding of two great nations and is typical of the wonderful spirit of baseball, indeed of all college athletics, and we are all pleased and proud to be part of it."

Clearly, Dedeaux was not telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. He was guilty of a flagrant act of omission. He did not admit that he is entirely selfish about this series of games.

LET ME EXPLAIN. You will note that the dates of the USA-Japan series run from June 22 through July 1. Ordinarily, Rod Dedeaux would be off someplace running his trucking business with no opportunity whatever to watch college kids play baseball.

The 1973 season would have been concluded. The regular schedule and the district playoffs and the College World Series at Omaha would be matters for the archives and Dedeaux would be reduced to sitting around twiddling his thumbs.

Dedeaux has this thing about watching college kids play baseball. Some guys go fishing or play golf or drink martinis. Rod Dedeaux watches college kids play baseball.

The coach will now and then drop in at Dodger or Anaheim Stadium and view the professionals, but this is not his thing.

Sure, many of the good ones operating in the major leagues came from Dedeaux' USC Trojans, but Rod's satisfaction comes from raising kids. What happens to them as adult players is still his concern, but someone else's job.

College kids playing baseball have been Rod Dedeaux' job since 1942 when he took over as head coach at USC. When the Trojans entered the 1973 College World Series, Dedeaux was after his ninth national championship.

DEDEAUX HAS SIX times been named college coach of the year and in 1969 was enshrined in the

BUD TUCKER

American Assn. of College Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame. Off his record, Dedeaux should have his own wing in the place.

In the process of winning everything in this part of the college baseball world, the Trojans played their final game on the storied soil of Bovard Field. Dedeaux and his kids will next summer move to a new arena named, of course, Dedeaux Stadium.

All the years, all the championships, all the honors and now a stadium bearing his name. One pauses to contemplate what is left for the coach.

"Not much," Rod Dedeaux says. "I guess it's time I gave some thought to retiring."

See? He's putting us on again.

Little Leaguer strikes out?

Don't tell him you're sorry

SAN DIEGO (AP) — What do you say to a Little Leaguer who comes home in tears after dropping a fly ball and striking out three times?

The best answer may be none at all, says a San Diego child psychiatrist.

"There are parents who react with anger, and that's destructive," says Dr. Thomas Johnson. "But saying, 'there's always next year' or 'it's just a ball game' is pretty worthless, too, to someone who's just lost.

"It's like saying, when your dog dies, 'We'll get you another dog.' That's superficial and almost cruel. When your own dog dies there is no other dog. In the same way, a child needs to have his loss taken seriously. Mimimizing of pain is not helpful.

"It's the adult's job first to listen to the child and find out what level of sadness the child feels. Having someone who understands is so helpful. Time will take care of the rest. There really is no cliche that's going to make this child be happy."

Johnson has been a player, manager and umpire in Little League baseball.

Howell wins marathon by 1/4-mile

Tom Howell overtook Art Tingi with 25 miles gone in Saturday's Palos Verdes Marathon, beating all competitors by more than a quarter-of-a-mile to win the seventh annual event.

Joe Calson held a big lead over the hilly and rocky course for the first half of the race, but at the 19-mile mark Tingi moved to take the lead and set his own pace until Howell caught and passed for the win with just a mile and 385 yards left.

The race, second only to the Boston Marathon in runners, was contested over the steep and rugged Palos Verdes Peninsula, originating at Rolling Hills High. Many runners were forced to drop from competition by either the warm weather or the terrain.

Howell traveled the course with little difficulty, finishing more than a quarter mile ahead of Tingi with a time of 2:35.0. Early leader Calson finished seventh.

After winning the race Howell commented, "I feel like I better not stop." His previous best was 22nd.

Terry Anderson took top woman honors in the event which saw more than 1,000 participants enter.

North Carolina runners who finished second and third, Tony Waldrop (3:57.3) and Reggie McAfee, (3:57.8).

Hailu Ebba of Oregon State was also timed in 3:57.8, Michigan State's Ken Popejoy, 3:58.5, and San Jose State freshman Mark Schilling from Garden Grove, 3:58.6.

Two runners failed to score points despite running under four minutes — Knut Kvalheim of Oregon (3:58.9) and Charles McMullen of Missouri (3:59.6).

It was the second time in history eight runners in the same race had bettered four minutes.

On June 5, 1964 in the Compton Relays, Jim Ryun, then a high school junior, finished eighth in 3:59 when Dyrol Burleson ran 3:57.4.

Other records were broken by:

— Doug Brown of Tennessee, one of 10 children, who conquered the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 8:28.1, winning by almost 20 seconds. The old record of 8:30.1 was set last year by Joe Lucas of Georgetown.

— Sam Colson of Kansas hurled the javelin 279-9, erasing the 273-3 standard set by Tennessee's Bill Skinner in 1969.

— Reynaldo Brown of Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo) cleared 7-4 in the high jump as last year's champ, Tom Woods of Oregon, who held the old mark at 7-3 ¾ also cleared 7-4 but finished second because of more misses.

Other champions Saturday included defending titleholder Dave Roberts of Rice in the pole vault (17-4); Mac Wilkins of Oregon in the discus (203-11); Marshall Dill of Michigan State in the 220 (20.9); Maurice Peoples of Arizona State in the 440 (45.0); Skip Kent of Wisconsin in the 880 (1:47.2); Memphis State in the 440 relay (39.6) and Robert Primeaux of Texas in the 440 hurdles (49.5).

Tiff's record triple jump broke a mark that had last just one day when Barry McClure of Middle Tenn. jumped 54-1¼ in the trials. McClure's best jump Saturday was 54-¾, good for second.

A surprising fourth at 52-3¼ was Long Beach State junior Rayfield Dupree who prior to enrolling at LBSU at mid-semester from Los Angeles CC had a best of only 48-5.

"Rayfield's effort was one of the most satisfying we've ever had at an NCAA meet," said retiring 49er coach Dr. Jack Rose.

"Mike Gordon deserves a lot of credit in his work with our jumpers," he added. LBSU's other triple jumper, Dave Tucker, has jumped more than 54 feet this year but after qualifying Friday jammed his back and had to scratch Saturday.

Roberts became the first competitor to win the pole vault three years running while Prefontaine's 3-mile triumph marks the first time an athlete has won the same event four years in a row.

"It's great to go out like this," said Prefontaine. "If there had been no humidity I believe I would have run 10 seconds faster. On the other hand, if the sun had been shining it would have been 10 seconds slower. As far as I'm concerned it was a fantastic afternoon."

The University of Southern California, which went into the meet as the chief challenger to UCLA, ended a disappointing weekend with its 440 relay team dropping the baton and sprinter Don Quarrie being overcome by the heat just before the start of the 220-yard dash.

Temperatures were in the 90s and for a time officials considered postponing the steeplechase and the 3-mile until the cool of the evening.

Javelin — Colson (Kansas) 279-9 (NCAA record, old mark 273-3, Skinner, Tenn., 1969), Kennedy (Calif.) 266-5, Hall (Norfolk St.) 257-4, Dowsell (Ohio) 254-10, Nummella (BYU) 247-1, Martin (Tenn.) 246-9.

Pole vault — Roberts (Rice) 17-4, Colton (Fla.) 17-0, Porter (Kans.) 17-0, Pullard (USC) 16-6, tie for fifth between Kiefer (Harvard) and Rock (San Jose St.) 16-0.

3000-meter steeplechase — Brown (Tenn.) 8:28.1 (NCAA record, old mark 8:30.2, Lucas, Georgetown, 1972), Cramer (BYU) 8:45.1, Clark (Wash. St.) 8:46.0, Beardmore (Duke) 8:46.4, Leddy (E. Tenn.) 8:52.3, Steele (Tenn.) 8:56.8.

440 relay — Memphis St. (Knight, Fox, Taylor, Hammonds) 39.6, Arizona St. 39.8, Southwestern La. 39.9, UT El Paso 40.0, SMU 40.0, Penn St. 40.2.

220 — Dill (Mich. St.) 20.9, Tinker (Kent St.) 21.0, Riddick (Norfolk St.) 21.0, Breedlell (San Jose St.) 21.4, Pouncy (SMU) 21.4.

Mile — Wottle (Bowling Green) 3:57.1 (NCAA record, old mark 3:57.6, Liquori, Villanova, 1971), Waldrop (No. Car.) 3:57.3, McAfee (No. Car.) 3:57.8, Popejoy (Mich. St.) 3:58.5, Schilling (San Jose St.) 3:58.6.

Discus — Wilkins (Ore.) 203-11, Stadie (Rice) 189-10, Hjeltnes (Wn. Maryland) 182-2, Eneix (Wn. Ky.) 181-9, Gordon (UCLA) 181-6, Gunzel (Ariz.) 180-6.

440 hurdles — Primeaux (Texas) 48.5, Collins (Penn) 49.8, Castleman (Mich. St.) 50.3, Gipson (Lamar) 50.3, Adsit (Colo. St.) 50.5, Cronholm (Rice) 50.5.

440 — Peoples (Ariz. St.) 45.0, Brown (UCLA) 45.4, Schultz (Okla St.) 45.9, Bond (Tenn.) 46.2, Parks (UCLA) 46.3, Sowerdy (Murray St.) 46.6.

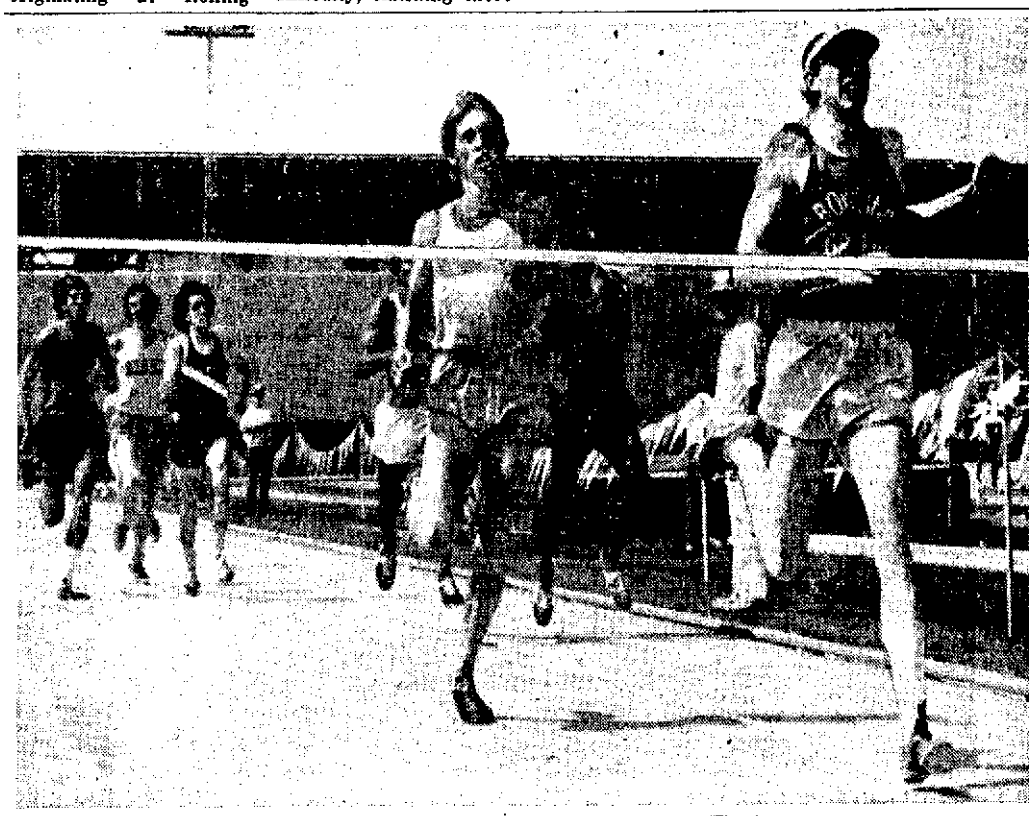

High jump — Brown (Cal Poly, SLO) 7-4 (NCAA record, old mark 7-3, Woods, Ore. St., 1972), Woods (Ore. St.) 7-4, Joseph (Ariz.) 7-3, Kotinek (UCLA) 7-1, tie for fifth between Siffer (Kans. St.) and Smith (Kans.) 7-0.

Three-mile — Prefontaine (Oregon) 13:05.3 (NCAA record, old mark 13:18.9, Prefontaine, Ore., prelim 1973), Castaneda (Colo.) 13:10.5, Gregorio (Colo.) 13:10.6, Nyono (Wash. St.) 13:13.0, Keogh (Manhattan) 13:14.7, Rose (Wn. Ky.) 13:22.4.

Climate isn't what they like about the South

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The high heat and humidity, common to this Deep South city, was a much talked about factor before Saturday's finals in the NCAA Track and Field Championships.

Doug Brown of Tennessee, Dave Wottle of Bowling Green, and Steve Prefontaine of Oregon set NCAA marks in the steeplechase, mile, and three-mile races, respectively.

Wottle said he stayed in his air-conditioned room as much as possible this week and gave little thought to talking about hot, humid weather, choosing instead to concentrate on his opponents.

Brown and Prefontaine, on the other hand, said they were very conscious of all the dire prognostications concerning the weather.

"I stayed in the shade all day and drank a lot of liquids," Brown said.

Prefontaine, who earlier in the week, had said he would not be a distance runner if he had to do all his running in the South, said a cloud bank which shaded the track shortly before the three-mile event helped.

"The sun would probably have made my time 10 seconds slower," he said. "But, without the humidity, it probably would have been 10 seconds faster."

Virgin breaks Pre's record

CHICAGO (AP) — Craig Virgin of Lebanon, Ill., set a national high school record in the 2-mile Saturday in the International Prep Invitational Track and Field Meet held in suburban Mt. Prospect.

Virgin, who finished 16 seconds ahead of his nearest competitor, ran the eight laps in 8:40.9, breaking Steve Prefontaine's old mark of 8:41.6 which had stood since 1968.

Virgin got the record in 80-degree weather and covered the final quarter in 63 seconds as 8,000 fans, many of whom had come especially to see Virgin, cheered him on.

First two finishers in each event were invited for the national junior championships to be contested in Gainesville, Fla.

Gruelling spring at Florida State

Collegians prepare for trip to Red China

A group of college basketball players, under the direction of Memphis State coach GENE BARTOW, leaves Wednesday for a series of eight exhibition games in China.

The U.S. team includes RONNIE ROBINSON of Memphis St., RICH KELLY of Stanford, KEVIN GREVEY of Kentucky, QUINN BUCKNER of Indiana, KEVIN STACOM of Providence and GEORGE KARL of North Carolina.

The team has been practicing for the past week at Memphis State.

A SUNDAY story in the St. Petersburg, Fla. Times reports that 28 football players on scholarship at Florida State quit or were thrown off the team during gruelling exercises they claim were illegal under NCAA rules.

A rigorous schedule of pre-spring agility drills, wrestling, weightlifting and running up and down stadium steps was mandatory, contrary to NCAA rules, the newspaper said it was told by 18 former players.

Players lost included BURT COOPER, a starter last year at defensive end; MIKE CADWELL, who was backup quarterback to GARY HUFF plus RANDY SHIVELY, a starting defensive back.

Coach LARRY JONES has denied the accusations.

TENNIS officials got tough Saturday and said that if the top stars boycott Wimbledon as announced, the tournament would carry on without them.

SPORTS BEAT

The Assn. of Tennis Professionals has threatened to withdraw its 96 members from tournaments unless NIKKI PILIC of Yugoslavia is allowed to compete.

Pilic has been suspended by the International Lawn Tennis Federation until the end of June because he refused to play for Yugoslavia in the Davis Cup.

MADISON High in Portland, Ore., has selected a girl, MARY OFFICER, as its athlete of the year after the young miss was the individual high point winner in the Oregon State girls 3-A track meet.

Unusual? Maybe. But what is more unusual is that Mary follows in the footsteps of a brother, JIM, who won the award last year and is now a professional baseball player.

GIRLS, five of them, have also taken over a Junior Knot Hole League team in Nashville, Tenn. Coach JOHN BROOKS said he gave the girls a tryout after noticing them hanging around the practice field.

All five fourth graders have made the team and one, TRACEY HILL, has become the star pitcher and team's best player.

The executive director of the Ladies Pro Golf Assn. says he saw no chance of a compromise in the JANE BLALOCK suspension case that has been tied up in federal court for the past year.. "I don't see any way we can compromise," LPGA executive director BUD ERICKSON said. "Several attempts were made at a compromise last year, but nothing came of it."

Sparks Norwalk

Ives hits first Mack slam

Rex Ives of Norwalk hit the first grand slam home run out of Blair Field in the 10-year history of Connie Mack baseball Saturday night to spark Norwalk to a 9-3 victory over Coletto Ford.

Hawaiian Gardens, which dumped the Great Western Cardinals, 2-0, in the first game jumped into first place with a 2-0 record after Coletto Ford's loss. Coletto Ford now stands at 3-1.

Ives, a 5-9, 155-pound shortstop from Norwalk High, drilled his shot over the left field wall in the second inning to send his teammates into a 4-0 lead. Ives later doubled off the wall with none on in the sixth inning.

Chief Ramirez, Norwalk's second baseman from St. John Bosco, contributed two doubles in three at-bats and scored twice as pitchers Rick Henry and John Franklin combined in limiting Coletto Ford to a two-hitter.

Charlie Phillips, who was selected by the Minnesota Twins in the recent pro baseball draft, pitched and batted Hawaiian Gardens into first place.

Phillips drove in the two Hawaiian Gardens runs with an infield hit that scored Woody Lara from third and Dave Belarde from second.

Sparta after soccer crown

DALLAS (UPI) — Rene Miramontes' penalty kick gave San Diego Sparta the winning goal to defeat American International of Dallas, 2-1, Saturday and enter the final of the National Junior Challenge Cup soccer competition.

Sparta will meet St. Elizabeth's of Baltimore, Md., in the finals today in the Cotton bowl.

BILLIE JEAN WINS MOBILE NET TITLE

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI)—Billie Jean King defeated Francoise Durr in straight sets Saturday night to win the $15,000 Gulf Coast professional women's tennis championship.

Mrs. King won $4,000 for her 6-3, 7-5 victory. Miss Durr won $2,000 for second place in the Virginia Slims tour.

Miss Durr upended top-seeded Rosemary Casals, 7-6, 4-6, 7-6, earlier Saturday to move into the finals against the second-seeded Mrs. King.

Klecker fans 19 in Jet win

El Klecker's pitching and the return of Nick Hopkins sparked the Lakewood Jets to a 5-2 victory over the Greater Lakewood Barons Saturday night at Mayfair Park in Western Softball Congress play.

Klecker picked up his 17th WSC victory in 19 decisions has struckout 19 batters and limited the Barons to three hits.

Hopkins, playing in his first full game since being sidelined with an injury on May 8, drove in a pair of runs during the Jets' five-run eighth inning.

The Jets started off the eighth by waiting out a walk and getting aboard on a walk and then combined with four consecutive singles from Bobby Guy, Don Frazier, John Wilson and Hopkins. Guy's single drove in the first two runs of the game.

A vote for wings

Unser: 'It's safer now'

AL UNSER
Track was okay, too

MILWAUKEE — Al Unser, a two-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 who is unhappy about the current controversy surrounding the race, doesn't blame excessive speed, the wings or track conditions for the tragedies.

The 33-year old star of the Viceroy racing team feels that today's cars "are 100 per cent safer than race cars were five years ago."

He credits the improvement on the rear wings which provide downforces for better traction — and he definitely doesn't want to see them eliminated, as has been suggested. A recent rule change did reduce their size.

Unser, who was leading the 500 when it was stopped due to Swede Savage's accident, expressed his views as he prepared for today's Milwaukee 150.

"I confess I can't put my finger on the situation and say 'this is why it was such a bad month at Indy," Unser explained, "but I don't think it was because these cars were going that much faster.

"I think basically that everybody was trying harder to go faster because they all have good race cars now," Unser said. "That could have had a bearing on things."

Unser declared that while the wings have made the cars faster, they also have made them safer.

"We get the cars more out of shape today and save them than we ever did before because of the downforces," he said, "and you can run in oil easier."

Taking the wings off the cars to reduce the speed won't necessarily eliminate accidents or decrease their severity, Unser contends.

"People forget that there were wrecks back in the 1920's...lots of them. My brother (Jerry) was killed at Indy in 1959. He didn't have any wings," Unser continued.

"How fast was (Salt) Walther going when he crashed?" Unser asked, referring to the starting line accident May 28 which left the young driver seriously injured.

"Well, it was probably 110 mph. He was not running 200 mph when he crashed. Look at the damage it did. The car was totaled.

"Are we going to run races at less than 100 mph? Damn, accidents like that can happen at any speed. We don't like it."

Unser recalled an accident he had in 1968. "I hit the wall head on running about 205 mph after the wheel fell off at the end of the straght away. I had a full load of fuel on then. I don't remember anybody hollering about speed then, because the thing didn't explode and I got out of it okay."

Unser estimated his top speed this year wasn't any faster.

" think I turned about the fastest lap of the race last week and it was only 184-something."

Unser did not feel the course was excessively oily.

"Track conditions were never really that bad," he recalled. "In fact, they were perfect when the race was restarted. During the first part of the race several guys did drop oil. That's only normal. Now they're saying it was an extra hazard.

"It's going to happen and we know it. That's part of the race. You've got to accept it. They have been making too much of an issue out of track conditions."

Selecting Wins All American 'cap

ALBANY (AP) — Selecting held off a closing charge by I'm Ed to win the $25,000-added All American Handicap by three-quarters of a length Saturday at Golden Gate Fields.

The winner paid $14.80, $6.80, and $3.60. I'm Ed, with 111 aboard, paid $17.80 and $5.00.

Ferraris lead Le Mans Classic

LE MANS, France (UPI) — Italian Ferraris took a slim edge at the quarter distance of the Le Mans 24-hour sports car classic Saturday as the rival French Matras began to crack under the fast pace.

Argentina's Carlos Reutemann and Australian Tim Schenken took over the lead after 90 laps just as night fell.

Second was the leading Matra of Frenchmen Henri Pescarolo and Gerard Larrousse, sandwiched between the second Ferrari of Belgian Jacky Ickx and Briton Brian Redman in third spot.

Reutemann went to the front when two Matras dropped out of the lead in quick succession.

Jean-Pierre Beltoise escaped unhurt when he brushed a guardrail at Arnage, but lost 45 minutes as mechanics straightened out his front suspension.

The Patrick Depailler-Bob Wollek car, which led from lap 73 to 89, blew its engine shortly afterwards.

Arturo Merzario of Italy, the early leader, began working his way back up the field in a Ferrari co-driven by Brazil's Carlos Pace. In the process he whittled down the lap record until it stood at three minutes 40.4 seconds (138.3 mph) for the 8.4-mile circuit.

At quarter distance the order was Ferrari, Matra, Ferrari, Mirage, Ferrari, with eighteen minutes separating the leading Italian machine from the one in fifth spot. Only 44 of the 55 starters were still running.

The Mirage, driven by Britons Mike Hailwood and John Watson, was having a steady race after early transmission troubles which dropped it behind the Ferrari of Ickx-Redman.

The grand touring category was being led alternately by Argentians Louis Di Palma-Nestor Garcia Veiga and Americans Sam Posey and Milt Minter — both driving Ferrari Daytonas.

A crowd of more than 400,000 which saw the start began to dwindle as night fell and the drivers faced 18 more hours on the track, which has been dry from the start.

Allison bids for top fuel drag crown

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Twenty-year-old Randy Allison of Vista, Calif., nailed down the No. 1 qualifying position in top fuel class Saturday to set the stage for final eliminations today in the ninth annual Springnational drag racing championships at National Trail Raceway.

Allison pushed his Chrysler-powered fuel dragster to an elapsed time of 6.186 seconds over the quarter-mile track with a speed of 231.95 mph.

The top 16 qualifiers in three professional classes — top fuel, funny car and pro stock — battle for a share of $206,000 in prize money during today's eliminations.

The 16th spot on the top fuel list went to Springnational defending champion Chip Woodall of Hurst, Tex., while two-time Springnational champ Don (Big Daddy) Garlits of Sessner, Fla., squeaked into the lineup in 14th position.

Second best time among the top fuel drivers went to Clayton Harris of Columbus, Miss., who turned in a 6.289 run with a speed of 233.16 mph.

Veteran drag race driver Don Prudhomme of Granada Hills, Calif., topped the qualifiers in the funny car class, turning in a 6.521-second performance at a speed of 228.42 mph in his Chrysler-powered Cuda.

Anaheim driver Dave Beebe, Friday's top qualifier in funny car, was bumped into the No. 2 spot with his run of 6.573 and 226.13 mph in a challenger.

Don Carlton of Royal Oaks, Mich., maintained the top qualifying spot he earned Friday in the pro stock category as his run of 9.327 seconds and 147.54 mph in a 1973 Duster could not be bested during Saturday's qualifying.

Don Nicholson of Orange moved into the second spot in pro stock, turning a 9.327 identical to Carlton's run, but with a speed of 145.146 mph.

In addition to the three pro categories, 32 drivers qualified in each of three amateur classes - competition, modified and super-stock.

NBA sets tourney

CLEVELAND (AP) — Four National Basketball Assn. teams will participate in the first Mid-Central NBA Preseason Classic, a round-robin tournament opening at the Cleveland Arena Sept. 27. Competing will be the Cleveland Cavaliers and Houston Rockets of the Central Division and the Chicago Bulls and Kansas City-Omaha Kings of the Midwest Division.

Track buckles, trials delayed

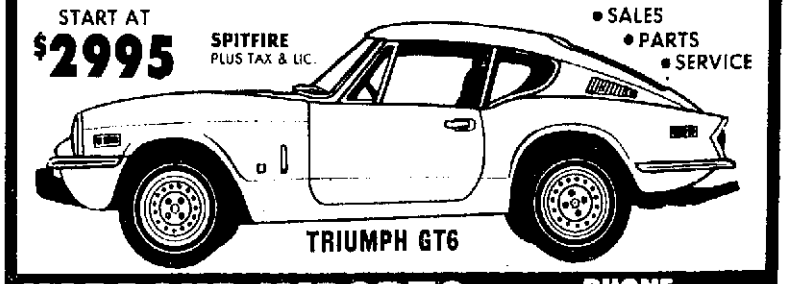

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Time trials were postponed Saturday for the Rex Mays Classic 150-miler for big cars when the surface of the track on one of the curves began to buckle.

The trials will be held prior to the race today.

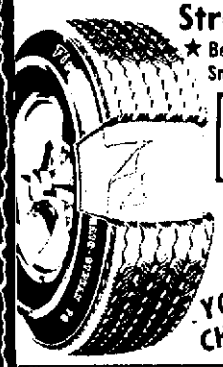

Some drivers attempted to take practice runs on the one-mile oval, avoiding the portion under construction by driving either to the inside or outside.

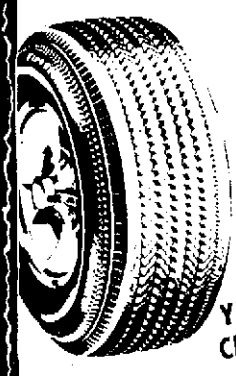

However, they reported the maneuvering was too risky.

Weiskopf (65) equal to heat (90)

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf, who has been shattering par with almost monotonous regularity for more than a month because he is thinking "positively," did it again Saturday with a seven-under 65 to vault into a three-stroke lead afterthe third round of the IVB Philadelphia Golf Classic.

While Weiskopf was out on the sun-baked Whitemarsh Valley Country Club enjoying his newfound approach to his game, two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino withdrew from the tourney after a five-over 77 because "I'm not here mentally."

Weiskopf, who has won two tournaments during his streak of 16 consecutive sub-par rounds, started the day's play six strokes back of the pacesetter for the first two rounds, sophomore pro Jim Barber.

While Barber was having his first bogey trouble of the tourney, Weiskopf was going on a birdie spree and just missing two eagles to come in with a 54-hole total of 203, 13 under par, and the lead over Hale Irwin, who had 206 as a result of a 70.

Forrest Fezler, with an even-par 72, was at 207 while Barber, who had gone into the round with a 12-under 132, soared to a four-over 76 for a 208 total.

Jack Nicklaus, who along with Trevino came here hoping for a good tune-up for next week's U.S. Open, had a two-under 70 for 213 total.

Trevino's five-under 77 gave him a tourney total of 218 and he withdrew saying, "I'm not here mentally. I have no excuse.

"I don't want to cheat the people," he said. "People came to see me play golf and I wasn't playing good golf."

Trevino's next stop with his mobile home will be across the state at Oakmont, scene of the open.

Weiskopf, who said he feels "like a completely different person than I've ever been on the golf course," birdied the second hole, bogeyed the fourth when he missed the green and then went on a birdie spree for the next three holes.

His birdie on the par-five fifth came after an eight-foot eagle putt lipped the cup.

Weiskopf picked up another birdie on the par-five 11th, where again an eagle try rolled into the cup and out.

The 30-year-old Ohioan then added birdies on the 13th, 16th and 17th to complete his 65 and add to his sub-par streak that is the best on the tour this year.

Irwin missed a chance to move closer to Weiskopf when he bogeyed 15th and 16th by missing the greens.

Barber, a tour rabbit who appeared to wilt under the 90-degree weather, had only one birdie and five bogeys, including the par-five 17th hole where he hit his second shot into an unplayable lie by a little tree and had to make a penalty drop.

Siderowf snares British tee title

PORTHCAWL, Wales (UPI)—Handsome stockbroker Dick Siderowf Saturday achieved something that only 15 Americans have managed before him. He won the British Amateur golf championship.

Siderowf, a 35-year-old from Easton, Conn., outplayed England's Peter Moody in every department of the game to win their 36-hole final by 5 and 3.

"The smartest thing I did was to come here to play instead of in the U.S. Open," a happy Siderowf said as he accepted the trophy.

Siderowf displayed not a sign of smotion as he battled with difficult windy conditions on the 6,605-yard, 36-36 par-72 course during the match.

However, he said his poker-faced expression hid the tension he was feeling.

"I was really jumpy. The pressure was just unbelievable, but I dreamed of just playing in the event and to win is a great thrill."

Siderowf said early in the tournament that his main reason for making a bid this year "was to try and catch the eye of the Walker cup selectors."

Siderowf, who outdrove his opponent by up to 50 yards, had a stroke of outrageous luck at the 21st hole when he tried to hit a four-wood from a difficult lie.

The ball flew onto the beach, hit a rock and rebounded onto the fiarway. Siderowf rode his luck by slamming a wood shot to within 12 feet of the pin and rammed in the putt for a winning par four.

Three-way tie in LPGA finale

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Janie Blalock shot a blistering four-under-par 69, the best round of the tournament, to charge into a tie with Japanese champion Chako Higuchi and American money leader Kathy Whitworth Saturday after three rounds of the $35,000 LPGA championship at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Okker gains semis, KOs Smith again

Combined News Service

Dutch star Tom Okker upset top-ranked Stan Smith of Pasadena, 7-5, 6-3, Saturday and moved into the semifinals of the men's singles in the $135,000 Italian Open in Rome.

It was the second time in a week that Okker had beaten Smith, top money winner in 1973 with over $150,000.

Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Evonne Goolagong of Australia qualified for the final of the women's singles. Top-seeded Miss Evert had a tough time beating Helga Masthoff of West Germany, 7-6, 6-4. Miss Goolagong, seeded second, trounced Vlasta Vipochova of Czechoslovakia, 6-2, 6-1.

In the semifinals, Okker plays defending champion Manuel Orantes of Spain. The fourth-seeded Spaniard defeated Peter Szoke of Hungary, 6-4, 6-2. In the other semifinal, French Open champion Ilie Nastase of Romania will face Paolo Bertolucci, Italy.

Unprecedented won-two punch from STP!

Indy 500, May 30, 1973—Gordon Johncock drives winning STP Double Oil Filter Special.

Daytona 500, February 18, 1973—Richard Petty drives winning STP Oil Treatment Special.

Never before has one auto racing team won the sport's two biggest prizes in a single season.

First Richard Petty takes Daytona, NASCAR's premier stock car race, in the STP Oil Treatment Special.

Then Gordon Johncock wins the grand-daddy of them all, USAC's Indianapolis 500, in the STP Double Oil Filter Special.

And while the style of racing is completely different, Petty and Johncock had two things in common—Andy Granatelli's STP Oil Treatment and STP Double Oil Filters.

Famous STP Oil Treatment for the edge against friction and wear.

And the revolutionary STP Double Oil Filter for extra protection against sludge and abrasives—a filter in a filter to double clean your oil.

Join the team that made automotive history. Give your family car the won-two punch from STP.

Hobbs: 2nd place for title?

MOSPORT, Ont. (AP) — David Hobbs is aiming at the Canadian-American Challenge Cup series of motor racing with an unorthodox approach — second-place finishes.

Hobbs, driving a McLaren M20, thinks a series of second-place finishes in the eight-race, continent-wide series will bring the championship.

HOBBS

"We really think it will work," said Hobbs of England.

He favors Mark Donohue from Newton Square, Pa., for today's opening race in the series with his turbo-charged Porsche.

"Meanwhile, we're going to go plunging along with strong-finishing engines, register good lap speeds, and we're confident it's going to work," said Hobbs, who finished 11th in last week's Indianapolis 500 despite a lengthy pit stop.

"We're going to have a string of second-place finishes, win quite a bit of money and have a lot of points at the end of the season."

However, Hobbs doesn't concede the opening race to the powerful Porsches.

"It obviously doesn't take too much to get those Porsches off key, and even Donohue might not be just right or ready for this first race."

The Can-Am is open to Group 7 cars which under the rules must have two seats with the body enclosed. There is no limit on engine power and cars like Donohue's are rated at more than 1,000 horsepower. Hobbs' car is about 750 horsepower.

Hobbs' car isn't turbo-charged because "we couldn't see the needed reliability while the weight penalty of extra fuel or refueling stops was all too obvious.

"The various odd turbo-charged Chevrolet engines in McLarens and other chassis just are not going to do it. They're going to have to carry too much fuel to be fast, or maybe they're going to have to stop to refuel too often."

Qualifying for California 100 at Riverside

RIVERSIDE (Special)—A field of more than 65 late-model NASCAR Sportsman cars and drivers will be on hand today at Riverside International Raceway to qualify for the $7,000 California 100 on June 16.

The race, to be held over Riverside's 2.62-mile, eight-turn road course, is a companion feature to the $90,000 Tuborg 400 for NASCAR Grand National stock cars on June 17.

The California 100 entry list is headed by Grand National West driver Hershel McGriff, the 45-year-old Bridal Veil, Ore., lumber mill owner and winner of the 1950 Mexican road race. McGriff, who will "double up" by driving a Richard Petty-built '72 Plymouth in the Tuborg 400, will be behind the wheel of a '68 Dodge in the California 100.

McGriff will be joined by Paramount tavern owner Clem Proctor, who drives in only three or four events a year but has been one of the most prolific winners in the NASCAR Sportsman ranks over the last six years. Proctor drives a '68 Ford Torino.

Others hoping to qualify for the 40-car starting field include the three Becker brothers from San Bernardino—Chuck, Randy and Rick. Chuck drives a '64 Ford Fairlane while Randy wheels a '65 Chevrolet and Rick a '66 Chevy.

Practice today begins at 9 a.m. with qualifying rounds from noon until 4:30 p.m. The California 100 on June 16 will be flagged away at 2 p.m. Admission to today's qualifying is $1.

SECRETARIAT sent up along the inside to vie for early lead with SHAM to the backstretch, disposed of that one after going three-quarters, drew off at will rounding the far turn and was under a hand ride from Turcotte to set record in performance. TWICE A PRINCE, unable to stay with leaders early, moved through along rail approaching stretch and outfinished MY GALLANT for place. The latter, void of early foot, moved with TWICE A PRINCE rounding the far turn and fought it out gamely with that one through drive. PVT. SMILES showed nothing. SHAM alternated for lead with SECRETARIAT to backstretch, wasn't able to match stride with that rival after going three-quarters and stopped badly.

SECRETARIAT -

Secretariat and Sham, who was second in both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, battled head and head. The two horses matched stride for stride until they were almost halfway down the backstretch.

Relentlessly he left Sham behind. He was a length ahead, two lengths ahead, seven lengths ahead, and the huge crowd roared its approval. As Secretariat steamed around the final bend, Sham gave up in exhaustion and eventually finished fifth in the field of five.

Unbelievably, Secretariat widened and widened the gap over the struggling field.

Twice A Prince, the longest shot in the field, managed to take second place by half a length over My Gallant, but it was as though they were in an entirely different horse race. They had just about passed the sixteenth pole when Secretariat blazed to turf immortality.

Throughout racing history only eight other horses had won the Kentucky Derby, The Preakness and the Belmont Stakes. Not even such a turf immortal as Count Fleet had been able to complete his sweep of the Triple Crown with the power and majesty of Secretariat.

Count Fleet won his Belmont Stakes in 1943 by 25 lengths and that effort was even better than Man O'War's 20-length triumph in 1920.

In addition to Count Fleet, Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, Omaha, War Admiral, Whirlaway, Assault and Citation, the last one 25 years ago, won the Triple Crown.

Angel Cordero, aboard third-place My Gallant, called Secretariat "Just a super horse."

"I've never ridden him but I guess it's just like driving a car."

He was bet almost exclusively and he paid only $2.20 to win, but $2.40 to place. There was no show betting.

Twice A Prince paid $2.60 to place.

Secretariat, the 1972 horse of the year, was winning his fifth race this season in six starts. His only loss came in the Wood Memorial in April when he finished third behind his stablemant Angle Light and Sham.

First money of $90,120 brought the colt's lifetime earnings to $805,122.

In charging to his record Secretariat set an unbelievable fast pace with help from Sham for the first half mile. The colt ran the first quarter in 23 3/5, the half in 46 1/5, and three quarters in an astonishing 1:09 4/5.

On and on he rolled until he passed the mile and an eighth in 1:59 and reached the finish line in 2:24 flat.

Despite the speed he displayed in the early stages, he still was able to run the last quarter in 25 seconds.

Trainer Laurin and owner Mrs. Helen (Penny) Tweedy went from the winner's circle to the trustee's room at Belmont Park for the tradition glass of champagne for the winners. Somehow, Laurin missed getting his glass, and Mrs. Tweedy kept holding hers in her hand without drinking it.

"I was frightened to death before the race," she said.

Asked when she finally lost her apprehensiveness she said, "at the head of the stretch."

Secretariat was 28 lengths ahead at the time.

Flight 109 upsets QH favorites

Flight 109 played the role of spoiler Saturday night at Los Alamitos when he overcame 2-5 favorite Native Empress by a length in the $10,000 Shue Fly stakes before nearly 11,000 fans.

Flight 109, a six-year-old gelded son of Bayou Bar, was making his first start since the $50,000 HQHRA championship held on Feb. 10. But an 18.5 work was apparently enough to tune him up as he pulled away from the field, covering the 350 yards in 17.80, the fastest clocking of the current meeting.

Veteran rider Ronald Banks, who handled Native Empress in her victory in the Peninsula Handicap at Bay Meadows, was in the irons on Flight 109 while Bobby Adair rode Native Empress.

Carry The Banner wins Argo

Carry The Banner, a 16-1 shot, outran the favored Rod and Out of the East to win the $66,200 Argonaut Handicap for 3-year-olds Saturday in race record-equalling time at Hollywood Park.

Winning his third race in six outings this year, Carry The Banner traveled the 1 1/16 miles on the fact track in 1 minute 41 1/5 seconds.

On a sunny afternoon when longshots had captured five successive races going into the feature, the son of Advocator carried 115 pounds to a hefty payoff of $35.20, $9.20 and $4.20.

Rod, finishing just a nose behind as the 5-2 shot, returned $4.40 and $2.80. The 2-1 favorite Out Of The East paid $2.60 in the field of eight in this steppingstone to the $150,000 Hollywood Derby on July 15.

Crusin Jack set the early pace with Out Of The East last and then Tumble Lane took over the lead until the turn for the stretch run when Rod led for a few yards and then surprisingly Carry The Banner, with Alvaro Pineda urging him on, moved to the fore.

He and Rod, with Bill Shoemaker aboard and carrying 119 pounds, virtually matched stride for stride in front of the grandstand until they reached the finish line with Carry The Banner still in front.

The time was well off the track record of 1:39 by Swaps in 1956.

The victory meant $39,220 to the Timestable and was more than three times the previous total winnings of the brown colt, who had earned just $11,325 as a sophomore after not starting as a 2-year-old.

Carry The Banner did, however, equal the record for this race, 1:41 1-5, set by TV Lark in 1960, the first year the race had been limited to 3-year-olds even though this was the 32nd running.

Trainer Charlie Whittingham, leading stakes conditioner at the Hollypark meeting, sends out a pair of consistent grass performers in the $40,000-added Manchester Claiming Stakes today at the Inglewood oval, as he goes for another one-two sweep of a major money event.

Fairly Certain and Dr. Kerlan, with Shoemaker and Don Pierce handling the reins, make up the Whittingham entry. Both will be running for the top claiming price of $50,000, and therefore share high-weight honors at 122 pounds.

In the sabbath co-feature, slated as the sixth race, Whittingham sends out one of his biggest guns, Kennedy Road. The multi stakes winning Canadian heads a field of six for the mile and one-sixteenth turf affair, which offers a $20,000 purse.

Shoemaker will ride Kennedy Road, unplaced in the Californian his last time out.

Jones applauds Secretarait

NEW YORK (AP) — "I guess you have to say now that he's a great horse."

That's what Jimmy Jones said of Secretariat at Belmont Park Saturday after the Meandow Stable colt became the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years with an unbelieveable 31-length victory in the Belmont Stakes in the record of 2:24 for the 1½ miles.

Jones trained Citation, the last colt to sweep the Triple Crown. That was for Calument Farm in 1948.

Jones earlier had refrained from giving unqualified approval to Secretariat.

"At this time," Jones said during the post parade at Belmont Saturday, "you must have some reserve since he has yet to beat older horses."

All of Jimmy's reserve melted during the race.

"He'll win by 10 lengths now," he said after Secretariat started drawing away from Sham after the first half-mile in 46 1/5 seconds.

"I guess you've got to say now that he's a great horse," Jones admitted. "He has improved steadily since he lost in the Wood Memorial and I'm sure he will get his chance to beat older horses in the fall — and he will beat them, too."

Asked to compare Secretariat to Citation, Jones replied:

"That's like comparing Joe Louis and Jack Dempsey. Times are different now from 25 years ago."

RACE ROUNDUP

Combined News Service

BEMO, making the fifth start of his career, scored his fourth consecutive victory taking the $28,850 Long Branch Stakes at Monmouth Park Saturday. The Hickory Tree Stable gelding was a half-length ahead of WARBUCKS after battling him down the homestretch in the one-and-1/16 turf race. HEY RUBE was another three lengths back in third, while prerace favorite ROYAL AND REGAL, winner of the Florida Derby earlier this season, finished sixth. BEMO returned $13.40, $6.40 and $5.20.

Bwamazon Farm's CORAGGIOSE swept to the $28,850 Bryn Mawr Stakes by four and a half lengths over CORNISH PRINCESS at Liberty Bell Race Track. Third in the mile-and-70-yard test for 3-year old fillies was CORAGGIOSE'S stablemate, OUT COLD. The Bwamazon entry returned $5.60, $3.20 and $3.80.

TWIXT, ridden by Bobby Breen, scored a half length win over FUSSY GIRL to win the $28,450 Janice H. Handicap at Arlington Park. ROYAL PUSSYCAT was third, while 9-5 favorite MAIN TAM was fourth. TWIXT paid $7.00, $4.40 and $3.40.

Putting on a burst of speed in the stretch, WESTGATE MALL came from next to last in a nine horse field to capture the $15,000-added Bayard Tuckerman Handicap at Suffolk Downs. A crowd of 9,485 saw WESTGATE MALL catch the leaders in the last stride, to defeat ROCKVILLE by a head and third place HEAVY UP. The winner paid $3.40, $2.40 and $2.20.

MARTHA BELLE equalled the track record for five furlongs while winning the $7,500 Gaspee Handicap in 58 2/5 at Narragansett Park. The four-year old filly paid $8.80, $4.20 and $4.00.

Having a blast

When Bruce Crampton had to use a pitching wedge from a bunker on the last hole of the '73 Colonial National Invitation, it stressed the need to know various bunker shots.

Bruce is one of the tour's finest bunker players, but bent his sand wedge on rocks earlier in the round. So when Tom Weiskopf nipped him on the last hole (Bruce double bogeyed), Crampton said, "I never practiced bunker shots with a pitching wedge."

When a ball is buried in a bunker (Bruce's wasn't), no wedge will save you as consistently as a 9-iron.

Some pros know how to hood the face of a wedge and blast out. I prefer the 9-iron.

First, set your feet securely in the sand. Focus on the spot about half-an-inch behind the ball. That's where you want to dig in.

The 9-iron, unlike a sand iron, has no flange, so it bites through the grit easier. Take it up and hit down crisply on the ball. Bury that baby like you're chopping sandburrs. The ball will pop right outta there.

Don't worry about follow-through. The club's momentum will give you enough follow-through.

Manley does it again

Yawn: 32nd hole-in-one

Norman Manley plays golf for fun but scores as if he takes it very seriously.

The Long Beach amateur's latest feat is a course-record 64 at the new Anaheim Hills municipal course that included a hole-in-one — Manley's 32nd, an amateur record.

Manley, 50, shot 32-32 on the 6,257-yard, par-72 course. He had one streak on the front nine of eagle 2, birdie 3, birdie 3, birdie 2.

His ace came on the back side on the 201-yard 13th hole, a downhill dogleg. He used a 5-iron.

"It took one bounce and popped right in," said Manley, whose playing partners — Gary Beall of Norwalk and Curtis Polkes of Downey — said he kissed his club and threw his hat in the air, as if he's never had one before.

His score broke the course record by four strokes. It was the fifth time he had played it. His only bogey came on the final hole, a relatively easy par-4. He had only 25 putts for the round.

Manley's golfing prowess already is documented. Among his achievements is back-to-back aces on par-4 holes, and he is the only known golfer to do it.

A remarkable round

Anaheim Hills golf pro Bob Killion (right) accepts ball from Long Beach amateur Norman Manley, who scored first hole-in-one on new course — but it was Manley's 32nd ace as part of a course-record round of 64.

10-man squad for Maccabiah Games listed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Arnie Berman, a former star at Brown who holds most of that school's basketball records, heads a 10-man squad announced today to represent the U.S. in the ninth World Maccabiah Games in Israel July 9-19.

Two more players are still to be nominated for the team which will be coached by Harry Litwack, the retired coach at Temple, who handled the U.S. gold medal winners in the 1957 Maccabiah Games.

Others names, besides Berman, were Larry Cohen of Illinois; Paul Cohen, Loyola, Ill.; Bill Finger, Penn; Bob Fleischer, Youngstown, Ohio; Aaron Grandinson, who will enroll at Penn in the fall; Ernie Grunfeld, who will enroll at Tennessee; Larry Horowitz, Davidson; Brad Rogers, Wesleyan; and Bob Shapiro, Mississippi State.

Oakmont: a tale of two golfers

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus returns to the site of his first — and quite possibly most important — professional victory this week when he defends his crown in the United States Open Golf Championship.

"I've wondered, from time to time, what my career may have been like if I had not won that tournament," Nicklaus said of his 1962 National Open victory, his first professional triumph.

"There are an infinite number of things that can happen to make a player win or lose a tournament," he said. "Winning or losing can have an infinite effect on a player's career and attitude."

He came to Oakmont — sometimes called "The Hades of Hulton" for the street on which it is located — as a fat kid of 22. He was a non-winning rookie pro trying to harness the power of his game, and covering some inherent shyness and uncertainty with occasional sharp barbs and bluster, with sometimes cutting remarks.

He returns now as the game's premier player, acknowledged the world's best and eyeing a plateau of performance and accomplishment unattained by any other man to play this old game.

Arnold Palmer is in a separate category.

While Oakmont marked the beginning of the Nicklaus era, it also was the beginning of the end of the Palmer era.

"I won the Masters that year," Palmer recalled of 1962. "I won the British Open. I lost in a playoff to Jack in the U.S. Open and I lost by one stroke in the PGA. That's pretty close. It was a very good season. I won eight tournaments that year."

But his star was descending. He hasn't won a major championship since then.

Counting, folding, stuffing, Lynn Taylor and Tracy Schultz prepare for the day's deliveries of the Press-Telegram.

Then before leaving, Lynn and district 7 supervisor Dorothy Davis take care of collection details and paper work.

Turning a bystander's head, Lynn's off for her route.

YOUR NEWSPAPER BOY . . . THINK ABOUT HIM OR HER.

In case you haven't noticed, your paper boy just might be a paper girl. But boy or girl, Independent and Press-Telegram news carriers are an important group of youngsters.

They are important not just because they deliver our product to you, but because they are a group of youngsters taking a working interest in their own futures.

Like Lynn Taylor, carrier for district 7. Lynn has her sights set on the future — a career with the airlines or modeling. But right now she's learning the ways of business, the importance of pleasing her customers and handling money. She's learning concepts and responsibilities that will prepare her for the future.

AND Lynn's having a good time. She's meeting people, making friends. Lynn's just one of over 1,700 independent carrier boys and girls that deliver these newspapers. The youngster who delivers your Independent or Press-Telegram is probably a lot like Lynn, only maybe he's a boy!

List dates for hunting seasons

Even though the top interest of outdoorsmen now is on the yellowtail run off the Southern California coast, this is the time of year to discuss certain changes in the hunting regulations inasmuch as the first of those seasons—the one for cottontail rabbits—is just three weeks away.

Also, with school closing this week, families like to plan their vacation, and many do want to incorporate a hunting week in that period.

So, first of all, the rabbit season will begin July 1 and continue through Jan. 31 of next year, with a limit of five per day and in possession. There is no limit on jackrabbits. The Fish and Game Commission has decided to set a separate season for all rabbits, even jacks, in Inyo, San Bernardino, southeastern Kern, Riverside, Orange, San Diego and Imperial Counties, with the dates, Sept. 1-Jan. 31. There would be the same limit on cottontails, but no limits on jacks.

I know that most hunters want information on deer primarily so that they may arrange their schedules to hunt in either the coastal or inland areas. The early (coastal) season has been shortened this year by one week. It will open Aug. 4, which is about the usual time for that opening, but it will close on Sept. 16, with the usual limit of two bucks, forked horn or better.

THE NORTHERN DEER SEASON will open Sept. 22 and run through Oct. 22, with a limit of one buck, three points or better; two bucks, forked horn or better in Humboldt, Del Norte and Trinity Counties; one buck, forked horn or better, in the balance of the area. The late season (inland) will run from Sept. 22 through Nov. 11.

The archers, as usual, will have their own seasons —July 7 through the 22nd for the early season and Aug. 18-Sept. 11 for the late season, with the same general limits as those imposed on the gun hunters. The commissioners also decided to continue the limit on quail in the desert area of Southern California at six per day and six in possession. It had been proposed to expand that number to 10 and 10, as it will be in the rest of the state. The season will open Oct. 27 and run through Jan. 31 in most of the state. However, there will be opening dates of Sept. 29 for some central coastal counties and a shorter season for some extreme northern counties. These also will be the usual Sept. 15-Oct. 26 season for mountain quail.

The pheasant season will run from Nov. 17 through Dec. 9, statewide, with a bag and possession limit of two birds of either sex the first weekend, and four birds of either sex thereafter in southern counties; two males per day for the first weekend and four males per day thereafter for the balance of the state.

THE ARCHERS ALSO HAVE THEIR season for pheasant, with the northern dates Dec. 15-23 and two males the limit; two pheasants per day Dec. 15 and 16, and four birds of either sex Dec. 17-23 in the balance of the state. Hunters using falcons have a season of their own (Dec. 15-Jan.13) with a limit of one bird per day.

The chukar season dates will be about the same as those for quail, but there will be a limit of four birds statewide.

Even though the commission had planned a later season for spring turkeys, pressure from several sources caused them to advance the season dates to April 23-28. The commission also went along with the Department of Fish and Game recommendations for adding counties to the spring and fall turkey shoots.

Fresno, Kern and Tulare Counties were added to the fall turkey season, bringing the total of counties to 15. Nine counties were added to the spring turkey hunt, increasing the total to 23. Additions were Alpine, Amador, Butte, Calaveras, El Dorado, Lake, Mendocino, Placer and Santa Clara.

The counties of Ventura, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles and San Bernardino were added to the Oct. 13-Jan. 1 bear shoot. A small portion of Riverside County also was added to the bear season. The limit was kept at one bear (adult) per season.

PRIOR TO THE COMMISSION MEETING there had been a limit of one wild pig per day, but only a closed season for Monterey County. The commission lifted that provision, making an open season throughout the year the the entire state. The one-pig-per-day limit remains in effect, however.

The sage grouse season, which is so short that it means little to most hunters, was changed so that hunters may shoot only one bird of that species per day. There are only two shooting days—Sept. 15-16—in Inyo, Mono, Modoc and Lasen Counties.

However, for the Sierra and ruffed grouse, it will run from Sept. 15 through Oct. 14, with a bag and possession limit of two birds per day. Most of the counties involved are in northern areas and the Sierra Nevada. The full list will appear in the California Hunting Regulations pamphlet.

Omar White, Huntington Beach, had applied for a falconry license for hunting purposes, but the DFG had refused it. The commission upheld the action. White had pleaded guilty to using a falcon for hunting on April 17. The commission said that he could not apply again for two years.

The commission also gave the DFG permission to purchase critical bighorn sheep habitat lands, subject to the availability of funds and other budgetary considerations.

Millikan gains volleyball final

Millikan High's volleyball team advanced to the finals of the National Junior Championships Saturday with three wins and one draw.

The Rams defeated Dana Hills 15-2, 15-3, Serra 15-13, 16-14 and Tunknannock (Pa.) 15-13, 15-13 and drew with Culver City 17-15, 6-15.

Millikan will play in the finals today, 9 a.m. at Inglewood in the double elimination event.

Testimonial Friday night

Calvin, Washington and Rambo to be honored

Three of Long Beach's foremost athletes — Mack Calvin, Gene Washington and John Rambo — will be honored at a banquet sponsored by the Community Improvement League at Rochelle's Restaurant Friday night.

Calvin has been an outstanding performer for the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Assn. after winning all-coast distinction at USC in 1969. He also was all-Metropolitan Conference at Long Beach City College and all-CIF at Poly High.

Washington has been an all-pro wide receiver with the San Francisco 49ers after an all-America career at Stanford. He was a high school all-America quarterback at Poly, where he also was the school's first black student body president.

Rambo, also a Poly alumnus, attended Long Beach State University and was a bronze medalist in the high jump at the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo.

Tickets to the affair are $20 for individuals and $30 for couples and are available from the Long beach Community Improvement League, 555 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

Football grants to 26 Vikes

By JIM MANGAN
Staff Writer

The caliber of football in the Metropolitan Conference was emphasized again this week when Gary Jacobsen, coach of Long Beach City College, said 26 of the 28 sophomores on last year's Viking squad have received full athletic scholarships to four-year schools.

Not only is the number, which includes several second-stringers and a few from the third unit, of significance, but it takes on added interest in view of LBCC's 1972 record: 5-3-1 overall, and 2-3 and a third-place tie in Metro play.

One of the most prominent of last season's Vikings is already pencilled into a starting unit Pacific-8 unit — tailback Bill Cecil at Oregon State.

Cecil, who gained more than 1,000 yards for LBCC last year, may find a familiar face in his path in Pac-8 play, however: defensive tackle Mike Holleran of Washington State.

Several LBCC players will be on the same side in the 1973 season, however, with Cal State Long Beach having the most togetherness.

Six ex-Vikings will be wearing 49er uniforms: linebackers Rick Breeze and Dave Stanley, guards Hank Gilman and Gene Kemmerer, tackle Viva Tuliau and kicker Eric George.

Others from Jacobsen's '72 squad who will still be listed on the same rosters include defensive backs Dan Garcia and Cliff Kemp at Utah State; defensive end Daryl Donati and quarterback Steve Towne, University of Pacific; defensive back Jeff Breithaupt and guard Randy Henderson, Texas Christian; guard Levine and linebacker Mike Gregory, Fullerton State; and wingback Kelly Felix and linebacker Pat Duffy, Cal Lutheran.

Split end Allen Brown will be the farthest away from home: he is at University of Hawaii.

Tackle Tim Reilly also is a bit distant at Nebraska, while fullback John Dellenger is not too much closer at Utah University.

End Wayne Parkins will play at Northern Arizona University (Flagstaff); defensive end Curt Nichols will be at San Diego State; linebacker Bob Stratton, San Francisco State; defensive back Keith Garner, University of Nevada Las Vegas; and Gary Bockman, Cal Poly Pomona.

Jesse Owens Shattering World Broad Jump Record

Ann Arbor, Mich., 1935

At Ferry Field the 10,000 people assembled here to watch the 35th annual Western Conference Track and Field Championship Meet have their eyes glued on one man.

The man is Ohio State's marvelous sophomore Jesse Owens. Owens is at the end of the broad jump runway preparing for his first jump.

The 21 year old Owens tied the world record in the 100 yard dash ten minutes ago with a blazing 9.4.

He is now charging down the broad jump runway. He hits the board and gracefully lifts his slender body high and far into the pit.

Moments later announcer Ted Canty proclaims to an amazed crowd that Owens has just broken the world broad jump record by nearly half a foot! He has jumped 26 feet, 8¼ inches.

It's been only nine minutes since Owens' super broad jump effort and the fleet Buckeye is now at the starting line for the 220 yard dash. They're off and Owens explodes out ahead of the field. He streaks across the finish and the crowd senses that Jesse Owens has threatened another record.

Threatened is not the word. The fans are stunned as Owens' time is announced. He has run the furlong in an unbelievable 20.3 Roland Locke has held the record for this event since 1926 with a time of 20.6.

Twenty minutes later Jesse is back at the starting line. The event is the 220 yard low hurdles. The race begins and Jesse is running away from the competition again. He electrifies this crowd as he glides across the finish line far ahead of the field.

Jesse owens has run his last race today and he has also set his last world record for the time being. The existing world mark of the 220 yard hurdles is 23.0. Owens has run them in 22.6!

In less than one hour, Ohio State's one man gang, Jesse Owens, has shattered three world records and tied another.

Shua remains unbeaten, tops Motor Patrol

Steve Fenoglio and Tom Hicks each singled one run in the eighth inning to lead Shua Past Motor Patrol 3-1 Saturday in American Legion baseball.

Brett Houser had the bases loaded twice but managed to work out of trouble with key strike outs. Shua managed to stay undefeated (4-0) with the win.

In other games Lakewood edged Alamitos Bay 4-1, Peterson beat San Pedro 5-2 and North Long Beach whipped Carson 8-2.

John Buck, Dave Sylvia and Floyd Chiffer combined for seven strike outs to help Lakewood win. Lakewood scored three times in the eighth inning, with the aid of errors, to win.

Troy Bowman tripled with the bases loaded to lead North Long Beach to its win. Carson went through five pitchers trying to stop NLB.

Rick Bryant singled in two runs in the second inning and Ted Celler went two-for-four to lead Peterson to its wins.

49er crew in NWRA finals

The Long Beach State Women's crew will enter two events this weekend in the National Women's Rowing Assn. championships in Philadelphia.

Also participating from Long Beach will be the Long Beach Rowing Assn.'s Karen McCloskey and Joan Lind in the heavy doubles. The LBRA also has entries in the heavy singles and lightweight singles.

Winners in the six international events (singles, double, quad, pair, four and eights) will qualify for international competition at the European Championships at Moscow in August.

The 49er Women have won the heavyweight fours in the Western Invitational Championships at Lake Merritt over the Memorial Day weekend and both events in the San Diego Classic.

Heat races begin on Friday with 18 events scheduled. Finals are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday a Schuylkill on the River.

Competition will be furnished by, among others, the University of Washington, Vesper Boat Club, College Boat Club and Radcliff.

The LBSU women are coached by George Lockwood. The girls are: Cindy Ferguson, Kathy Lemmon, Pat Burns, Marti Ramos, Dana Rogers, Pam Graham, Bev Bossard, Cyndi Martinich, Gloria Gray and Kathy Nickerson.

'Jet Arrive Ruidoso pick

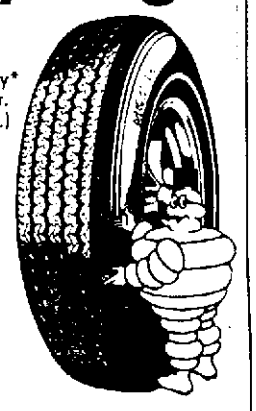

RUIDOSO, N.M. (AP) — Easy Jet Arrive ranks as a narrow favorite in a 10-horse field for today's Kansas Quarter Horse Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

The colt owned by Loraine Beresford of New Vernon, N.J., was the fastest qualifier for the $353,250 race, first in what is considered quarter horse racing's Triple Crown.

The other two races, also run at the New Mexico track, are the Rainbow Futurit Aug. 5 and the All-American Futurity on Labor Day.

Michelin costs less in the long run. The very long run.

Backed by Michelin's Warranty* for 40,000 miles of tread wear. (Many owners get much more.) Puncture resistant Michelins give precise steering control, and smooth driving comfort. Stop in and start saving now.

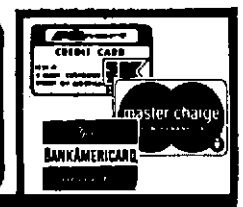

MICHELIN

*Michelin's Warranty for X Radial Highway Tubeless Whitewall Tire shown here covers tread life, and normal road hazards (excluding repairable punctures) for 40,000 miles, and defects in workmanship and materials, when tire is used on domestic passenger vehicles in normal service in continental United States, except Alaska. Credit or refund (at Michelin's option) is equal to current retail selling price multiplied by percentage or warranted mileage not run on tire.

Maccabee hosts U.S. title game

Greater Los Angeles Soccer League powerhouse Maccabee meets Inter-Italia of Cleveland in the National Open Cup soccer shampionship at 2 p.m. today at Rancho Cienega Stadium.

Both clubs recorded upset wins to reach the final. Cleveland stopped the New York Greek-American, 3-1, to win the Eastern United States title.

Maccabee blanked the Chicago Croatia Club, 1-0, to win the Western United States championship.

Maccabee Coach Max Wozniak has molded one of the nation's finest defenses. No team has scored more than one goal against Maccabee in Open Cup competition.

Maccabee captured the Southern California Cup playoff game with a 1-0 double overtime win over the defending champion San Pedro Slavs.

The Open Cup playoff is sponsored by the United States Soccer Football Association. The winner will be presented the DeWar Cup by tournament chairman John O. Best.

Mexico soccer champs slated

Defending Mexican national soccer champion Cruz Azul makes its first Los Angeles appearance against Cruzeiro of Brazil at 8 p.m. Friday, June 22, at the Coliseum.

Cruz Azul has dominated Mexican soccer since 1968, the year it captured the first division championship and the Mexican [illegible] title. Seven national players dot Azul's lineup.

Catholic League Jamboree today

Six hundred players from 38 teams will participate in the Catholic Boys Baseball League's annual Jamboree today at El Dorado Park, 9 to 5.

Each team will play for 45 minutes.

AS MEN INVADE THE PRIMARY GRADES

Oddballs become heroes

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

They used to look askance at the man who requested a primary grade teaching position. They saw him as an oddball, a weirdo, or the type of man who only went into elementary teaching because it would lead to an administrative post.

Today, the oddball has become a hero and he's looked upon, not with suspicion, but with approval, admiration and, most likely, the offer of a job.

What brought about this radical change in attitude? Dr. Clare Rodney, associate professor of elementary education at Long Beach State University, believes that the change in thinking can be attributed to the growing acceptance that a man can be as nurturing and warm as a woman and that his presence in the classroom can be highly beneficial to the primary child.

"All along, specialists in the early childhood education field have been saying that there was room for men as well as women in kindergarten through third grade. But educators in the schools were almost puritanical in their view that men had no business working with young children.

"For the most part, men were discouraged, both openly and subtly, from going into the primary field. They were directed elsewhere—usually to the high schools or the junior high schools."

ACCORDING TO Dr. Rodney, the field began to open up to men seven or eight years ago as the schools began to place more emphasis on providing what was best for children from disadvantaged backgrounds. The schools began to see that a male image in the primary classroom could be very important to these children — many of whom came from broken homes.

"Today, it's pretty much accepted that if an individual meets the criteria of a good professional person it doesn't matter whether the person is a woman or a man. People realize that you don't have to be a mother to work with young children. You just have to be a concerned human being."

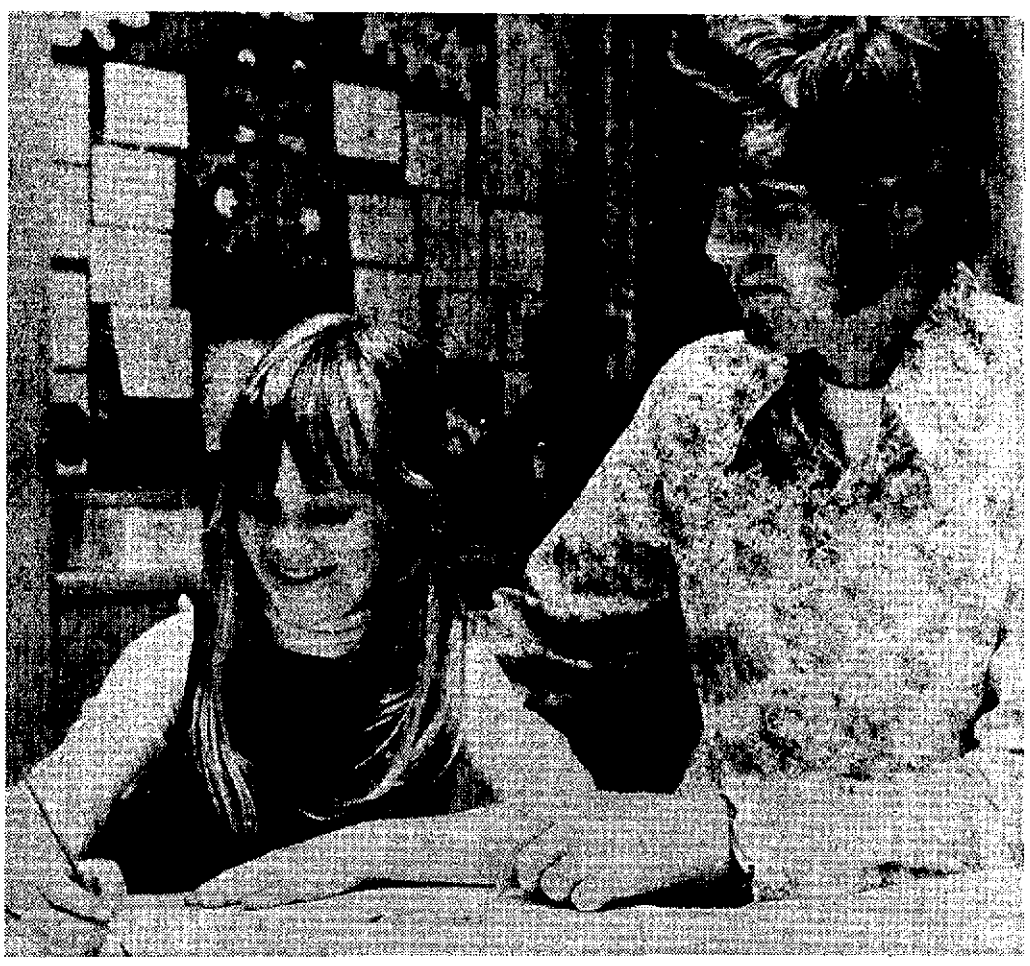

Dr. Rodney, who contends that primary education did to men what most other fields have done to women in terms of sexual discrimination, further noted that today it's the men who are getting the first jobs.

"According to statistics released by our placement office, last year 90 per cent of the men seeking employment in education were hired while only 60 per cent of the women found employment."

SPOKESMEN for school districts in the area reiterated the view that the male image in the lower grades seems to have a positive effect on children.

"At first we were a little surprised that men would be interested in small children," said Dr. Dorothy Welch, who has been a consultant for elementary education in Long Beach for 21 years. "Now, however, there's a definite push on

THIRD GRADER Tracy Wal shows teacher Chris Forehan how adept she is at painting flowers. Forehan, a first year teacher in the ABC Unified School District, believes that a male image is essential to all students, regardless of their socio-economic backgrounds.

MEN MAY HAVE BETTER CONTROL in the classroom believes Dennis Taylor, third grade teacher at Lincoln School in central Long Beach. Taylor, who would like to teach first grade or even kindergarten, contends that the lower the grade level, the more important the teacher's job becomes.

Washington and marriage incompatible

By WINZOLA McLENDON
Part I

Marriage Washington Style has been compared to Marriage Hollywood Style, "without the money." All the other ingredients for a high-risk union are present.

"Where else but here and in the entertainment world does a wife have to live with her husband's sins in public? asks a Georgetown divorcee, citing a hit-and-run driving charge against an important member of Congress; drunken brawls of another and the alleged "womanizing" of certain top political figures. (Parade once listed Eugene McCarthy, Edward Kennedy, Birch Bayh and Lyndon Johnson among its choices for the great Casanovas of the Senate during the past 30 years.)

This has never been more evident than during the Watergate scandal. How many long-faced, teary-eyed wives did Washington newsmen photograph as one shocking revelation was made after another? We've lost count. Whether the strain of sharing the public scorn heaped on their golden boys has weakened the marriage bonds, will probably not be known for some time.

Wives always do the brave, expected thing when their husbands are in trouble and while the public eye is focused on them. It is later, when they start to put the pieces of their lives together, that they begin to wonder if they would not be better off going it alone.

PUBLIC SINS aren't the only problems of Washington marriages. Just the temptations are hard to bear up under.

"Those women!" exclaims newswoman Clare Crawford, separated but not yet divorced from her politician husband. "They fall all over a politician the way kids fall all over rock stars. They are groupies, political groupies, the worst kind!"

Then some wives, who by nature are very visable or vocal, sometimes find themselves the object of public criticism.

Martha Mitchell once cried out, after receiving a particularly vicious poison-pen letter, "Why do the liberals hate me? They are so against me, and I'm doing their thing." The then Cabinet wife added: "I'm trying to have some freedom of speech, just as they are, and they're trying to take mine away."

Today, looking back on her almost four years in the capital, Martha comments on another great strain on a Washington marriage. "Your husband works 24-hours a day."

Scottie Fitzgerald Smith, author/writer, daughter of F. Scott Fitzgerald, feels that many capital marriages break apart because the city is all come-and-go.

"Mobility is such a big thing in American life, today; well, we have super-mobility in Washington. There are no roots here. In other places you have 100 years of family around you. You can live in Washington for years and not know the names of your best friend's children."

SEN. ROBERT DOLE, former Republican National Committee chairman, divorced recently after 23 years of marriage, says he thinks the greatest strain is the "constant demand to be everywhere."

This means the wife must take complete charge of the house, and be both mother and father. Many wives resent this, as Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon can tell you. At a Republican Congressional Wive's lunch, he said the most valuable role of a politician's wife was that of "confidential advisor, best friend . . . (and) mother and father to the children." Some of the ladies hissed.

Ellen, when her marriage to Sen. William Proxmire dissolved, told a reporter, then, that the demands on her time were so great during his last campaign that "finally I just said: 'Stop — I want to get off for a while—''

Age is another hazard, according to Dr. Richard A. Steinbach, chairman of the psychiatry department at Georgetown University School of Medicine. Success often coincides with the menopausal years — a time when some men attempt to boost their waning virility with an attractive younger woman.

And plenty of power hungry young women are willing to be wooed by influential Washington men, Dr. Steinbach says. Taking an important man away from his wife is great for their ego.

BARBARA HOWAR, who confesses to two affairs with top echelon men in the Johnson administration in her book, "Laughing All the Way," told TV's Dick Cavett that feminine conditioning was to blame. Rich, bored and 30, she said that she, like many another Washington woman, thought that the only way a woman could experience greatness was to sleep with it.

A recently divorced woman puts it this way: "These powerful men are constantly exposed to glamorous women. They are lionized at parties. Their every utterance is reported breathlessly by the media. They are surrounded all day by worshipping secretaries and assistants.

"Well, when you've been Sultan-of-the-Harem all day long, it's awfully hard to go home at night and be handy-man-around-the-house!"

MONDAY: He wins, she loses.

Maccabee hosts U.S. title game

Greater Los Angeles Soccer League powerhouse Maccabee meets Inter-Italia of Cleveland in the National Open Cup soccer championship at 2 p.m. today at Rancho Cienega Stadium.

Both clubs recorded upset wins to reach the final. Cleveland stopped the New York Greek-American, 3-1, to win the Eastern United States title.

Maccabee blanked the Chicago Croatia Club, 1-0, to win the Western United States championship.

Maccabee Coach Max Wozniak has molded one of the nation's finest defenses. No team has scored more than one goal against Maccabee in Open Cup competition.

Maccabee captured the Southern California Cup playoff game with a 1-0 double overtime win over the defending champion San Pedro Slavs.

The Open Cup playoff is sponsored by the United States Soccer Football Association. The winner will be presented the DeWar Cup by tournament chairman John O. Best.

Mexico soccer champs slated

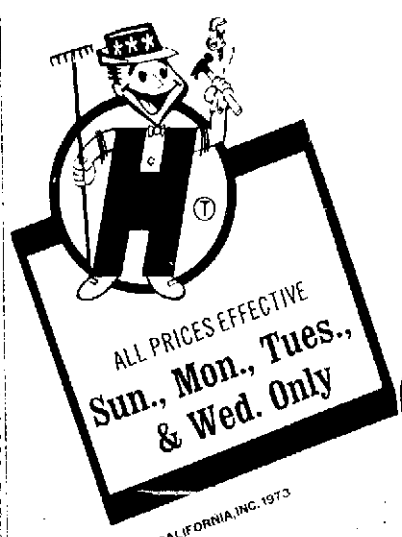

Defending Mexican national soccer champion Cruz Azul makes its first Los Angeles appearance against Cruzeiro of Brazil at 8 p.m. Friday, June 22, at the Coliseum.

Cruz Azul has dominated Mexican soccer since 1968, the year it captured the first division championship and the Mexican Cup title. Seven international players dot Cruz Azul's lineup.

Catholic League Jamboree today

Six hundred players from 38 teams will participate in the Catholic Boys Baseball League's annual Jamboree today at El Dorado Park, 9 to 5.

Each team will play for 45 minutes.

AS MEN INVADE THE PRIMARY GRADES

Oddballs become heroes

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

They used to look askance at the man who requested a primary grade teaching position. They saw him as an oddball, a weirdo, or the type of man who only went into elementary teaching because it would lead to an administrative post.

Today, the oddball has become a hero and he's looked upon, not with suspicion, but with approval, admiration and, most likely, the offer of a job.

What brought about this radical change in attitude? Dr. Clare Rodney, associate professor of elementary education at Long Beach State University, believes that the change in thinking can be attributed to the growing acceptance that a man can be as nurturing and warm as a woman and that his presence in the classroom can be highly beneficial to the primary child.

"All along, specialists in the early childhood education field have been saying that there was room for men as well as women in kindergarten through third grade. But educators in the schools were almost puritanical in their view that men had no business working with young children.

"For the most part, men were discouraged, both openly and subtly, from going into the primary field. They were directed elsewhere—usually to the high schools or the junior high schools."

ACCORDING TO Dr. Rodney, the field began to open up to men seven or eight years ago as the schools began to place more emphasis on providing what was best for children from disadvantaged backgrounds. The schools began to see that a male image in the primary classroom could be very important to these children — many of whom came from broken homes.

"Today, it's pretty much accepted that if an individual meets the criteria of a good professional person it doesn't matter whether the person is a woman or a man. People realize that you don't have to be a mother to work with young children. You just have to be a concerned human being."

Dr. Rodney, who contends that primary education did to men what most other fields have done to women in terms of sexual discrimination, further noted that today it's the men who are getting the first jobs.

"According to statistics released by our placement office, last year 90 per cent of the men seeking employment in education were hired while only 60 per cent of the women found employment."

SPOKESMEN for school districts in the area reiterated the view that the male image in the lower grades seems to have a positive effect on children.

"At first we were a little surprised that men would be interested in small children," said Dr. Dorothy Welch, who has been a consultant for elementary education in Long Beach for 21 years. "Now, however, there's a definite push on

THIRD GRADER Tracy Wal shows teacher Chris Forehan how adept she is at painting flowers. Forehan, a first year teacher in the ABC Unified School District, believes that a male image is essential to all students, regardless of their socio-economic backgrounds.

MEN MAY HAVE BETTER CONTROL in the classroom believes Dennis Taylor, third grade teacher at Lincoln School in central Long Beach. Taylor, who would like to teach first grade or even kindergarten, contends that the lower the grade level, the more important the teacher's job becomes.

Washington and marriage incompatible

By WINZOLA McLENDON
Part I

Marriage Washington Style has been compared to Marriage Hollywood Style, "without the money." All the other ingredients for a high-risk union are present.

"Where else but here and in the entertainment world does a wife have to live with her husband's sins in public? asks a Georgetown divorcee, citing a hit-and-run driving charge against an important member of Congress; drunken brawls of another and the alleged "womanizing" of certain top political figures. (Parade once listed Eugene McCarthy, Edward Kennedy, Birch Bayh and Lyndon Johnson among its choices for the great Casanovas of the Senate during the past 30 years.)

This has never been more evident than during the Watergate scandal. How many long-faced, teary-eyed wives did Washington newsmen photograph as one shocking revelation was made after another? We've lost count. Whether the strain of sharing the public scorn heaped on their golden boys has weakened the marriage bonds, will probably not be known for some time.

Wives always do the brave, expected thing when their husbands are in trouble and while the public eye is focused on them. It is later, when they start to put the pieces of their lives together, that they begin to wonder if they would not be better off going it alone.

PUBLIC SINS aren't the only problems of Washington marriages. Just the temptations are hard to bear up under.

"Those women!" exclaims newswoman Clare Crawford, separated but not yet divorced from her politician husband. "They fall all over a politician the way kids fall all over rock stars. They are groupies, political groupies, the worst kind!"

Then some wives, who by nature are very visable or vocal, sometimes find themselves the object of public criticism.

Martha Mitchell once cried out, after receiving a particularly vicious poison-pen letter, "Why do the liberals hate me? They are so against me, and I'm doing their thing." The then Cabinet wife added: "I'm trying to have some freedom of speech, just as they are, and they're trying to take mine away."

Today, looking back on her almost four years in the capital, Martha comments on another great strain on a Washington marriage. "Your husband works 24-hours a day."

Scottie Fitzgerald Smith, author/writer, daughter of F. Scott Fitzgerald, feels that many capital marriages break apart because the city is all come-and-go.

"Mobility is such a big thing in American life, today; well, we have super-mobility in Washington. There are no roots here. In other places you have 100 years of family around you. You can live in Washington for years and not know the names of your best friend's children."

SEN. ROBERT DOLE, former Republican National Committee chairman, divorced recently after 23 years of marriage, says he thinks the greatest strain is the "constant demand to be everywhere."

This means the wife must take complete charge of the house, and be both mother and father. Many wives resent this, as Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon can tell you. At a Republican Congressional Wive's lunch, he said the most valuable role of a politician's wife was that of "confidential advisor, best friend . . . (and) mother and father to the children." Some of the ladies hissed.

Ellen, when her marriage to Sen. William Proxmire dissolved, told a reporter, then, that the demands on her time were so great during his last campaign that "finally I just said: 'Stop — I want to get off for a while—'"

Age is another hazard, according to Dr. Richard A. Steinbach, chairman of the psychiatry department at Georgetown University School of Medicine. Success often coincides with the menopausal years — a time when some men attempt to boost their waning virility with an attractive younger woman.

And plenty of power hungry young women are willing to be wooed by influential Washington men, Dr. Steinbach says. Taking an important man away from his wife is great for their ego.

BARBARA HOWAR, who confesses to two affairs with top echelon men in the Johnson administration in her book, "Laughing All the Way," told TV's Dick Cavett that feminine conditioning was to blame. Rich, bored and 30, she said that she, like many another Washington woman, thought that the only way a woman could experience greatness was to sleep with it.

A recently divorced woman puts it this way: "These powerful men are constantly exposed to glamorous women. They are lionized at parties. Their every utterance is reported breathlessly by the media. They are surrounded all day by worshipping secretaries and assistants.

"Well, when you've been Sultan-of-the-Harem all day long, it's awfully hard to go home at night and be handy-man-around-the-house!"

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Posh party at pierside

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

The fifth annual "Plazaquatics" benefiting Family Service and Homemaker Service of Long Beach was held Thursday evening.

The event is so named because it is usually traditionally held at Belmont Plaza pool.

But this year they changed the format a little.

Boy, did they change the format!

The poshest party our town has seen in many a year was held aboard the Spirit of London, brand new cruise ship of the P&O Line.

You may know that the word posh was coined by the British at least a century ago (P&O is 136 years old) when travelers were sailing to India.

If one wanted the most deluxe accommmodations, one asked for Portside Out (To India) and Starboard Home to England. The initials spell posh.

The traveler has nothing to worry about these days, at least on the Spirit of London—all accommodations on this 17,000 ton beauty are posh.

Harriett Williams is president of the group this year and her husband, Reed, happens to be the local attorney for P&O and he also happens to be a good friend of the skipper of Spirit, Capt. Jerry McGowan. When the Williams learned that the ship was to stop here before starting her maiden voyage to Canada and Alaska, party plans began to form.

Capt. Jerry conferred with his superiors and P&O volunteered to host the cocktail party.

Well, you might say they can afford a charitable contribution. But can you imagine an entire crew of a foreign ship volunteering to serve a six course banquet to more than 300 people for a charity event in a strange country WITHOUT pay?

That's what the crew of the Spirit of London did.

And they outdid themselves. The service was impeccable and the food was superb.

Among P&O brass introduced were president of the line, George Turner, down from San Francisco, and the director of P&O Australia Ltd., Mervyn Karrasch, who dropped in from Sydney for the evening.

Other special people were localites Ted and Ann Roelfsema and Frank and Ellie Person who were named Blue Ribbon Lifesavers for their generous contributions to Family Service.

Harriett Williams presented a check for $3,500 (party proceeds) to the group.

Among "cruisers" were Dr. Harry and Donnie Orme, Sterling and Carolee Clayton, Dr. Art and Joan Nickerson, Jack and Pat VanderLans, Joe and Beryl Brooks, Spud and Chris Higgins, Bix and Betty Bixby, Fred and Dorothy Wise and Dr. Stephen and Nini Horn.

The party is over, the ship has sailed but the memories will linger on for a long time.

LET'S PLAY a little dance music.

For Pacific Hospital's Board of Directors and Medical staff.

BETTY EDMUNDSON, left, Ann Roelfsema, ship's Captain Jerry McGowan and Harriett Williams get in the spirit at party aboard Spirit of London.

One hundred and fifty of them gathered at the Petroleum Club to hear Sen. George Deukmejian install the new officers, including Wally Bruce, there with his wife Edith, as president.

Neil Fitzgerald and Dr. Peter Davis were given a "well done" for their service on the outgoing board and Dr. Davis received a farewell as he is leaving to open a practice in Paso Robles.

John and Phyllis Eastman drove up from Palm Desert for the party. John knew he was scheduled to receive an award for his work as one of the original members of the hospital board.

What he didn't suspect was a slide presentation of "This is Your Life," depicting John, as a highlight of the program.

On hand to offer congratulations were his daughters Mary Beth Yaisli and husband, Walter, and Frances Armell and her husband, Roland.

Other party-goers included Everett Houser and Jane, Bennett Bond, also from Palm Desert, and his wife Hart Davis, Herman Weissker and Dolores, Dr. Ward and Florrie DeWitt, Bernie and Jackie McCune (he is retiring president) and Pacific's Administrator Dr. David Payne and Margaret.

While wife, Marjorie, looked on, Dr. Tom Dean acted as emcee introducing special guests such as doctors and their ladies, the James Brennans, Mac Todds, Stephen Horns and John Bells.

A FEW notes from Auld Lang Syne.

After working with children for years and years, these two retiring ladies were given farewell parties —strictly for grown ups.

First was a cocktail party for Polly Murphy retiring after 27 years as secretary at Naples Elementary School.

Party was held betwixt and between the canal front homes of Skip and Pat Fleishman and Wayne and Marty Warner. They roped off part of the adjacent street and scores of people dropped in to say goodbye.

Some of them were former Naples students from Polly's early days, who now have children at Naples. Two were Sheila Saracino and Bob Zalkins there with his wife, Cheryl.

Gisla Lampson was party chairman and a festive one it was with a Dixieland band, balloons everywhere and a giant banner proclaiming "We Love You, Polly."

Milber Segerblom created a fresh flower tree with leaves made of greenbacks, to present to Polly.

Among guests were Polly's husband, Tom, their sons and daughters-in-law from Ventura, Tom and Nancy and Bob and Madeline. The boys are also Naples grads. Current Naples Principal Ken and Alice Slawson, past principals, Walter Scott and Barbara Held, with husband, David.

Others were "Willie" Williams, Walter Niedeberger, Glenn and Izora Neff, Ruth Morath, Ann Merrill, Priscilla Bradley, Danny and Dolores Wilson, Bunny and Jeanie Miller, Dorothy Legeman, Carol Rhea, Jewel Penke, Sid and Ann Exley and Scotty and Bebe Wartenberg.

AUDRA HAYLES is hanging up her bus keys after 11 years of driving the school bus for Peninsula children who attend Lowell Elementary.

More than just a bus driver, Audra has been the Mary Poppins of the Peninsula, rescuing bewildered kindergarteners and listening to the "grown-up" woes of sixth graders.

Phyllis Markley and Mary Alice Braly organized the drop-in coffee hour at the Peninsula home of Mary Alice's sister, Evelyn Pangborn.

Audra's farewell present was a charm bracelet with a road-runner charm attached.

Farewellers included Jayne Lane, Jan Lichtenhan, Barbara Wells, Ruth Peck, Sue Thomason, Judy Barrick, Pooh Flint and Jeanette Hjelm.

AT WIT'S END

Teaching the work ethic

By ERMA BOMBECK

School has only been out for a week or so and already mothers are distressed when they make up the beds around 10 a.m. anf find an unemployed teen-ager in it.

For some reason, Horatio Alger doesn't have the shtick he used to. 9-year-old boys don't want to tinker in the garage anymore — or turn a paper route into a newspaper monopoly — or tap dance in saloons. (For that matter, some 20-year-old men make Tom Sawyer look like an account executive.)

As I shook out a blanket before noon the other day and a body rolled out, I said, "Hey! Peter Pan!"

"Who is it?" mumbled an out-of-work voice.

"Would you believe Tinker Bell?"

"What do you want?"

"I don't know how to tell you this, but somewhere between the weekly allowance and your Social Security is a twilight zone called employment."

"ARE YOU GOING to talk about a job again?"

"No, I am going to tell you a story. Once upon a time, there was a little boy called Peter Can who never wanted to grow up. He just wanted to play all night and sleep all day. When his family asked him what he wanted to be when he grew up he said, 'A tax write-off.'

"Peter had a shadow who followed him around everywhere. It was called Mother (or Finkerbell as Peter referred to her.)

"One day, Peter couldn't stand Finkerbell's nagging and he gathered together three of his friends and said, 'All of you who believe in watching Johnny Carson every night and not getting out of bed until Hollywood Squares comes on, clap your hands!' Three of his friends applauded vigorously and together they flew to Hardly-Ever land where no one got any older.

"THEIR adventures were marred by three incidents: a chance meeting with a villain, Capt. George Meany, who chased after them with union memberships, a snapping crocodile who guarded the only refrigerator in Hardly-Ever land, and an Italian princess who refused to sell him pizza without cash.

"Peter finally came home, admitted to Finkerbell that a job was the American way and got a job at Jack-in-the-Box on the catsup dispenser."

"I thought fairy tales were supposed to have happy endings," he said yawning.

"And he ate regularly ever after. How much happier can you get?"

Facing phobias life's work

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

Phobias are common in this day of fast paced living and constant stress.

Possibly the most common of phobias, but with the least known about it is agoraphobia—fear of leaving one's home.

One of the foremost authorities on agoraphobia, with patients all over the world, is Dr. Claire Weekes, a diminutive Australian psychiatrist.

Dr. Weekes, who admits to 70 years, was in Los Angeles recently for a second command promotion tour for her book, "Hope and Help for Your Nerves," which became a best seller six years after it was written.

Agoraphobia is more widespread than people realize, she commented during an interview, although it's only surfaced in America in the last three or four years.

"Mostly women suffer from it and the sufferer usually doesn't talk about it. They just make excuses for not going out alone, or for not going beyond a certain mile radius of their home."

ACCORDING TO Dr. Weekes, who is consulting physician and chief psychiatrist at Rachel Forster Hospital in Sydney, agoraphobia usually results from some trauma or shock to the nervous system. "It often occurs after the birth of a baby if there's severe hemorrhaging.

"The nerves become sensitized and give exaggerated responses. Instead of experiencing an ordinary flash of fear, the victim gets a white hot flash of panic at the thought of leaving the house even to mail a letter or go to the grocery store. The legs turn to jelly and the person is frozen to the spot.

"Such seemingly unexplained occurrences lead to a loss of confidence," said the psychiatrist. "The person thinks she cannot cope with herself if she's away from home. She's afraid of making a fool of herself and fears she can't get help.

"It can happen to anybody. It's part of the anxiety state we live in," Dr. Weekes added. "It results in weakness, trembling, heart palpitations and causes bewilderment in the victim who also feels guilty about her condition."

DR. WEEKES said her phone rings at all hours of the night with calls from patients throughout the world who want to discuss her book with her.

She doesn't believe in probing a patient's subconscious to solve the problems. "Finding a childhood cause for present illness may be interesting, but it rarely helps cope with the present condition."

Two thousand patients with agoraphobia have been under her care for several years in England. Eighty per cent of these patients are women and of these, 80 per cent are married. The average age is 20 to 30 years, although all age groups are represented, including a teen-ager.

"The symptoms of any nervous illness are the symptoms of fear and stress exaggerated. Yet, the same symptoms can occur when we're happy," noted Dr. Weekes, who seeks a positive program for recovery with the patient understanding her illness.

The psychiatrist called despair and fear exhausting and expensive emotions. "They result in brain fatigue and the person becomes indecisive and suggestible. The outside world becomes unreal and the person draws inward, fighting to overcome this strange experience.

"The patient must understand why her body is playing these tricks on her. Once this happens, it's not hard to cure the phobia."

Dr. Weekes has a new book out, "Peace From Nervous Suffering," which tells in detail how to cope with panic and where to write to obtain the records and cassettes she's recorded with advice on how to overcome agoraphobia. Both books are published by Hawthorn Books, New York.

Pool in summer session

The public is invited to attend the season opening of the California Communities Pool for the Handicapped, 6801 Long Beach Blvd., on Saturday at 10 a.m.

The swim facilities, free to any handicapped person, regardless of age or type of handicap, will be available six days a week from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. beginning June 18. Volunteers work on a one-to-one basis with swimmers at the pool.

The facilities are maintained solely through fund-raising projects and contributions from the public. This fall, executive director Evelyn du-Pont hopes finally to "raise the roof", making it possible to keep the pool open all year long.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

During its annual luncheon meeting aboard the Queen Mary, Junior League of Long Beach inaugurated a new president. Mrs. Charles Merrill will lead the group assisted by Mmes. Donald Gibbs, Richard Bell, Donald Hardwick, Darrell Cannon and Raymond Smith.

One of the newest contributions to the community by new actives of Junior League is a booklet for foreign students at Long Beach State University. To help foreign students with their transition into the community, the booklet contains basic information and items such as social customs, banking services and so on. Each foreign student will receive a booklet at orientation meeting on the Forty-Niner campus.

New League projects include a docent program at Cabrillo Museum, San Pedro, co-sponsored with the Junior League of Los Angeles, and an art in the schools program. Both will begin in the fall.

NIGHTINGALES

Mrs. Jerry Edgmon received the gavel to become president of Nightingales, junior organization of the Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. Her board consists of Mmes. Tom Enlow, Robert Fernald, Robert Benson and Glen Still.

Beginning a year of provisional training will be Mmes. Gene Bowers, Murray Sandler, Art Fleischer, John Champion, William Horsfall, Gary Frahm, Robert Wheeler, Charles Sparrer, John Holmes, Les Stewart, Robert Dienstag and Richards Pradzick.

This year Nightingales raised approximately $10,000 for medication and hospitalization of underprivileged children at Earl and Lorraine Miller Memorial Hospital Medical Center. Members and provisionals staff the hospital gift shop weekly and conduct the Stork Club which introduces expectant mothers to the hospital and its facilities.

SOROPTIMIST

During an installation dinner tonight in Rochelle's Restaurant, Mrs. Arnel Talbot will assume leadership of Lakewood-Long Beach Soroptimist Club. Taking over other offices will be Mmes. James Bagwell, Henry Herron, Glee Renick, Lewis Mackie, Joe Dawson, Ira Williams, Joe Myer and George Donnelly.

Anita Loebler, secretary of Pacific Region, will install the officers. A musical program will follow.

HEART LEAGUE

In one of the conference rooms of the Western White House, San Clemente, Long Beach Heart Association's women's auxiliary, the Women's Heart League, installed new officers. Mrs. Marilyn Hale is new president, assisted by Mrs. J. Roscoe Howell and Mrs. Ralph Anderson.

Through the years the comparatively small group of women has raised more than $65,000 for Long Beach Heart Association. Members also devote time as volunteers on the association's coronary risk factors screening van and at the stroke activity center.

ARTS AFFILIATES

At a recent dinner meeting on the Long Beach State University campus, Mrs. Robert C. Lobdell was installed president of Fine Arts Affiliates. Serving with her will be Mmes. Reed Williams, Sam Cameron, Atlee Arnold, Frederick DeGraw and Elsworth Beam.

Mrs. Lobdell has been active in Junior League and Long Beach Regional Arts Council. The group she now heads is a support organization for the Fine Arts Department on the LBSU campus. Affiliates work in conjunction with students on the annual art sale in December, and have receptions for gallery openings, recitals and graduation excercises.

ALTRUSA

At a dinner meeting Monday Jessie Denning will become president of Altrusa Club of Long Beach. On her board will be Jean Defty, Helen Benedikter, Marjorie Sims, Wilma Hull, Florence Linsley, Marie Sam and Boni Huston. The new president will represent the club at the biennial convention next month in Montreal.

'It's not just babysitting'

to hire more men, especially in areas where there is little male influence in the home."

John Turiff, a personnel officer with the ABC Unified School District, concurred. "I think it's wonderful that more men are going into the primary field. As an elementary school principal for many years, I know how important a man's presence can be for many children. For years, I was constantly— and unsuccessfully—trying to get more men to come into the field."

Personnel officers noted, however, that they would not hire "just any man."

"Always, our emphasis is on hiring quality people, regardless of sex," said Herbert Cullen, a personnel officer with the Long Beach Unified School District.

Added Turiff, who pointed to ABC's affirmative action plan which calls for the hiring of more males and minorities, "We need more men and we keep special tabs on men who are interested in the primary field.

"But we wouldn't hire a guy who was second rate or a fellow whose attitude seems to be 'I want to teach primary so I can get a job.'"

HOW DO THE MEN who are teaching the lower grades feel about their role?

Dennis Taylor, who joined the staff at Lincoln School in Long Beach's central area four years ago, summed up his feelings when he said "Everything hinges on the first few years. The lower you go in grade level, the more important your job becomes as a teacher."

Taylor, who started at Lincoln as a fifth grade teacher, transferred to the third grade two years later. Now, he's talking about going lower—possibly to the first grade or even kindergarten.

"With the younger kids you can really see learning going on. They're open and honest with you and they tell you when they don't understand.

Taylor sees his role at Lincoln School as an essential one.

"Many of these youngsters have no positive male image at home," said Taylor, who changed his mind about teaching high school after working as an aide at Lincoln while he was in college. "I think one important contribution I'm making to these children is providing them with some kind of male influence early in their educational careers."

Another third grade teacher, Chris Forehan, views his role in the classroom similarly...despite the fact that his students are generally from stable, middle class homes.

"Even though most of the children I teach come from families where both parents are present, the mother is the overwhelming influence," said Forehan, a first-year teacher at Joe A. Gonsalves School in Cerritos. "Really, a child's socio-economic status should have nothing to do with what influences he receives.

Forehan, like many students today, spent the first three years of his college career drifting through the halls of academia with no idea what-so-ever what he would do when he received his degree.

Between his junior and senior years, he became enthused about the idea of teaching elementary school. Upon his graduation from UCLA in 1971 he enrolled at LBSU to work on his teaching credential.

"When I was applying for jobs, I really didn't care what grade I got just as long as someone hired me," said Forehan, who had student teaching experiences in both the lower and upper grades.

"But now that I'm here at the primary level, I'm convinced that this is where I want to be."

Both Forehan and Taylor agree that men may have more control over students.

"On television and in the movies, the man is always presented as dominant," stated Taylor.

"The kids will try to test a man, too, but probably not as much as a woman. Of course, a lot of that has to do with size and strength and I try not to use fear in teaching."

JOHN MC CAULLEY , a 27-year-old former salesman, doesn't feel he relates any better—or worse—to his students than a woman does. But he did take a 50 per cent pay cut because the classroom was where he wanted to be.

"I don't like to be confined to an office and I don't like wearing a tie," said McCaulley, who now teaches kindergarten at Allen School in Fountain Valley. "Also,

McCaulley returned to college after 5 ½ years in business specifically to get an elementary school credential. He doubts, however, that he would have been able to handle a kindergarten teaching position when he was younger. "I think I had to be in business for a while and prove my manhood to myself before I could be mature enough to handle this."

Today, McCaulley is as affectionate with his charges as any father. He's very physical with the kids—"I hug them and let them sit on my lap like any woman kindergarten teacher would"—and thus far he's received no negative comments.

McCaulley is adamant that teaching kindergarten is not a glorified babysitting job. "You really do teach these young children—even the kindergartners," McCaulley explained.

Reaction to his decision to teach kindergarten was "generally positive," McCaulley stated. "My father, who teaches junior high school, thought I was crazy, but other than that everyone thought it was great."

TAYLOR AND Forehan agreed that the stigma that was once attached to a male primary teacher no longer exists. "The only comments I ever heard were 'It's about time men started teaching primary youngsters' and 'More men should go into the field,'" stated Forehan.

The reaction to Taylor's decision was similar. "Everyone I knew thought it was terrific. I never heard once—even in joking—the question 'What's the matter, aren't you smart enough to teach high school?'"

JOHN McCAULLEY hates wearing a tie and being confined to an office so his job as a kindergarten teacher at Allen School in Fountain Valley is perfect. McCaulley, who took a 50 per cent cut in salary when he became a teacher, says "I'm the kind of person who needs to see where my efforts are going."

CHEF OF THE WEEK

'Doctors' eggs for breakfast

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Today's Chef of the Week, Robert H. Frankenfeld, M.D., is a man of many talents—musician, author, jogger, bridge and tennis enthusiast, and now, "cook." Professionally he's chief of medicine at Memorial Hospital of Long Beach.

Dr. Frankenfeld was born in Buffalo, N.Y., where three generations of his family had been ministers, including his father and older brother. But he had decided at an early age to become a physician.

He pursued that ambition through Cornell University and Cornell Medical School. He completed his internship at Brooklyn Methodist Hospital and his residency training in internal medicine was done at Buffalo General Hospital.

The U.S. Navy recalled him to active duty during the Korean War (he had served in World War II), and he was stationed at the Naval Hospital in Quantico, Va. While there, Dr. Frankenfeld decided to make a break from the cold winters of Buffalo and came to Long Beach to start his practice in 1956.

In addition to being chief of medicine at Memorial, he is assistant professor of clinical medicine at UCLA and is a fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Definitely a leader, Dr. Frankenfeld has a way of cruising into the presidency of everything to which he belongs. He's a past president of the Long Beach Heart Association, of the Long Beach Tuberculosis Association (now the Lung Association), Long Beach Society of Internal Medicine and Galen Club. He also has authored several scientific papers.

SHORTLY AFTER receiving his medical degree, he married his high school sweetheart, Betty. They have four sons: Eric, a sophomore at Occidental; Paul, a freshman at Stanford; Philip, a sophomore at Wilson High School; and Douglas, a fourth grader at Kettering School.

All are musically oriented, including Mom and Dad. Betty plays violin with the Long Beach Symphony and Dad was a chimemaster while at Cornell. He also played clarinet in the Big Red Marching Band. Son, Paul, played viola in The Symphony for a year.

In addition to serving on the board of Long Beach Symphony, Dr. Frankenfeld helped found the Symphony's annual brunch, in which members of the men's committee and their sons cook and serve. Quite naturally, that Sunday's brunch finds five Frankenfeld men on duty.

For recreation Dr. Frankenfeld practices what he proclaims on his personalized license plates, "I JOG." He also plays tennis and bridge.

Our "chef" believes that men should be in the kitchen occasionally but confines his cooking to breakfast. He especially enjoys serving his boys pan-fried grunion in season and Philadelphia scrapple. There are no grunion currently, so his recipe is for Eggs in a Nest. No comparison, we'll admit!

EGGS IN A NEST

Using two eggs for each serving, separate and beat whites until very stiff. Butter individual casseroles; sprinkle fine bread crumbs on bottom. Spoon equal amounts of beaten whites in dishes. Make hollows and slip in the yolks. Season with salt and pepper. Set casseroles in pan of boiling water, cover and cook just until whites are firm; or bake uncovered in a moderate oven, 325 degrees, about 15 minutes.

Honor bestowed

Mrs. Flora M. Souther was selected Woman of the Year by Jubilee Chapter, American Business Women's Association, at a dinner meeting at The Reef.

The selection was made on the progress the member made in her chosen field and on her participation in the chapter.

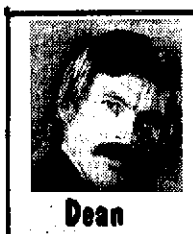

Mrs. Souther is secretary for a certified public accounting firm, has held three offices in the ABWA chapter and has had several committee chairmanships.

Hoffman House slates annual dinner meeting

Hoffman House, a Long Beach residence for women discharged from correctional institutions or released on parole or probation, is holding its annual dinner meeting June 19 at Edgewater Hyatt House, 6400 Pacific Coast Highway.

The halfway house, which can accommodate six women at a time, has been in existence for three years. It is staffed by executive director, Elizabeth Moore, a housemother-cook and a night monitor and so far has been home to 62 women. Eighty-five per cent of those have not returned to prison.

Anyone wishing to attend the dinner, which begins with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. should contact Mrs. Moore, 940 Dawson Ave. Reservations are $6.50 per person.

THE HAIR LINE

Dean & Josef

When we say we train our staff in every phase of beauty culture, this doesn't mean that they have to do every style our way. Quite the contrary, we train our people to achieve designs in haircutting, professional curl construction, and modern "1973" structural waving (permanent wave) and then encourage them to use this basic professional training to do their own designs.

Occasionally you might not care for a hairstyle you get and would like to try another member of the staff. Our stylists are not offended, but actually encourage you to try another's approach to your individual look.

Regardless of which stylist you choose, you will always get the best workmanship available in our salon.

Sharing the happy news

To help you supply information for your engagement and wedding stories, the Independent, Press-Telegram has printed forms for you to fill out.

Engagement news must be received by the Life style deparment at least three months before the wedding date. Wedding forms must be returned one week or more before the wedding takes place to allow the staff time to prepare the story for publication immediately after the marriage. No story will be used if the information is received after the wedding is performed. We make every effort to use both engagement and wedding stories but publication cannot be guaranteed.

Although Life/style will publish both an engagement and a wedding story, a picture will be used with only one of the stories. If a picture is submitted, it must be one of the fiancee or bride alone and must be turned in with the printed form. Photographs should be either 5 by 7 or 8 by 10 inches. Only black and white glossy photographs taken by a professional photographer can be used. Snapshots, Polaroids or color prints will not be accepted. No photographs will be returned.

Both engagement and wedding forms are available at the I,P-T's main office, at the Lakewood office or by mail. If you wish a form mailed to you, phone 435-1161 and ask for Life/style.

Has a fit over clothes

By FRANCES DIETRICH

"I don't believe in clothes wearing people. People should wear clothes that express themselves, fit well, and that are comfortable."

The speaker was a tall, thin, volatile young man, who has been thinking a lot about clothes, particularly misses' ready-to-wear, for five years.

Jeigh Singleton is a dress designer, who graduated from Kansas State University, and immediately joined R. Lowenbaum Manufacturing Company, which produces Minx Modes, Lion Tree and the Jon McCauley lines. He designs 80 units such as pants, jacket skirt, dress, every two months. At the end of the year, 240 have been accepted for manufacture and have entered the cruel world, where women shoppers appraise them with critical eyes.

Singleton juggles the practicalities of dress manufacture with the creativity of fashion. He must work within boundaries. A project may be a dress that will retail for $40, that has to be mass-produced in misses' sizes six to 16, and appeal to women in an age range from 18 to 40.

ACCORDING TO the formula of popular-priced ready-to-wear, a dress that wholesales for $20 to the retailer, may be sold to the customer for approximately twice the wholesale price. Mark-up on a dress with a designer label, which is sold in a specialty shop, will be more to compensate for higher handling costs. These may include personal services such as phoning regular customers to advise about new merchandise or forthcoming sales.

Singleton accomplishes wonders in design with practical shortcuts such as pants without side seams and with fake cuffs. He also fools the eye with strips of color on a plain dress, which give the effect of a jacket or jumper. It's the answer to the layered look, which "was too bulky to begin with. After piling it all on, we are taking it all off and getting back to dresses. Everybody wants coordinated sportswear, but you can give them that in a single dress."

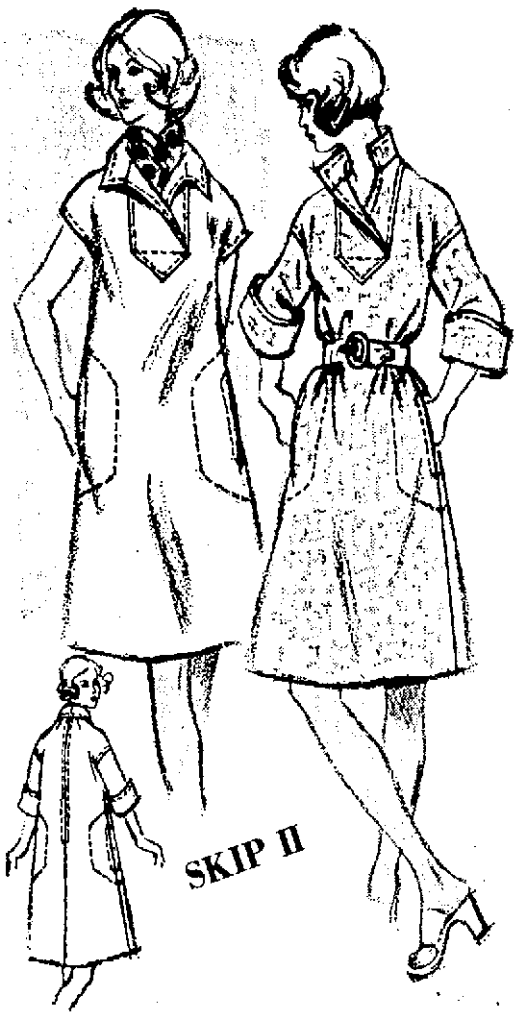

He stresses that clothes should have a soft, natural look, acting as an extension of the body and even revealing it at times. "The only hard thing about a woman's body is the bone structure. The softer look is more natural and flattering. I'm very much against darts, which give a structured look."

IN THIS CONTEXT of the soft and natural, he favors a blend of a natural fiber with a man-made, such as wool and polyester. "There's a mutual kind of happiness there, because you have the great wool feeling and the wool properties married to the easy care of polyester."

When asked if mass production could lead to complete uniformity, he replied vehemently: "No, no! Never! People want to be individuals. That's why women like to wear a pin, a necklace, a certain belt, to make even today's dress their very own."

His pet peeve is the woman who does herself an injustice by wearing a dress that is too small. "Buy the right size, no matter what it is. What's the sense of bragging about wearing a size nine, if you really need size eleven? Who cares? The size tag is inside not outside."

He also urges that women re-evaluate their buying habits occasionally. A woman's figure changes in a period of five years and tastes change, and "there is no reason to by the same brand of dress year after year." However, he praised woman as "value shoppers, very much aware of the fiber content of the fabric."

Forum aim: to inform

Following a newspaper format, Long Beach Area Council of Beta Sigma Phi will distribute the first edition of "The Saturday Informer" in the form of a workshop Saturday in Parkcrest Church of Christ, 5950 E. Parkcrest.

Seminars beginning at 9 a.m. are planned for each office and chairmanship in the organization and will be presented by speakers from the local area and other Southern California councils.

Tips to the treasurer will be given by Mrs. William Barry, Garden Grove, former treasurer and recently installed president of Southern California Council. Points for the president will be given by Mrs. Rodger Hulette, past president of Long Beach Area Council. Historians helps will be given by Mrs. James Daniels, Westminster. Mrs. Alex Hansen will speak on service and philanthropies, and Mrs. George Zavas, achievement chairman, will present the format for the new year.

Other seminars will include programs, parliamentary procedure, duties of the vice president, record keeping, yearbooks, ways and means and publicity.

Mrs. Lee H. Wakefield is editor-chairman, assisted by Mrs. Dorothy Abshere. Mrs. Neval H. McCoy, Long Beach Area Council president will, in the role of managing editor for the day, welcome all members.

Xi Alpha Kappa chapter is in charge of invitations, while Xi Rho Delta is rolling programs off the presses. Preceptor Xi, in the role of social editor, is in charge of the salad luncheon.

Reservations for the day long session are being taken by Mrs. Hilda Baker, 4900 Castana Ave., Lakewood, or Mrs. John Bradley, 5110 El Roble.

Dear Mr. Corn:

We're having trouble fixing the blame for this disaster. Can you set us straight?

Fourteen Tricks
Palm Desert, Calif.

Answer: A three-no-trump response to an opening in one of a suit shows the values of an opening one-no-trump bid with stoppers in all unbid suits. Since East held 24 high card points opposite an opening bid, a grand slam might well be in the cards and East should have gone slowly to find out more about West's opening. I recommend this bidding:

West	East
1 ♣	1 ♦
2 ♣	2 ♠
3 ♣	4 NT
5 ♥	7 NT

When East finds out about a long club suit and two aces, he can count 13 tricks and can bid seven with confidence.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Can any player demand a new cut before the cards are dealt?

Answer: Any player may demand a cut before the first card is dealt. When this happens, dealer's right-hand opponent cuts again.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 12363, Dallas, Texas 75225. Include self-addressed, stamped envelope for personal reply.

DEAR ABBY

Advice to GI still holds true

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Even though, for the most part, the United States is "out" of Vietnam, we still have thousands of men stationed in Southeast Asia as well as in other countries abroad, so I wonder if you would consider running the column you wrote several years ago, signed GI.

It made a tremendous impact on the servicemen when it ran in the Stars and Stripes. Many of them cut it out and sent it to their wives. And months later I was asked for additional copies. Thanking you in advance.

U.S. ARMY CHAPLAIN

DEAR CHAPLAIN: With pleasure. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My problem is one that bothers thousands of other GIs so I hope you will print your answer because it is needed badly. I am a happily married man with a wonderful wife and two small children back in the States. I've been in Korea for four months. After living a normal life for three years, what is a young, healthy man supposed to do for his physical needs?

There are 12 women for every GI over here and the women practically throw themselves at our feet. Don't get me wrong, Abby, I love my wife and always will, but I have a long hitch over here and I am only human. This letter is sincere and I am not ashamed to sign my name, but if you use it, please sign me

GI

DEAR GI: Assume for a moment that I received the following letter.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman with a wonderful husband and two small children. My husband has been in Korea for four months. After living a normal married life for three years, what is a young, healthy woman supposed to do for her physical needs? There are plenty of men around and when they learn my husband is in Korea, they practically throw themselves at my feet.

Don't get me wrong, Abby, I love my husband and always will, but he's going to be gone a long time and I am only human...

GI's WIFE

WELL, GI: I would tell that woman to keep busy as possible with her duties and as many wholesome activities as her time and energy permit. I'd suggest reading, exhausting, physical exercise, and yes, even prayer! I'd tell her to stay sober and to avoid temptation and to write you every day! And that GI, is my answer to you and to all your buddies in the same lonesome boat.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My 4-year-old daughter likes to "ride horsie" on my foot occasionally. My wife charges that this is "seductive and obscene." What do you think?

A MINISTER

DEAR MINISTER: "Obscenity" (like beauty) sometimes lies in the eye of the beholder.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell Ronny's mom not to worry about her son's being the youngest and smallest in his class. Ronny is a Capricorn—the most intellectual of all signs, and they reach intellectual maturity early. Besides, being short never stopped Napoleon.

I graduated first in my class, and I also was the youngest and smallest.

New art on view at LBMA

Two artists will attend a reception today from 2 to 4 p.m. at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Reception sponsors, Friends of the Museum, cordially invite the public to attend.

Actually, three new shows open today—the third is "One Man's Meat — Collection Selections," which includes a number of new acquisitions not previously exhibited.

James Nichols, a New York based California artist, will be on hand for the unveiling of his "Seven Mandala Screen." Mark Keiserman also will attend for the opening of his show of five recent works.

FOR ceramic jug, 'Egg Form,' Long Beach Artist Lou Eilerman took first place in Southern California's Expo judging.

The "Seven Mandala Screen" was commissioned by the National Endowment for the Arts and the Rick Rackers, junior auxiliary of Assistance League of Long Beach.

Collaged metal on wood, the two-part folding screen, or byobu, measures 7 by 7 feet. A burnished aluminum background acts as a void in which the seven psychographic images appear to flower or radiate in varying manifestations. In the words of the artist, "Each mandala is part of an infinite possibility of extensions. The screen is not based directly on any one tradition or system, such as Japanese, Chinese or Indian. The viewer will find traditional Indian design motifs of threes and fours in the screen."

In the design also is a variation of the museum's new three-part logo, which Nichols created.

BORN IN Pasadena in 1928, Nichols took his B.A. at UCLA. Now his works are in such collections as the Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art in Connecticut and the Wichita Art Museum. He has had numerous commissions in the United States, France and Germany.

For comparison, viewers may see the Japanese screen, "Philosophers in a Grove," placed in the upstairs gallery. This Edo period screen was a gift from Dr. Raphael Hanson. There also is an early Edo incense burner, gift of the Museum Association of Long Beach Museum of Art.

KEISERMAN, young artist from Venice, Calif., is showing an untitled wall relief, two pieces from his Rock and Roll Star Series and two chairs. The Rock and Roll works are enamel on a construction of plaster on wood.

This artist was born in Montgomery, W. Va., in 1949. He attended UC Berkeley and received his B.F.A. at UC Irvine. His work has been shown in Los Angeles County Museum of Art's Art Rental Gallery and the Irving Blum Gallery in Los Angeles.

Closing date for "One Man's Meat" and the Keiserman exhibit is Aug. 12. The "Seven Mandala Screen" will be on display permanently in the west gallery.

FURTHER news from the Long Beach Museum: Mrs. David Courtemarche, chairman of the summer program of art classes for children and adults, accounces sessions will begin the week of June 25. Sponsored by Friends of the Museum, classes are instructed by Joan Haley, Linda d'Amico and Thea Robertshaw.

For children, classes will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays; tuition ranges from $20 to $30 for the 11 sessions. They will emphasize the child's relation to the natural world with the goal of increasing appreciation of nature through art.

Young adults and adults may choose from classes in drawing, painting, sculpture, weaving and silk screen. Tuition is $30 for six sessions.

Brochures and registration forms are at most branches of Long Beach Public Library and at the museum. For more information, call the museum.

TWO LONG BEACH artists have won top prizes in competitions. Lou Eilerman took first place for his ceramic jug, "Egg Form," at the Southern California Exposition's Art Show judging. The art will be on display during the Expo's June 22 to July 4 run at Del Mar.

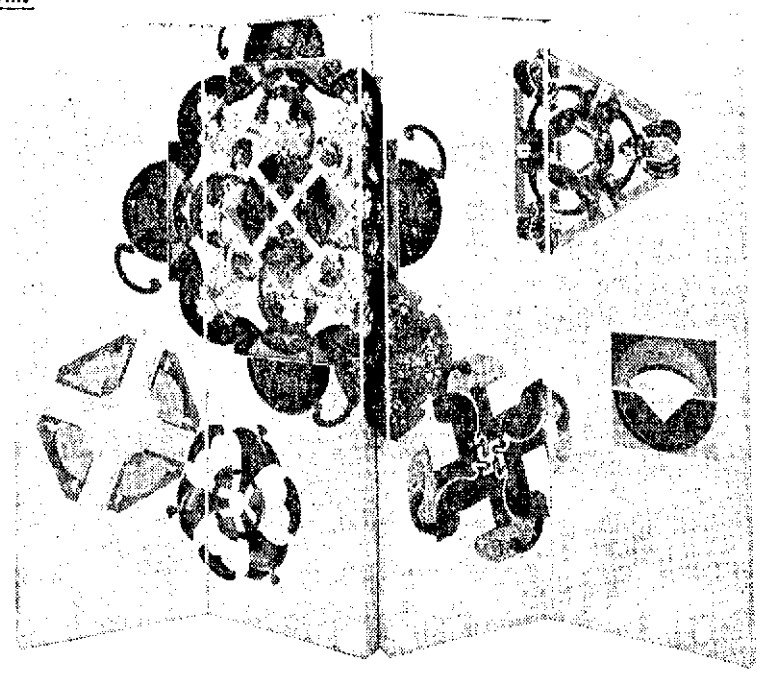

And Ernest V. Vial, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Vial, 4427 Montair Ave., won the major award of $500 for his best of show in the annual exhibition of contemporary art sponsored by the West Alabama Art Association. The exhibit includes 50 art works submitted by artists from across the Southeast.

KATHERINE GROSS, instructor and assistant gallery coordinator at Cypress College made these selections for the Long Beach Art Association's June membership show: Marian Bruce, first; Louise Anderson, second; Pat Hemmings, third.

The show will hang through June with gallery hours from noon to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays.

Lenore Stribley, Helen McClain and Loyce Carhart, all juried members of LBAA were invited to exhibit their paintings and graphics at Cal State San Diego through June 25. The three artists also are members of the California National Watercolor Society.

FOR A DEMONSTRATION of watercolor techniques, you may attend the Tuesday meeting of Cypress Cultural Arts Association at 7:30 p.m. in Cawthon School, Myra and Denni Streets, Cypress.

CREATING his 'Seven Mandala Screen,' James Nichols adhered to no one tradition — Japanese, Chinese or Indian — but used elements of all to design a work distinctly his own.

ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

THIS PLASTER on wood construction, enameled, is one of Mark Keiserman's creations titled 'Rock and Roll Star Series.' He has a total of five works in his exhibit which opens today at Long Beach Museum of Art.

So you thought all music was programed!

For 40 years, Henri Temianka has been part of the world of music. That, to some laymen, can be awesome, as can the fact that Temianka is professor of music at Long Beach State University, the only artist-in-residence there, founder and permanent conductor of the California Chamber Symphony Orchestra and concert violinist of repute.

Now, Temianka has added another dimension to his achievements. Although he has had numerous major magazine articles published he has, for the first time, written a book. First published March 26, it already has gone into its second printing and publisher David McKay Company, Inc., happily describes it as a "sleeper."

Just as there is nothing awesome about the author himself, there is nothing awesome about his book. Just the reverse. It is uncompromisingly honest and funny.

"Facing the Music" is subtitled "An Irreverent Close-up of the Real Concert World." Actually, Temianka has taken a rather irreverent approach to many traditions.

When his Polish parents were visiting in Scotland, he decided, quite unexpectedly for them, to join the world and so was born there. His early education was in Holland, he studied at the National Conservatories of Berlin and Paris and graduated from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia in 1930 as violinist and conductor.

HIS OWN ACCOUNT is more entertaining than this conventional summary. He describes his first job, in a circus band, while he was a student at the Paris Conservatoire. Perched on a platform near the roof, he and the other musicians tried valiantly to follow the conductor who watched the circus and directed with his back to the musicians.

He writes: "Peering over the guardrail, the maestro established ground contact and watched an endless procession of clowns, trapese, acrobats, chimpanzees, dogs, horses, zebras, elephants, tigers, lions and seals follow one another into the ring. The maestro's job was to coordinate our music with their acts, making it appear as if the animals were following the music. Did you think horses danced in time? You never played in a circus band. Maestro Farinelli sometimes kept his beat suspended in midair indefinitely until the horse at last took another prancing step. He would quiver convulsively, arms wildly flapping, to bring up the orchestra if the horse skipped a couple of beats. Maestro Farinelli was a wizard. Not once did horse, elephant or chimpanzee outwit him . . .

"So it went all evening, except when the maestro unexpectedly turned around to whisper frantically, 'Throw out the lions — man without arms next! . . .

"I led a Jekyll and Hyde existence. At night I mingled with the muscial flotsam of Paris; by day with the ambitious young students at the Conservatoire National in the Rue de Madrid."

THERE WERE many more curious jobs until, in Holland, unusual circumstances brought him to the attention of the famous concert violinist Carl Flesch. After he played one minute for the great man, Flesch commanded, "Put your fiddle away." As the crestfallen novice started to leave, Flesch stopped him with a question, "Can you come to America with me on Saturday?" Two days later, Temianka boarded an ocean liner to the United States to study at the Curtis Institute of Music.

He prolonged his stay there as long as possible, adding courses, postponing graduation as a violinist to take up chamber music, then conducting. But at the end of four years he had to end student life, graduated and made his Town Hall debut as a violinist.

Critics' reviews were most favorable, but from them the young musician learned a lesson he has not forgotten. One critic wrote, "He has a mellow, pure flowing tone and a remarkable right arm. It seems capable of encompassing any difficulties of bowing with ease." A rival critic said, "Now the young man needs to work on his bowing technique."

HENRI TEMIANKA

Comments Temianka, "At this early stage in my career I had proclaimed my naive desire to learn from what the critics would say. What I learned then and there was to guard against schizophrenia."

THERE FOLLOWED the customary struggle of a young, well-trained musician to become known. In the grueling process, Temianka made friends with musicians who would become famous and some already acclaimed. Anecdotes of David Oistrakh, Isaac Stern, Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky, Yehudi Menuhin, Robert "Facing Maas, Darius Milhaud and a host of others fill pages of the Music." Along with the insight the reader gains into the problems of professional musicians, he learns of the very human foibles and predicaments with which they must cope.

Asked why he wrote his book, the author said, "That's like asking why I play the violin. I love it. I've always loved writing. For three years, I lay in a contour chair and wrote this book — whenever I had time. That was the pleasure. The trouble was in finding a publisher. The typical reaction was that a book about music and musicians won't sell. Then KcKay took it. I owe much to my editor — he was adamant, especially about the title. Nothing I submitted suited him. Then suddenly I came up with this one and he said, "That's it!"

ALONG WITH his regular commitments, Tamianka continues a relentless schedule of activities including concert tours. He is conductor of the Los Angeles Doctors Symphony Orchestra, which only Monday returned from a tour to the Far East where five concerts in three weeks raised money for benefits — chiefly for rehabilitation and mental retardation — in such places as Japan, Taiwan, Bali and Hong Kong.

"We were wonderfully received," he said. "We feel that this good feeling toward Americans is especially important at the time when Watergate is a topic all over the world."

What next?

He's writing a second book, of course. This one, half completed, is about music appreciation. "It is in the same style — for popular appeal, not a droning treatise on music. I'm using limerick and doggerel — whatever will illustrate a point I'm trying to make, but do it with humor."

LCO season to close

Friday at 7:30 p.m., Bruce Polay will direct Lakewood Chamber Orchestra in a program of "20th Century Music and Art" at Long Beach City College Auditorium. The bill will include "Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion" by Bartok; three works for stage band: "Channel One Suite" by Reddie, "Home Grown Soup" by Bruce Polay, and "Final Analysis" by Don Ellis, featuring the Long Beach Polytechnic High School Jazz Ensemble. The program will conclude with "Classical Symphony" by Prokofieff.

Three style backgrounds are represented, yet all show the conservative side of the 20th century. For the Bartok work, pianists David Koerner and Ralph Albertstrom will be featured.

Return of the Limeliters

The advance of rock took the glow from the Limeliters in July, 1963. Now, they are shining brightly again and will appear next Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion. From left, they are Lou Gottlieb, Glenn Yarbrough and Alex Hassiler. They will be backed by five additional musicians. Tickets are on sale at the box office and agencies.

Dates set for opera auditions

Auditions for two one-act operas to be staged with orchestra Aug. 3 and 4 at Long Beach State University will be held Friday at 7 p.m. and June 18 at 8 p.m. in the Choral Room (Room 127) of the LBSU Music Building.

The operas will be produced by the summer session opera workshop under the musical direction of Hans Lampl and will be staged by guest director Linder Chlarson. Charles Johnson will design sets.

The operas will be Massenet's "The Portrait of Manon," a charming but little-known sequel to the composer's "Manon," and "The Princess and the Pea" by Toch. The latter is a musical version of the familiar fairy tale.

In addition to singers, instrumentalists and anyone interested in joining stage and production crews may enroll for one unit of credit. For further information, call Dr. Lampl at the university.

Dancers plan workshop

Dancers Merce Cunningham and Sandra Neels will conduct a repertory workshop July 30 through Aug. 17 at Long Beach State University.

Classes will meet Mondays through Fridays for three weeks. Technique classes will be from 10:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and the repertory workshop from 1:15 to 3:45 p.m.

Enrollment will be limited to 30. At the conclusion of the instructional period, two casts of 15 students will be selected and matched for expertise; each cast will present a performance.

Students will be selected by auditions in San Francisco June 14 and in Long Beach June 15. Applicants must be high school graduates or be at least 18 years of age. They must have advanced technical skills. Students must register in advance for auditions by sending name, address and phone number to the Margaret Jenkins Dance Studio, 2001 Bryant St., San Francisco, 94110, or to Celeste Kennedy, chairman of the dance department at LBSU.

Tuition is $89 with or without unit credit. No financial aid is available. Further information will be sent to those accepted. For further details, call the LBSU dance department.

Three choirs join for festive concert

With a "Three Choir Festival," First Congregational Church of Long Beach will bring its season's concert series to an end today at 8 p.m. in the church sanctuary, Third Street and Cedar Avenue.

Joining the First Congregational Choir directed by Wesley Reed, will be the Covenant Presbyterian Cathedral Choir directed by Robert Dill and the California Heights United Methodist Chancel Choir directed by Robert L. Collins. They will sing choral music spanning three centuries.

On the program will be Vierne's "Finale" from the Third Symphony, played by organist James Haberkorn.

Each choir will sing selections, then will join voices in an arrangement of "Ave Maria" by Rachmaninoff and "Jubilate" by Evig Hovland.

The public is invited to attend without charge. A free will offering will be received.

Take a look at camping freebies

By JANE MORSE

Your openhanded Uncle Sam has done it again. He's setting out to celebrate summer this year by giving away 24,029 camping sites in 155 national forests each and every night. Figure five persons to a site (alias "camp unit" in U.S. Forest Service parlance) and you've got close to 125,000 free spaces available on a first come, first served basis.

You can camp for nothing in most other undeveloped areas of our national forests but each standard model, U.S. Forest Service-designed and designated camp unit comes with some basic amenities to which you may have become addicted, namely drinking water, latrines, tables and benches, a fire grate, and trash cans you don't have to haul away or empty yourself. There's also a place to park your car and a cleared spot in which to pitch a tent.

THE FREEBIES are the national forests' biggest gift to pennywatchers, but hear this: There are also 61,000 more units available at an average rate of $1 a night per carload of people.

Try as you might, you won't be able to put out more than $3 for rent and that's only when you're determined to move in next to one of a limited number of developed boating or swimming areas, that is those with bathhouses, lifeguards, "improved" beaches or concrete boat ramps. There are, though, special user fees for these extra facilities and for electricity, hot water and cut firewood where they're available.

Developed areas are a rarity in national forests because they run counter to the lands' main claim to fame, their God-given magnificence. This is where man can still meet nature, both of them in close to the altogether. There are some sissy campgrounds with flush toilets and waste-water hookups for trailers, but as many or more wilderness areas where campers do without structures of any kind, motor vehicles and, indeed, roads.

Before you streak off to one of the 39 federally forested states (New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota and Hawaii are without), register these few facts:

—FORESTS well away from population centers are the least used and the least restricted in terms of how long you can stay. In heavily used areas—mostly the ones closest to big cities—they can host you only a maximum of 7 to 14 days.

—You can call ahead to the closest U.S. Forest Service or ranger office to find out about crowds, but they can't save a site for you except in two places: Inyo and San Bernardino National Forests in California, where a reservations system (through Ticketron outlets) is being tested.

—You won't need any kind of license, registration or permit in the national forests with these exceptions:

During rainless times and in California, you may need a fire permit, depending on where you're planning to camp. This can be issued as you enter the forest.

In certain designated wilderness areas, you'll need a camping permit from the local visitor-information office, forest supervisor or rangers.

State laws govern hunting, fishing and trapping.

If you're over 62, you can go in person to a major post office or any national forest or national park regional headquarters for a Golden Age Passport allowing the bearer and anyone with him to use forest campgrounds (and other federal recreation areas) for 50% less than normal fees.

Extra added freebies are available in the form of five useful publications you can get by dropping a line to the Division of Information and Education, Forest Service, USDA, Washington, D.C., 20250:

National Forest Vacations (describing highlights and locations of major attractions) PA 1037; Camping (what to take, what to look for, how to set yourself up) PA 502; Backpacking in the National Forests (where and how) PA 585; Outdoor Safety Tips (principally for the novice) PA 887; and Building a Safe Campfire (more help for the beginner) PA 1017.

"Camping" is particularly handy because it tells where to go for even more detailed information.

Montreal exhibit set

Tyrolean yodelers, Bulgarian folk dancers, Mexican mariachis and a Pakistani snake charmer will be among the lively attractions at 26 pavilions during Montreal's international exhibition, Man and His World, June 21 through September 3.

In addition to exhibits from Austria, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, France, Iran, Japan, Mexico, Morocco, Pakistan, Switzerland, the USSR and Yugoslavia, the permanent successor to Expo 67 will present another dozen cultural and historical displays ranging from a pavilion of Humor with a collection of the best cartoons from all over the world to a striking showcase of pre-Colombian and Eskimo art prepared by Montreal's Museum of Fine Arts.

Entrance to the grounds of Man and His World is free, but a "visa" costing $2.50 for one day or $5.00 for the entire season is required for entrance to the pavilions. Children under eight are admitted free of charge. Entrance to La Ronde amusement area is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for youngsters between the ages of eight and seventeen.

River cruise

A couple of miles from the chateau at Chantilly, and only 60 miles from Paris, is Boran-sur-Oise, a river port which opens on to the quiet Oise, Somme and Aisne rivers. At Boran-sur-Oise, minihouseboats may be rented for one week or more for a peaceful vacation of drifting discovery.

The boats accommodate 6 persons comfortably with two bedrooms, a recreation room, living room and fully equipped kitchen. The bath has hot and cold running water. Sightseeing is easy at stopping points where a small car can be rented and taken aboard.

Various routes include possible stops at Reims, Soissons, Compiegne, Ermenonville, Senlis and other historic and scenic spots. Rates range from $300 to $500 per week, depending on the season.

Hawaiian royalty

Hawaii has a corner on the American palace market. The only three royal residences in the United States are located there, reminders of the time when these mid-Pacific islands were a monarchy.

No lecture. No preaching. No, none of that.

Here are facts about drug laws & the system of justice overseas.

If you're traveling to Europe, the Middle East or south of our own border, here are some facts. Because a lot of people have funny ideas about foreign drug laws and justice.

Maybe you've heard possession is okay in some countries. That's wrong. Or maybe you've heard the laws aren't enforced like they are here. That's wrong, too. Really wrong.

The truth is their drug laws are tough. And they enforce them. To the letter.

Mexico, for example, demands a two to nine year sentence for possession of anything. Carrying stuff in or out of the country will put you in jail for six to fifteen years.

There's a 24 year old girl from the United States sitting in a jail outside of Rome right now. She'll be there for six to ten months waiting for a trial. And after that she can get up to eight years.

In Spain, after you've been sentenced, you can't take your case to a higher court. You're all through. And nobody can get you out.

Those are facts. And there's no way around them. That's why over 900 Americans are doing time in foreign jails.

Check the countries you'll be visiting. One fact will come through. Loud and clear.

When you're busted for drugs over there, you're in for the hassle of your life.

Mexico.
Possession, 2 to 9 years plus fine. Trafficking, 3 to 10 years plus fine. Illegal import or export of drugs, 6 to 15 years plus fine. Persons arrested on drug charges can expect a minimum of 6 to 12 months pre-trial confinement.

Papeete's Bastille Day fete

By BRAD DRESSLER

PAPEETE, Tahiti — The whole thing started with a bootleg cargo of rum. Back in 1880, when Tahiti became a French possession, the island territory quite naturally inherited Bastille Day as a national holiday.

But Papeete wasn't Paris. The best they could do the first year was a horse race and a parade by the small French garrison. This was fine for the French but Tahitians are not the least happy with any event they can't participate in and enjoy in their own way.

In the spring of 1882, French authorities nabbed a shipload of 13,265 liters of rum, with crew, and found themselves with a large problem — what to do with the cargo. Market value of the cargo was considerable, but methods by which a respectable government could obtain profit from the cargo was limited.

An unknown genius thought of selling the rum at public auction and so on May 4 the sale started. Results were disappointing and our unknown genius was busily shopping for transportation from the island.

There were fears that Christmas would find the Government the unwilling owner of lots of rum. But as Bastille Day grew near, people were faced with the prospect of watching men follow each other around (parade) and men and horses chasing each other (race). This thrilled almost nobody.

Then someone remembered the rum. Sales suddenly turned brisk, and Bastille Day turned out to be lots of fun. Many believe that this was the day the famous phrase "it's a rum go" originated.

Along with the alcoholic atmosphere this day also marked the birth of the "true" celebration of Bastille Day. Tahitians introduced traditional Polynesian sports and although the French authorities frowned on using the racetrack infield, they did persuade the Tahitians to move over to open country.

Spear-throwing (at targets), dance contests, and canoe racing in the harbor became a fixture of the Bastille Day Fete and still are to be seen on July 14.

Another feature of the Papeete Fete is the barraque. Built of the traditional Polynesian materials it is a temporary structure usually placed anywhere in the vicinity of the Fete—and has become the center of eating, drinking, dancing. Started about the same time (no one really knows) it is firmly believed by the old-timers to have been devised to offset the sale of that last barrel of rum.

Anyone interested in checking these facts personally may still find airline seats and hotel rooms for the now-famous Papeete Fete. Call Pan Am — with its three flights a week — and they can supply hotel rooms as well.

A detailed calendar for the events of the "Fetes de Juillet," or Bastille Day celebration, is available from the Tahiti Tourist Board, P.O. Box 3720, Hollywood, Ca. 90028.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Hongkong Tourist boom

By STAN DELAPLANE

Hongkong

Steamy summer is beginning in Hongkong. Afternoon storm clouds over the South China Sea —a year's rainfall is 80 inches. New hotels and more going up. The staid old Peninsula will come down. A new, modern hotel will replace it.

Only Repulse Bay will be left. The 20-foot ceilings with slow-turning fans. The paneled walls and crystal lighting fixtures. The last of the stiff upper lip palaces of days when the sun never set on the British Empire.

The city is full. No rooms at ANY inn. A million tourists a year come to this supermarket of jade and diamonds. Watches and cameras. Thai silks and Red China porcelain. (Four million locals to sell them and make the beds.)

One in every three tourists is Japanese. (Japanese cameras and Seiko watches are cheaper here than in the duty-free shops of Tokyo.)

The $50 tailored suit of ten years ago has gone up to $150. Eyeglasses about a third cheaper than at home—German frames and lenses.

I don't believe there's a set price on ANYTHING or ANYWHERE. No matter what the price mark, it's the asking price. EVERYBODY will bargain.

Lively, bustling town. Stores open half the night. Great Chinese food. Had lunch at the vegetarian Wishful Cottage I'd swear was full of meat dishes. But not so—it's run by the Buddhist monastery. (Oyster sauce is permitted, the Lord Buddha himself having declared the oyster is a plant.) Costs reasonable in HK. After Japan seems like a bargain basement.

"Are travelers' checks in U.S. dollars more acceptable now than banknote dollars?"

Usually the checks cash about a cent higher on the dollar. CARRY CHECKS ON YOU! Big thing now is for room boys to leaf one or two out of the middle of your pack of checks. They take out the stub too so you won't notice. (How often do you go back to your room and look to see that no numbers are missing?)

Checks are sold to dealers who forge the signature. There's a clever copying machine to pick up the upper signature and duplicate it below.

This racket is worst in India and East Africa. Travel check people can't get exact amount. Most people don't notice a couple of $20 checks slipped out and don't report for refunds.

Instead of taking checks in those easily opened fold-over brads, ask the bank to STAPLE the checks. This should retain the stubs.

"You've mentioned buying eyeglasses overseas ..."

In Hongkong I bought the new sunglasses that turn dark in the light, return to clear when you go indoors. German Rodenstock frames, American optical glass (Corning). Prescription with bifocals: $44.

By mail, the Optical Shop, 333 Hongkong Hotel Shopping Centre, Kowloon, Hongkong. They send price list with a couple dozen photographs of frames. Reliable people.

See Alaska, Australia via Pacific circle cruise

Captain Cook circled the Pacific in the 1770's. Two centuries later the British are still at it — but with lots more comfort. P&O has slated their Arcadia for a Summertime Great Circle Pacific cruise of 58 days, considerably faster than Cook.

At 30,000-tons, she is the largest cruise ship in the world's biggest ocean. Her schedule calls for a route via Alaska in the north, Japan in the east, Australia and the South Seas.

Departure from Los Angeles is July 5. Ports never before on the line's schedules will be visited, including some of World War II's sea battlegrounds, now turned into tropical resorts.

Arcadia first steams up the coast and Inland Passage of Alaska to Ketchikan, built on hills with the flavor of sourdough days still around. It visits the mighty Grand Pacific glacier and its 20-story high ice wall. Onward through the Gulf of Alaska and Cook Inlet to Anchorage, the 49th state's largest city. From here everyone will lose a day of their lives as the ship crosses the International Date Line and the clock jumps 24 hours ahead.

Next, after some days of sailing open seas, is Japan and the ports of Yokohama and Kobe. Arcadia sails the Inland Sea and reaches the city of Kagoshima before going on to Hong Kong. world's greatest shopping center. There's a three-day stop here, enough time for ordering clothes and making shore excursions.

There are optional overland tours of from one to 11 days available here, from Japan, and later from Sydney. Passengers can disembark at Hong Kong for a tour of 11 days to Thailand, Malaya, Singapore and Bali and rejoin the ship at Sydney.

Guam, next stop, is one of the battle areas. This U.S. island was one of the first captured after Pearl Harbor. Now the Japanese are pouring back. It's a favorite honeymoon and vacation spot for travelers out of Nippon.

Rates for the entire cruise from the West Coast start at $1800. Further information and pamphlets are available from P&O offices and travel agents.

Two-way TV near in Kansas

(See Page 6)

Helen Reddy ('I Am Woman') to show Flip side

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

I met Woman the other day and, gentlemen, I think she's OK.

I mean, she gave no indication of being a man-hater, a scold, a nag, a shrew, a vixen, a battleax or a know-it-all.

In fact, she seemed downright feminine, in the best sense of that word — if I can use it without insulting an ardent advocate of Women's Lib.

I don't think we have too much to worry about in the future, men, if this particular woman is representative of the movement.

She's not out to dominate us, just to be our equal. And how can any man mind that if he stops to think that she's going to make over a million dollars this year?

The woman I've been referring to is, of course, singer Helen Reddy. Her song "I Am Woman" is the unofficial theme song of the women's liberation movement. Sort of a hymn to her, you might say. Helen not only recorded it, she wrote it.

And when the Australian-born performer was named winner of the Grammy Award last March as best female vocalist (pop, rock or folk) for that particular number, she made a noteworthy acceptance talk at the nationally televised ceremonies in Nashville. After thanking her husband, who is her manager, and the people at Capitol Records, she concluded: "And I want to thank God, because She makes everything possible."

Yes, Miss Reddy (I forgot to ask her if she prefers Ms.) takes this Women's Lib business seriously.

SINCE HELEN is going to have her own television series this summer, starting June 28, I set up an interview with her last Tuesday. She will be Flip Wilson's summer replacement on NBC (Thursday nights, 8 to 9), and her series will be titled "Flip Wilson Presents the Helen Reddy Show." Flip will appear on the first and last shows, and she'll have a few guests each week on the music-comedy series. Monte Kay, executive producer of the Flip Wilson show, is serving in the same capacity for Helen's eight-week series.

Helen and I sat at a conference table in the production offices and chatted as we each ate a Monte Cristo sandwich and fruit salad ordered from the Smoke House, which is just across the street, in Burbank. She had just arrived from a rehearsal at NBC Studios and graciously squeezed the interview into a hectic schedule.

The thing that struck me most about the 31-year-old entertainer was her smile. She smiled frequently during our 45-minute conversation, and it seemed to be a perfectly natural and genuine smile — nothing phony about it. Sure, she's got plenty to be happy about now that she's on the top. But you can't acquire that kind of smile overnight. I feel sure that her sense of humor has been a major factor in her ability to take the hard knocks of a number of lean years in show business and to keep going.

"If I have to," the song goes, "I can do anything. I am strong. I am invincible. I am woman."

I WANTED TO know if her husband, Jeff Wald, subscribes to her views on Women's Lib.

"Let's say that we have had a number of discussions about it over the years," she replied. (Or did she say arguments?)

"Your husband is your manager — does he run your career?" I asked.

"I respect his professional judgment, but we discuss things," she answered. "We are equal partners. It's our career."

"How about at home? Who's the boss there?"

"We got that straightened out in our first week of marriage," replied Miss Reddy, with that pretty smile of hers. "I was trying to go to sleep and he was playing the transistor radio — my transistor radio. I asked him to turn it off, but he continued playing it. So I reached over and turned it off. He turned it back on. Then I grabbed the radio, took the four batteries out and threw them on the floor. 'Pick them up!' he ordered. 'You pick them up!' I said. And it ended up with each of us picking up two batteries. And that's the way it's been with us — 50-50."

Helen said she can't cook and her husband can't drive a nail, so neither does much work around the five-bedroom Hollywood home (with swimming pool) that they purchased last year.

I asked if it were still true, as reported in Newsweek last December, that Helen had a male housekeeper.

"Sure — why not? George is very good. He even looks after my two kids," she replied in her delightful Aussie accent.

Her children are Traci, a 10-year-old daughter by her first husband, an Australian, and Jordan, a six-month-old son by Wald, who is a native American.

THE LAST SIX months have no doubt been the most exciting and busiest in the life of Miss Reddy, who came to America in 1966 and who says she is in the process of becoming a U.S. citizen.

In addition to giving birth to her second child in mid-December and winning a Grammy Award in March, the popular vocalist (1) hosted the premiere "Midnight Special" TV show in February; (2) made her Los Angeles area concert debut March 18 at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium; (3) made her Las Vegas debut in late March-early April at the Riviera; (4) made her debut at New York's Carnegie Hall in late April; (5) made a cross-country concert tour of many cities with Mac Davis as co-star; (6) has appeared on the Bobby Darin, Flip Wilson, Johnny Carson, Bill Cosby, Grammy, "Women of the Year" and other TV shows; and (7) now has her own summer TV series coming up.

Miss Reddy figures her earnings will top a million this year, and she points out that in 1969 — after years of experience as an entertainer (she began singing professionally at age 4 with her show-business parents and quit school and became a full-time professional at 15) — she could get only three weeks of work the entire year.

"And were you trying to find work all that time?" I asked.

"Of course."

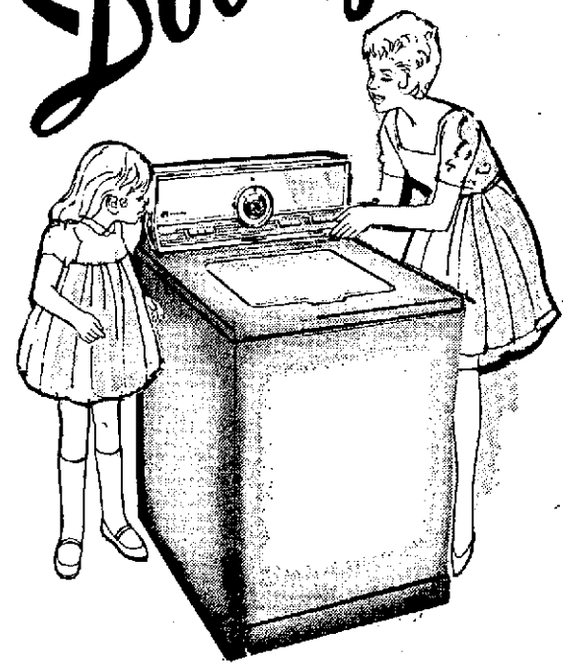

So, girls, take heart from Miss Reddy's current success. Don't become discouraged, no matter how bleak life might look. Don't let those male chauvinist pigs get you down.

Be strong. Be invincible. And, above all, keep smiling.

HELEN REDDY . . . gets her own summer TV series.

"LOVE THY NEIGHBOR," a new half-hour comedy series, makes its bow Friday night at 9:30 on ABC. It centers around a black couple (played by Janet MacLachlan and Harrison Page) and their next-door neighbors (played by Joyce Bulifant and Ron Masak) in the San Fernando Valley.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

SOMEONE OUGHT to clue John Davidson in that to be popular and a hit with a TV audience you do not have to resort to low class entertainment.

This young man who we used to hold in high respect has certainly changed his image as far as we are concerned.

He substituted as a guest host on the Johnny Carson show, and a great deal of his dialogue was a little on the offensive side. He just couldn't seem to carry on any conversation that didn't center on sex.

I hope that he had an opportunity to watch Tony Curtis when he hosted the show, it would have given him a chance to see how a gentleman conducted the show, and we enjoyed every minutes of Mr. Curtis and his guests.

Mrs. W. G., Long Beach

FOR THE PAST three months, I've been listening to KLON radio from Long Beach. Of particular enjoyment to me is the "Top of the Mark" program hosted by Mark Sudock.

His show is usually composed of light music but from time to time features guests from the show business world.

Last Monday night, his guest was Channel 4's John Barbour. Their topic was the role of comedy today. I felt that Sudock did an extraordinary job of drawing Barbour out on an issue which he is obviously very concerned about. I felt the hour was so entertaining that others should become aware of it.

From hearing some of his music shows, it is obvious that Mark Sudock is as at home with records as he is with guests. What's the lowdown on him? Who, what, where, when, why?

Richard Baker, Lakewood

(Mark Sudock is a young man of 21 who grew up in Long Beach. He attended Gompers, Bancroft and Lakewood High schools and Long Beach City College, and is now a junior at Long Beach State, majoring in radio and television.

(He has been working at KLON-FM (88.1), which is owned and operated by the Long Beach Unified School District, for three and a half years. In addition to hosting "Top of the Mark," which is broadcast from 8 to 9 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, Mark produces the station's "This Week in Recreation" show and will produce a new weekly show starting June 18 — a show about big bands hosted by Fred Woodruff.

(Mark says he has been aiming for a career in radio and television since he was 5, studying and working toward that goal for 16 years now. When he was 5, his older brother, Robert, built a small transmitter in their garage and Mark started doing shows for the neighborhood. Robert is now assistant operations manager of KLON and "engineers my show," says Mark.

(Mark attended Mel Blanc's broadcasting school in Hollywood for one semester and then worked for the school as a cameraman and videotape operator. He says he enjoys all aspects of broadcasting but that radio is his favorite medium now. His future goals include acting, directing on television and interviewing on television.)

Television in Egypt is a strange mixture

(Egyptian television is state controlled, but commercially financed. The result is a mixture of the usual soap and cigarette commercials, unusual public service announcements with personal messages, and the inevitable "governmental information.")

By AHMED SHAWKI

CAIRO (AP) — An attentive wife should be home when her husband returns from work, greet him with a fresh smile and offer him a favorite dish. This is what the Egyptian husband wants.

This advice is but a sample of the guidance offered to housewives, parents, teen-agers or their young brothers and sisters by Arab Republic of Egypt (ARE) television.

Television's three channels offer everything from Arab to European classical music; Russian, American, Polish, English and Italian films; live and prefilmed dramas; literacy courses and the occasional belly dancer. They are taking customers from the age-old Arab male haunt, the traditional coffee shop.

Fatima Aly's experience reflects a new male interest, seen elsewhere in the world as the glowing little screen arrives in living rooms.

"I was about to ask for a divorce because I don't see much of my husband. I was advised to buy a television set . . . and like magic it did succeed . . . he stays home now more than ever."

MEANWHILE, back to the television show which suggests a way of easing the homecoming husband's burden.

It shows Ibrahim Aly, a government employe, sweating over his files all day. Then he battles his way back home in Cairo's crowded buses. Reaching home, he knocks on the door with a grim face.

But, when his wife opens the door, well-dressed and with a cheerful smile, and says, "Welcome home," he cools down.

She walks with him to the bedroom and as she helps him change his clothes she sweetly whispers: "Guess what . . . we are having chicken and Mulukniya (green soup) for supper."

Ali's eyes glitter with joy and he utters: "I really needed that, thank you dear," and kisses her.

Then the television announcer appears and addresses wives at home: "This is how you always keep your husband happy."

ANNOUNCER Suhair Attribi is one of the rewards of watching television in Egypt, where adherents are being drawn away from their traditional coffee shop haunts. Suhair is shown here introducing her own program.

ANOTHER 15-minute weekly live program takes wives to the kitchen. The program shows them how and what to cook.

produced, shows a family at a dinner table. The father notices his young son has dirty hands.

"Shame on you, son. Don't you know that dirty hands could bring you several diseases? You should have washed them before eating as we all did," says the father. The boy, blushes, runs to the bathroom, washes and comes back.

"You should always do that before and after eating," says the father.

This and similar films played for five minutes daily on the main channel are aimed at teaching kids good manners, and hygiene.

Children shriek happily as "Mama Salwa" tells them, aided with a cartoon film, about a "Superman's" wings which makes him fly from one place to the other beating the bad people, saving the weak and aiding the poor, in a weekly story-telling show.

ADVERTISEMENTS in the form of slides, cartoons and films—all locally produced by special agencies—sandwich each program on the two channels.

Advertisements, including clothes, soap, shoes, cigarettes, food and shops that sell them, use roughly one minute of viewing time for each five minutes of noncommercial viewings.

Two-way TV is near in Kansas City area

By PATRICK A. MALONE

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (UPI) — Flick on your television and watch a rotating display of sporting goods. Punch a button and you've just bought a new set of golf clubs.

Turn the channel and talk to your doctor. Show him where it hurts; let him take your temperature and pulse via remote sensors.

It's time for the community college's great books discussion. Tune it in and you're arguing with readers in a dozen other homes.

If you think none of this will really happen for at least 10 or 20 years, you're wrong. It's just around the corner in suburban Kansas City.

What has made this futuristic two-way television system more than science fiction is a 600-mile system of coaxial cable laid by telecable of Overland Park, Inc., throughout nine Kansas City suburbs in Northeast Johnson County, Kan.

Just as in ordinary cable TV, the cable carries signals from the Telecable studios to any household willing to pay $5 a month to triple the number of channels received. Some of the channels transmitted are out-of-town stations snared by Telecable's big antenna; others are special service channels only available via cable, such as 24-hour news and stock market reports.

UNLIKE ordinary cable TV, this system lets you talk back to your TV, and your TV listens. Special amplifiers, which boost the cost of a two-way system 50 per cent, enable the double strand cable to carry 12 channels out on each strand and three back in. This means that each TV can receive 24 channels and, with broadcasting equipment, send on six other channels.

"We're on the threshhold of a real revolution in communications, perhaps even changing the structure of a community," Telecable manager Murray Nolte said in an interview.

Two hurdles block the goal of two-way cable communications. One is developing commercially feasible broadcast equipment for the home. The other is of the chicken-egg variety. Both problems, Nolte predicts, will be at least partly solved within a year.

Nolte likens his chicken-egg problem to that of broadcasters in the early days of color television: Which comes first, the programming or the equipment?

Two-way TV near in Kansas

There would be little point in buying a color TV if all broadcasts were in black and white. But if no one had color TV, why go to the expense of broadcasting in color?

SIMILARLY, Nolte explained, there is little point in paying a hefty sum to have a little box with an adding machine-like keyboard installed in your living room if it just sits there. But if you could punch a button on the box and buy golf clubs or the week's groceries, you might go for it.

On the other hand, retailers want to be shown that such shopping services have potential buyers on the other end before they pay to have their products shown.

While electronic engineers work on the cost factor and marketing specialists tinker with the chicken and the egg, telecable is going ahead with plans for some non-profit two-way applications.

"We're sitting here with 600 miles of cable, every inch with two-way capability, the only major system like this in the country," Nolte said. "So we're very anxious to prove it's economically viable."

HE LISTED some of the uses being planned and others just talked about.

The company is planning televised discussion groups among several remote locations. The Johnson County Community College would set the topic and a discussion leader, and participants in the regular affair would gather at one of about a dozen homes equipped with cameras and other broadcasting gear.

A program for teaching handicapped students who cannot leave home was tried once experimentally and should be started again in the fall. The teacher, who otherwise would travel from home to home for one-on-one tutoring, would sit in a studio; she could give personal lessons to a half dozen students simultaneously by flipping the channel from student to student.

Doctors at the University of Kansas Medical Center have expressed serious interest in medical services via two-way television, Nolte said.

INSIDE THE TUBE

Ed aims to keep learning

By BILL MAHAN

During my college days I used to listen to a group called The Ames Brothers. They sang the kind of music I dug and still do, only I don't hear too much of it any more.

Ed Ames was one of that group and he sang with his three brothers for 11 years. Then, in 1961, he broke away and started on a career of his own. Tall, soft-spoken, with rugged good looks, Ed didn't sing a note for two years but instead diligently studied acting at the Herbert Berghoff School, polishing and refining his abilities.

His first starring role came in an off-Broadway production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," and was followed by another starring role in the musical comedy smash, "The Fantasticks." Producer David Merrick and Gower Champion spotted him in "The Fantasticks" and their enthusiasm landed him the leading role in "Carnival."

As an actor, he says, "I was developing new methods of communicating — through thought, gesture, body movement and timing."

His greatest theatrical triumph as a New York legitimate actor occurred in the adaptation of Ken Kesey's novel, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," in which he co-starred with Kirk Douglas and received sensational reviews.

In the meantime, acting blossomed as a servant to Ed's singing. "Acting is a representation of life," he explains. "So is singing, and I approach a song like I would a stage play."

Twentieth Century-Fox saw Ed in "Cuckoo's Nest" and brought him to Los Angeles to star in the television series "Daniel Boone." His four seasons on the show were overshadowed only by his return to singing and his zooming popularity as an RCA recording star, climaxed currently by his new album release, "Bacharach, and David and Me."

Now Ed is enrolled at UCLA as an undergraduate student, majoring in theater arts and cinema. He feels he can never stop learning and he doesn't want to, even though he is proficient in a half dozen languages. On top of all that he is also an ecology advocate, using his car only for the longer trips and riding a bicycle the rest of the time.

Ed Ames is a highly educated man of principles who puts his money where his mouth is. He is a credit to the entertainment industry and can't help but go to the top as a serious actor.

The BIBLE Says

Question: What is a miracle!

A miracle may be properly defined as "the direct intervention of God in the affairs of men, an event that indicates the presence or sanction of Deity, an event not brought about by the ordinary forces of nature or by ordinary men."

We have written much recently about the possibility of miracles existing today. We do not believe that miracles exist today as they did in Bible times. This does not, however, mean that we deny the existence of miracles, for we believe they certainly did happen as recorded in the Bible. We just do not believe that they are continuing to happen today.

That which men often call "miracles" today have no element of divine intervention of God whatsoever! They are merely based upon man's feelings, and offer no objective proof. The miracles of the Bible were clearly visible, proof-positive indications of God intervening in the affairs of men. Men could see the Red Sea part; that was not a natural occurrence. Men could see Jesus of Nazareth after he was raised from the dead. Men could see the man who was lame from his mother's womb stand up and walk (Acts 3).

Why is it that no one can see any of the so-called miracles that are worked today? Why are these ailments that are supposed to be healed always internal, so that no once can tell whether one was really sick in the first place, or whether his illness was psychosomatic?

A lady told me not long ago that she was "led" to hear a certain sermon at a place where she attended on Sunday morning, and she described this as a "miracle." Such an occurrence is no miracle at all; a miracle must clearly be an event not brought about by the ordinary force of nature or men. This is what Bible miracles were. Many need to distinguish between coincidence and the miraculous!

SPECIAL

WHAT DO You Think, George? (28), 7:00 p.m. — First of two films produced by Robert Radnitz ("Sounder") showing real life situations in which children must make difficult choices. Tonight, two boys take a friend's bike without his knowledge. The children discuss how the situation should be handled.

DIARY of a Mad Housewife (4), 8:00 p.m. — Carrie Snodgrass portrays a young wife dismayed by her selfish husband's (Richard Benjamin) total disregard for her needs. Although much of the adult segments were cut, this flick is by far one of the best of the season's offerings.

NBC REPORTS: "Murder in America" (4), 10:00 p.m. — An examination of homicide, which has reached frightening proportions in the U.S. The report reveals that more murders are committed in the U.S. in one year than in any other Western nation and the rate is growing rapidly: it has doubled in the last 15 years.

"MURDER IN AMERICA" will be presented at 10 p.m. Tuesday on NBC as an "NBC Reports" special on homicide in Denver, where murders have tripled in seven years.

MARLON BRANDO is scheduled to make a rare TV appearance as the only guest on "The Dick Cavett Show" Tuesday night on ABC.

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making big money until I did less – a lot less.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more?

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you the world's most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

That'll give you plenty of time to get it, look it over, try it out.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K. – now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary – to prove that sending me the 10 dollars . . . which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied . . . is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $100,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it – cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it – the Lazy Man's Way – a secret that I've shared with just a few friends til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that – nothing more, nothing less – the results will be hard to believe. Remember – I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again – I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and an 8-cent stamp. But what if I'm right?

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material – for any reason – within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

SPECIAL

"MOBY DICK" (2), 4 p.m. — This is a bit early for Dad but it's a deft handling of Herman Melville's classic story. Gregory Peck, Orson Welles, and Richard Basehart star in this 1956 film. (Maybe Dad can rush home early today.)

DICK CAVETT (7), 11:30 P.M. — Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal, "the man who found Adolf Eichmann," is Cavett's special guest and tells how dogged determination paid off with the discovery of Eichmann in South America. But Wiesenthal's work isn't over. He's still traveling the globe, seeking out leads on the hiding Nazis who butchered more than 7 million Jews in Hitler's concentration camps during World War II.

LAWRENCE WELK, whose program airs at 7 p.m. Saturdays on Channel 11, lets one of his 10 grandchildren, Kevin Welk, try the baton. Kevin is the son of singer Tanya Welk.

WARREN STEVENS is featured as Elliot Carson on NBC-TV's daytime drama serial "Return to Peyton Place," which airs Mondays through Fridays.

SPECIAL

A LITTLE Bit of Irish (11), 6:00 p.m. — Bing Crosby and his wife Kathryn pay tribute to the Emerald Isle in a one-hour musical filmed in Dublin. Irish actors, singers and dancer fill in around the crooner.

GOODBYE, Mr. Chips (2), 8:00 p.m. — If you liked the dramatic version of this James Hilton classic (which came out in 1939), you may not be too enamored of the musical edition (which surfaced in 1969). Still, it does have Peter O'Toole in a singing role and it also offers the obvious talents of British pop star Petula Clark. Sir Michael Redgrave also has a starring role.

LOVE Thy Neighbor (7), 9:30 p.m. — Premiere night for this show, which has been an established hit in England. The show uses racial concerns to produce laughs. Tonight's starter show features series star Ron Masak (as Ferguson Bruce) making his move — into an all-white neighborhood. His next door neighbor turns out to be a guy who works for the same company. It ain't Bill Cosby but you can see the potential for the other side of the Archie Bunker coin.

THE LATE SEN. DIRKSEN — HOW HE COULD TALK!

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The widow of Sen. Everett Dirksen appeared Monday on NBC-TV's morning Dinah Shore series, and I couldn't help thinking of a memorable 1968 video special that focused on the legislator.

How that man could talk! One of the most influential and colorful senators in American history, he was, with his speaking gifts and mellifluous tones, totally at home before the cameras in that 1968 prime-time ABC-TV hour in which he offered a tour of the Capitol building in Washington.

His widow, Louella, has told of her life with him in her book "The Honorable Mr. Marigold," written in collaboration with reporter- author Norma Lee Browning. And what with that, and Monday's television program, and the memory of the senator's video special of five years ago with newsman Howard K. Smith as his tour companion, one is reminded of Dirksen's singular style with the language, and can almost hear him now:

On the subject of words: "I must use beautiful words. I never know when I might have to eat them."

On marigolds (which he wanted to have named as America's national flower): "You can't beat a marigold ... it has humility, it has pungency, and it is resistant to man and bug and beast."

ON THE USES of the voice: "The voice is like an organ and must be suited to the occasion, the subject and the audience. Sometimes all stops are out and sometimes ... for contrast, it must be soft and modulated."

On history: "Sometimes the history book rises up and smites you."

On words again: "Certain words are brightly colored, like red, white and blue of the flag; some are pastels, and others are the multicolored hues of a sunset or rainbow."

On being vice president: "I would have to dedicate roads and courthouses and bow to visiting princes and kings. I am not a candidate."

On preparing speeches: "I do not write speeches. I find a quiet room, sit at a desk, and stare at the wall. If there is a crack in the wall, so much the better; there is no greater stimulus to the imagination. How did that crack get there? Does it go completely through the plaster? The mind seeks the answers and out of this reflection you make a start, you lay out a text, you develop it, and you prepare the final clout."

On criticism: "I count that day lost when I don't catch hell from somebody."

The 1968 telecast noted that Dirksen was the last of a breed — or maybe the first. And the program included a visit to his home town of Pekin, Ill., where one of his brothers recalled how young Everett used to practice his oration in the barn, and how you could hear him from the barn to the kitchen. His mother would remark, "Now just listen to him talk."

People never stopped saying that about him, and anyone who watched Louella Dirksen's video appearance Monday know he had a lovely and loving listener at home.

SPECIAL

JUNE with the King Family (11), 8 p.m. — Since June is bustin' out all over, the King Family decided to bust out in song. With the State and County Arboretum in Arcadia providing a lush and tranquil backdrop, the Kings provide an hour of extra-special songs. Great for the entire family.

FAMILY Night with Horace Heidt (11), 9 p.m. — Second half of a 2-hour musical panorama, Heidt's aggregation for tonight's show reads like a Who's Who of Music. For instance, Al Hirt, Pete Condoli and the late Red Nichols are seen in a lively battle of the horns. And Les Paul and Mary Ford and John Gary add to the musical excitement. It ain't the Musical Knights — it's better.

SPORTS TODAY

GRAND PRIX of Monaco (7), 12 Noon — One of the world's most heated automotive competitions takes off on this early version of ABC-TV's Wide World of Sports with Bill Flemming calling the action. The course winds through beautiful Monte Carlo on the French Riviera. The early start for this show will allow for coverage of the U.S. Open.

U.S. OPEN GOLF (7), 1:30 p.m. — Golfing's most prestigious event gets under way at the Oakmont (Pa.) Country Club with an 8-man broadcast team covering play from the third round today. The cream of golfdom goes after the $200,000 in prize money with the first place cash totaling $30,000.

CHAMPIONSHIP WRESTLING (13), 8 p.m. — Disappointed over their failure to win Emmys, Paul Reyes, Sonny "Cool Cat" King and John Tolos will vent their anger on their mat foes tonight.

TV MOVIE TIPS

TODAY — "The Big Mouth" (1967), 9 p.m., Ch. 7. Comedian Jerry Lewis stars in slapstick romp about an innocent bookkeeper who becomes involved in a stolen diamond caper in which rival hoods contend for the hot rocks.

"You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" (1939; B&W), 11 p.m., Ch. 9. W. C. Fields plays a carnival con man who becomes involved with high society in comedy also starring Edgar Bergen with Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd.

MONDAY — "The Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone" (1961; English), 6:30 p.m., Ch. 7. Vivien Leigh and Warren Beatty star in drama based on Tennessee Williams' novel of an aging American actress in Rome.

"Trail of the Lonesome Pine" (1936), 7:30 p.m., Ch. 5. Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sidney and Fred MacMurray star in the first outdoor color film.

"Red Tomahawk" (1967), 9 p.m., Ch. 7. Howard Keel, Joan Caulfield, Broderick Crawford, Scott Brady and Wendell Corey head cast in Western involving one town's efforts to ward off an attack by Sioux Indians soon after Gen. Custer's defeat at Little Big Horn.

"Half a Sixpence" (1967), 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Tommy Steele repeats his stage role as a turn-of-the-century English shop clerk who inherits a fortune in movie adaptation of Broadway and London musical hit.

TUESDAY — "Diary of a Mad Housewife" (1970), 8 p.m., Ch. 4. Carrie Snodgress, Richard Benjamin and Frank Langella star in drama exploring the disintegration of a modern marriage.

HOWARD KEEL and Joan Caulfield star in "Red Tomahawk" on "The ABC Monday Night Movie."

"Second Chance" (1972 TV movie), 8:30 p.m., Ch. 7. Brian Keith plays a rich, ulcerated stockbroker who buys a ghost town and turns it into a booming community for those who want another chance to make something of their lives. Also in cast are Elizabeth Ashley, Juliet Prowse and William Windom.

"The 500 Pound Jerk" (1973 TV movie), 9:30 p.m., Ch. 2. A big-city ad man (James Franciscus) tries to turn a gentle hillbilly giant (Alex Karras) into an overnight Olympic weightlifting champion in comedy-drama filmed at the 1972 Munich Olympics. Hope Lange also stars.

WEDNESDAY — "Night and Day" (1946), 7:30 p.m., Ch. 9. Drama is based on the life of Cole Porter and stars Cary Grant and Alexis Smith.

"Say Goodbye, Maggie Cole" (1972 TV movie), 8:30 p.m., Ch. 7. Susan Hayward portrays a recently widowed research doctor, intent on rebuilding her life, who returns to general practice only to face new heartbreak with a dying teen-age patient.

THURSDAY — "Secret World" (1968; French), 9 p.m., Ch. 2. Drama centers around a withdrawn boy's romantic interest in his uncle's mistress. Jacqueline Bisset, Jean-Francois Maurin and Giselle Pascal head cast.

"The Men" (1950; B&W), 10 p.m., Ch. 9. Marlon Brando made his movie bow in drama about a paraplegic veteran and his efforts to readjust to life.

"Love Is Better Than Ever" (1952; B&W), 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Elizabeth Taylor and Larry Parks star in romantic comedy about a young dance teacher and a theatrical agent.

FRIDAY — "Jezebel" (1938; B&W), 7:30 p.m., Ch. 9. Bette Davis won an Oscar for her portrait of a Southern shrew. Henry Fonda and George Brent also are in cast.

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" (1969), 8 p.m., Ch. 2. Peter O'Toole and Petula Clark star in musical version of the James Hilton classic.

A New Kind of SHOCK ABSORBER

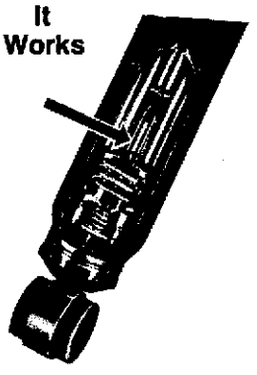

The SteadyRider

The All-Temperature Shock Absorber. Sizes for Most American-made Cars.

It's the only shock absorber with a temperature compensating device. Ever notice how your car sometimes rides "rock hard" in the cold...or gives "mushy" control when it's hot? That's because the oil in your shocks can't always keep up with the temperature . . . it gets thick in the cold and thin in the heat. But now, Sears offers a shock absorber that helps give you a comfortable, steady ride through thick or thin...The Steady Rider. It actually adjusts to maintain your ride as the temperature changes.

Here's How It Works

There's a temperature-sensitive device in the SteadyRider that helps compensate for the change in thickness of shock oil at different temperatures. So when it's cold, the device adjusts to allow more fluid flow; and when it's hot, the device limits the flow of oil. The result is a steady suspension control during all temperature changes.

Guaranteed for as long as you own your car

If SteadyRider Shock Absorber fails due to faulty materials and workmanship or wears out while original purchaser owns the car, it will be replaced upon return free of charge, or the purchase price will be refunded. If the defective shock absorber was installed by Sears, we will install new shock absorber with no charge for labor.

DON'T TELL DAMON RUNYON

To begin with, it must be conceded that Leonard Lombardo does not look much like Catherine de'Medici. She was Italian, of course, as is Leonard, but his people are from Sicily whereas Catherine, a good-looking broad, came from Florence. Howsoever, there are similarities in their careers.

Catherine went to Paris as the bride of the Duc d'Orleans, who later became Henry II of France. French food wasn't much in those days — stringy roast beef and boiled mutton — so Catherine sent home for a couple of Italian chefs.

The Italians had already learned to cook pretty good, and soon Catherine's table was the talk of Paris. The nobility came to dinner and begged her recipes before they left. That's how French cooking was born sometime in the mid-1500s.

Lombardo, as I hope you know, is the proprietor of a downtown Long Beach restaurant called (by one of those coincidences that make history) Lombardo's. He had a little difficulty digging Long Beach cooking, so like Catherine he sent away and got an Italian chef. I mean a real Italian chef, not one of those pizza-tossers with a godfather in Flatbush.

Recently Leonard had a small group of us over to the place to meet his new chef, a pleasant gentleman name o' Joe d'Amico. Joe's hours tend to run from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m., so we gathered for an early dinner in the kitchen during his slack period. Joe started us off with a little wine and antipasto: Calamari insalata, which is squid and anchovies, and clams arreganata, which are clams topped with an Italian dressing and baked.

I began to realize how Catherine with only a couple of Italian chefs kept the armies of Europe at bay during the reigns of her husband and three sons, each of whom in turn ruled over France.

"Make dinner not war," that was Catherine's motto.

Among our group was another Leonard — Leonard Putnam, the city attorney. He was there under protest. Not protesting his own presence; protesting mine.

"You'll probably write about this and spoil it," he said. "It's a shame. Back in Damon Runyon's time there were restaurants like this where you could go and have a great meal, but only a few people knew about it."

"Like Medici's of Paris?" I asked.

Putnam grunted. I figured he had been there. Like maybe in August 1559.

Joe brought some stuffed mushrooms and a platter of spagettini.

"Write about it," Lombardo said. "We need the business. We've got almost a hundred items on the menu and all entrees are cooked to order."

"Damon Runyon wouldn't have spoiled it by writing about it by name," Putnam said.

"Tell you what, Leonard," I said, addressing both of them. "I'll compromise. I'll probably write about it, but first I'll have some more squid and mushrooms and spagettini."

Joe refilled my wine glass. I asked him where he had learned to cook. He told me he had gone to hotel school in Italy, then he had worked in Rome as a pantryman, saucier and assistant chef. Finally he had come to this country and worked in the class Italian restaurants in New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"He caters special parties for Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra and Gene Hackman," Lombardo said. Joe modestly nodded this was so.

"Did you ever cook for Damon Runyon?" I asked.

"If he did, Runyon would have been too decent a guy to mention it," Putnam said.

Joe brought out some Sicilian sausage and peppers, and a dish containing chicken and pasta. Leonard tasted the latter with pleased surprise.

"Hey, this isn't on the menu," he said, "what do you call it, Joe?"

"Spaccedini Italian," Joe said. Or maybe it was spadeccini Italian. It was hard to make notes with my wineglass on the pad.

"The trouble with Long Beach," Lombardo said, "is that people won't believe they can get great food in restaurants here. They think they have to drive 30 miles to Beverly Hills or Los Angeles. Well, they can't get better Italian food than this anywhere."

"Catherine de'Medici would have liked it," I said. "And even Damon Runyon."

"If he did, only a few of his best friends would have known," Putnam said.

I thought about asking for a couple of recipes, but decided not. I doubt if they would have given them to me. After all, Catherine de'Medici gave away her best recipes to the French, and look at the prices those French restaurants get now.

Glad you asked that!

Q: What is the name of the theme song for The Waltons? And can we buy a recording of it? — Mildred Wiebaurn, Post City, Tex.

A: As of this moment, no. Titled The Walton Theme, it is not available on records. No lyrics have yet been written for the music composed by Jerry Goldsmith.

Q: Any truth to a headlined story in a national magazine that Carroll O'Connor is quitting All in the Family next season? — Elvira R., Rutland, Vt.

A: Producer Norman Lear debunks the Bunker report. "Carroll O'Connor is not leaving the cast of All in the Family. We expect him to be Archie Bunker for as long as the series runs."

Q: Settle this bet please. Didn't Richard Nixon, while in office, appear on Laugh-In saying something like, "Sock it to me"? — Jim LaRoche, Everett, Wash.

A: Yes, confirms the White House. "The President did once tape something for Rowan and Martin's show. During the 1968 campaign when he was a candidate we provided a tape which said, 'Sock it to 'em!'"

Q: Ed McMahon looks so much younger these nights. Is it true he secretly flew to Switzerland for the same magic treatment that restored youth to Churchill, Baruch, Chevalier and other VIPs? — Vincent K., Seal Beach, Cal.

A: No, Ed didn't go that far. He did fly to the Bahamas where he underwent a series of cell injections. Says it's a kind of painless routine that revitalizes your body organs in general and makes your skin and hair healthier.

Q: Watching E.G. Marshall on Hollywood Squares, I heard emcee Peter Marshall introduce him as his father. Was this on the level? — Helen Backmann, Arlington, Va.

A: No. Peter was just having fun in a name's-the-same vein. Like introducing David Cassidy as Butch Cassidy's grandson, Dennis Weaver as Charley Weaver's son or Gov. George Wallace as Mike Wallace's brother.

Q: For years now, Brigitte Bardot has announced she's going to retire. But she keeps changing her mind. What's the latest bulletin? — B. Johnson, Memphis, Tenn.

A: In a recent candid TV interview in Paris, the 38-year-old sex symbol spoke her mind. "I have noticed signs of aging in the last two years and feel frightened when a new wrinkle appears. I shall retire because, if I do not abandon films, they will abandon me. I certainly don't intend to resort to face-lifting. It's against nature. After 20 years in films, I find the effort of trying to look beautiful from 8 in the morning until late at night rather terrifying." Asked about movies such as Last Tango, Brigitte said she finds this wave of eroticism quite grotesque. "Don't you think it is beautiful enough for a woman to reveal herself without having to do all the things one is asked to do today?"

The Waltons . . . their theme has a simple title.

Archie Bunker . . . he'll be back next season.

Richard Nixon . . . taped 'Laugh-In' appearance.

Ed McMahon . . . has had cell injections.

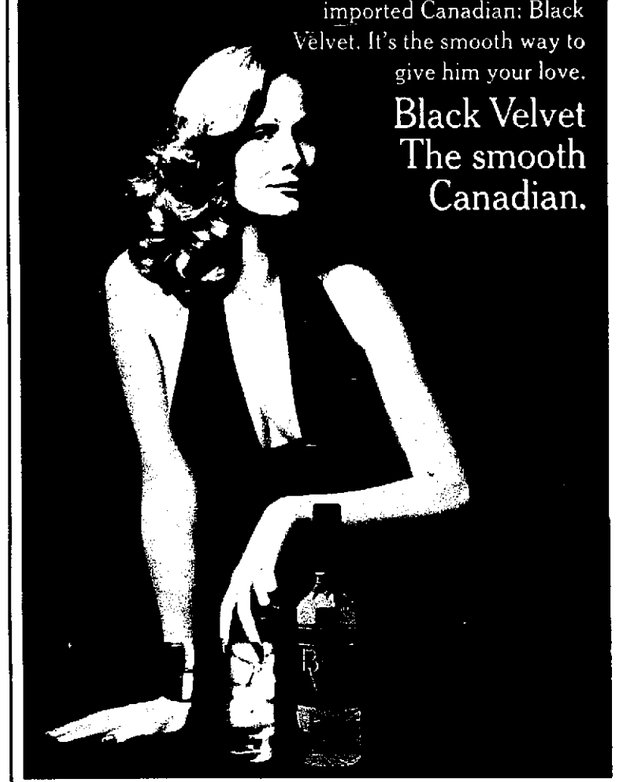

E. G. Marshall . . . no relation to Peter.

From the Pike to Union Plaza

Sam Boyd's odyessy

By MARY NEISWENDER

Sam Boyd is a gamblin' man.

He started out with a penny roulette wheel and rolled up a million dollar fortune.

He's what in-the-know Las Vegans call a gamblin' man with a cultivated Midas touch.

But down deep, they say, he's still carney —still a pitchman from the Long Beach Pike where he got his start.

And that's the way Sam Boyd likes it.

He talks of his Long Beach start—his training on the Pike and the gambling ships offshore and his introduction of tango (bingo in disguise) to Southern California—with frankness and with pride.

"Because I'd do it all again—just the same way..."

Born in Enid, Okla., in 1910, the now gray-haired Boyd talks of his early life with the same pride, minimizing the hard times.

"My father had a livery stable and soon after I was born he and his partner became motorized. He had the first ambulance and the first hearse and the first automobiles that brought people from the trains to the downtown hotels.

"And on the side he did a bit of gambling."

His father, Boyd adds, also started up a bus line in addition to his taxi company.

"He called it the Red Ball and ran buses from town to the oil fields that were starting up."

Life was pretty much gravy, Boyd admits, until he was nine years old. Then his father died of typhoid fever, leaving a widow and six children.

It took his mother—whose only working experience was as a practical nurse in a hospital—just seven years to go bankrupt.

"She had a few hundred dollars left so she decided she would move us all to California," Boyd recalls. But they only got as far as Albuquerque before running out of money and his mother had to find work in a hospital until she saved enough to continue on to California.

When the family got to Long Beach, Mrs. Boyd began work at the Seaside Hospital and Sam started school at Poly High.

"I went to the job placement center at the school looking for work every day after class for about a month until one of the girls finally called me aside and told me to come to the center in the morning—even if I had to skip class—because I'd have a better chance."

It worked and he began on the Pike for George Lawless, whom he describes as "one of Long Beach's more prominent citizens."

His job: "Picking up the balls that they threw at the girls who sat on the rack and fell into the water."

There was nowhere from there but up, he admits, but Lawless was just getting started and so was Sam Boyd.

"George Lawless started out with a concession on the Pike but then he got other concessions, including a restaurant and various shows with dancing girls.

"I ended up working all the concessions. One day I'd work here and the next day I'd be doing something else.

"From him I learned to make what you call 'openings' on side shows. You know, invite people in—make a pitch. A pitchman. I just picked it up as time went by. I'd watch people do it, then they'd say, 'Would you watch out for me while I get a cup of coffee' and pretty soon I was doing it."

It was in 1927 that he brought a "first" to Southern California.

"I started a tango game — commonly known as bingo — and I believe it was the first one to start in Southern California. It became a big thing there later on. It was exactly like bingo — the only difference was that we used merchandise as prizes instead of money."

But, Boyd admits frankly, it was easy to exchange the "merchandise" for money.

Working at the Pike and going to school, the 63-year-old gambler now admits, wasn't easy, but working as many hours as possible —at a rate of 10 cents an hour—meant "a lot of money" in 1927.

Finally, it was a case of Pike or school and Sam Boyd never made it past his sophomore year at Poly.

"A series of events lead to my quitting school," Boyd says. "Al Brown (who still operates several concessions on the Pike) and I worked from 2 p.m. Friday—we had permission to cut the last class on Friday—until 2 o'clock Saturday morning. Then we'd go back after a few hours sleep. Remember, the fleet was based there then and weekends on the Pike meant thousands and thousands of people. This was our busiest time. We'd work only four to five hours on regular days. On Monday we would be dead tired but we'd get to school on time.

"The first chance we had to sleep was right after lunch period. We'd be at the head of the line for lunch — remember, for 12 cents then you could have a good lunch in the school cafeteria—and then we'd run up to the civics class, lay our heads on the desks and go to sleep."

Boyd

Usually, Boyd claims, someone would wake them up before class started. One day no one did and Boyd and Brown slept through the lecture. They were awakened by the teacher, ordered to stand in front of the class and lectured on another subject: "The two people in the class that would certainly not amount to a damn."

"I don't think that had anything to do with my leaving school, but that was my last year."

His dropout from school was profitable, however, Boyd admits. His salary jumped to a quarter an hour when bingo opened.

"I was a pro at the age of 18," Boyd laughs, "so when a fellow by the name of Will Rogers—no relation to the movie star—decided to open up a bingo game at 330 W. Pike he offered me a job at $5 a day because I knew something about bingo. That wasn't a bad wage for a kid in those days."

Boyd opened up the game and it was a success. His salary rose to a whopping $100 a week. He hired and fired and banked all the money.

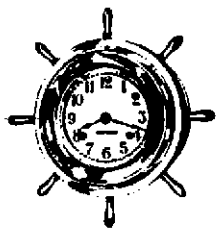

"I remember he had a gun and I used to stick it in my hip pocket and walk to the bank with the money. Finally somebody asked me if I had the sights filed on it. I said 'No sir' and he said, 'Well, you'd better do that, son.' I knew what he meant, so I didn't carry the gun anymore."

Bingo was big, Boyd admits, and he soon left Rogers to open up a Bingo game for Arthur Looff, joining his schoolchum, Al Brown.

"There were a lot of us young people that worked around the bingo places. We drank in the speakeasies, smoked cigarettes. It wasn't until the end of prohibition that anyone cared how old you were. There were hundreds of young people working in the bingo parlors.

"At one time there were 12 or 14 operating in Long Beach, Seal Beach, Balboa, Venice and Ocean Park—and mostly young people, under 21 working in them.

But while the other youngsters continue to work the shoreside bingo parlors, Boyd moved on.

He took with him his new bride—the former Miss Mary Neuman — whom he met when she walked into one of his bingo games with a girlfriend and her mother.

Boyd next set up bingo games aboard three gambling ships—the Monte Carlo, Caliente and Showboat—which were anchored three miles off Long Beach, just beyond police control. He was still working for Long Beach businessmen, Ed Turner and Doc Showalter, and still learning his trade—picking up the finer points of poker, craps and roulette.

"Then there was a Chinaman—half Chinese and half Filipino—by the name of George Williams who wanted to open some bingo games in Hawaii. They had their permits to go and they came to Long Beach to find someone who could open the games. They made a deal with me to go over and operate them.

'Dope wasn't part of gaming'

For his expertise, Boyd admits, he got a piece of the action.

"We opened up a bingo game in Hilo and one in Honolulu. The man who was the head of the syndicate—Hisanaga—also had the concession for gaming, which was tolerated, and I became involved in the rest of the operation."

Boyd admits that the syndicate was involved not only in gaming, but in prostitution "and nearly everything else that went on—except dope."

"You know," he says as an aside, "dope wasn't part of gaming—the half-world as some call it—at that time. It was't involved I'd say until the last 10 years. In fact, I wouldn't recognize marijuana if I saw it."

Boyd's Hawaii reception was, he admits, something less than traditional: "There were leis...and the small boats with the divers came out to meet us. But," he adds, "so did the police."

Boyd was taken to jail and questioned. The next day's newspapers headlined: "Mainland Gangster Comes to Hawaii."

"This Oriental was waiting for me when I got out of jail, and he knew all about it. I was scared to death but later learned that it was mainly for show."

The next day, however, Boyd says he routinely opened up the Bingo game and sent for people experienced in it.

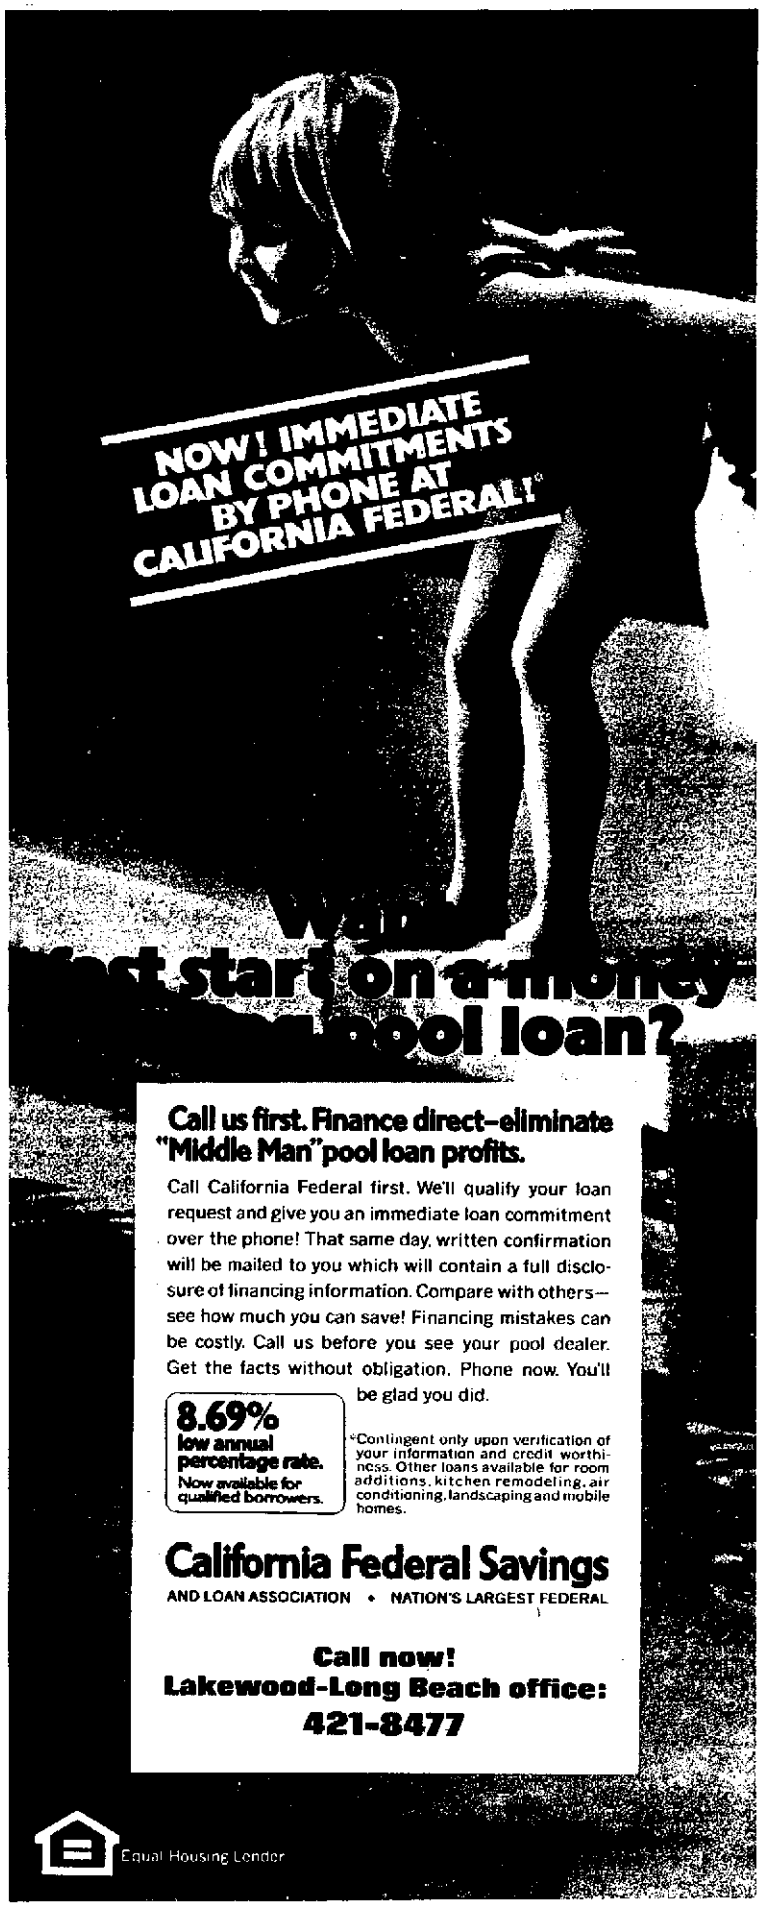

"I brought the fellow that owns Kelly's (a Belmont Shore restaurant) — Bill Thompson —and some other bingo people over, and I became involved in the gaming end of the operation."

He did several things, he said, to speed up the games, make it easier for players and the house and to increase the profits.

"The biggest thing I did was to change a hickey-type of pay-off chip they were using into the standard chip we use all over the gaming world now. I taught them how to use the stick in a crap game...things like that," Boyd recalls.

Things went smoothly, Boyd says, until he was suddenly called into the office of the police commissioner who said he was closing down the operation for "three or four days" and appeals would do no good. Boyd said he stayed in the Islands for three weeks before deciding to head back for the mainland. The day his boat was to sail he was called into the commissioner's office again.

"I went down and he asked me to go across the street with him and have a cup of coffee. We didn't. Instead, we walked around the block 10 or 15 times, and he told me that Mr. Hisanaga was no longer acceptable to operate and if I could come back in four or five months we could probably arrange something.

"By this time I knew Mr. Hisanaga and I knew he wouldn't like it and I didn't intend to ever go back under those conditions. I said, 'That's fine' but I couldn't wait to get on that boat."

He returned to Long Beach and bingo and a few other things.

"There was a man involved in the Pike—Bob Murphy. He had the Queen Beach Cafe on the Pike and opened the Bamboo Room, a big dance hall/beer parlor/cafe in Balboa. He grabbed me when I got off the boat and wanted me to come back to work for him. He made me his right hand man and I was in charge of all his operations.

"We were operating what you call 'sneaking'—operating the bingo games under the auspices of the American Legion, Elks, etc., because the bingo games had been closed down legally. And we had a chip game —a roulette run electrically— for pennies rather than for higher stakes, running over the drugstore at Balboa. We had all sorts of things going," Boyd laughs.

And the things kept going until Labor Day of 1941 when Boyd decided to visit some gambling-ship buddies of his who had migrated to Las Vegas.

He never came back.

With his penny roulette wheel from the top of the drug store, Boyd opened shop on Fremont Street. Soon his wife was running the penny roulette wheel and Boyd moved over to the high stakes part of the club. He stayed there until he joined the Army during World War II.

It was an arrest once a month . . .

As a surgical technician—"something I guess I qualified for because of aptitude tests" — he had one order in his two years of Army duty that he never violated.

He tells the background: "In my early years on the Pike in Long Beach, it was the practice of the police to come down once a month and arrest you, take you to jail and book you for gambling. We'd put up the bail and wouldn't appear. This was the way the city got its licensing money out of you.

"I used to give the name of Charlie Jones or whatever and they would put it in the book and I'd sign my name to the damn thing. This went on every month. They'd book me for gambling, I'd post bail . . .

"Then, one day — when I was in the Army — I got a call from the company commander. He had a rap sheet from the FBI about two feet long—with my various aliases and all the arrests for gaming. I was honest

As a leading pit boss, he had his pick of casinos about it and told him about working on the ships, etc. But he said if he ever heard of me gambling with any of the patients he'd have me court-martialed. I gambled in the Army but never with any of the patients. I knew better."

When he was discharged from the Army, he returned to work in Las Vegas for one of his former Long Beach buddies, Marion Hicks, who owned two of the gambling ships on which he learned the meaning of green felt.

From then it was all up.

He was a dealer at the El Cortez Hotel and at the Savoy Club and then took a job considered "key" in all casinos—pit boss—at the El Rancho, Flamingo Hotel, Cal-Neva Lodge, and the Thunderbird Hotel, all in Las Vegas, and at the Cal-Neva Club in Reno and the Cal-Neva Lodge in Lake Tahoe.

As one of the gambling state's leading pit bosses, he had his pick of the best casinos:

"The Cal-Neva Lodge in those days was the epitome of gaming—it had a lot of clientele in tuxedos and long dresses. It was the 'in' place as far as the wealthy people were concerned. I became club manager for both places, spending the winters in Reno and the summers at Lake Tahoe."

But in 1949, Boyd admits, "They had a real cold winter" and he returned to Las Vegas.

"Al Winter, who owned the Club Bingo and was building the Sahara Hotel asked me if I would be a partner in it. I had worked for him in Portland, Ore., running a bingo game in between some of these other jobs.

"I said I had a good job and was making good money, but he wanted me to be a partner so he put up the money for me," Boyd admits frankly.

As a partner Boyd set up the casino's "cage procedure" — a procedure, Boyd admits, which "bugs" the Internal Revenue Service and has been copied by big corporations.

"There's nothing wrong with the way we handle it, but in the beginning none of us knew anything about keeping books so Catherine Cowan, Jim West and I, 30 years ago, set up this system of cage credits and debits. It works and a lot of big corporations have adopted our system just because they don't know a better way of doing it. Remember, our inventory is money."

Although the system apparently is bothersome to the IRS, Boyd claims they now understand "it's just the way it's done in the gaming business."

He stayed at the Sahara with Milton Prell and Al Winter—both of whom had started in the bingo business in Long Beach — and moved up to executive vice president of the Sahara-Nevada Corp. The corporation moved on to buy the Pioneer Club, build the Lucky Strike Bingo Parlor, build the Mint and "acquire quite a bit of property."

In eight years, Boyd recalls, the corporation was sold to Del Webb and Boyd moved on to buy a club in Henderson, Nev., as a "family business."

Touted as world's largest casino

And then he went further.

He is now president and chief executive officer—and all that those titles entail—for the Union Plaza Hotel, Casino and Transportation Center, a $22-million complex with an annual payroll of $8.5 million, touted as the world's largest casino.

And he isn't stopping there.

"We've got another hotel casino going up down the street," he says casually, "and another on the drawing boards..."

And, of course, he's got a casino devoted solely to bingo.

But gambling and casinos aren't the only interest in Sam Boyd's life. The wall of his plush office just off the Union Plaza's busy casino proves he's what his employes call him: "Just a decent human being."

One plaque honors him for his "outstanding contribution to the Youth of Clark County."

Another names him Man of the Year by the Henderson Rotary Club.

He is, still another plaque says, Honorary

The American Jewish Committee "pays tribute to a leader" in another memento on the wall.

There's another from the Nevada Safety Council and the Chamber of Commerce — and the list goes on.

The real Sam Boyd, however, is reflected in things scattered about his cluttered desk.

—A picture of his three grandchildren. Offspring of his only son, William, an attorney and vice president and chief operational officer of the Union Plaza and for two years a judge in Las Vegas.

—Gifts from some of the 21 nieces and nephews — including Justice of the Peace Bob Legakes — he's helped through college.

—No roulette wheel, but pennies from one, encased in a plastic ball.

—Four telephones and two clocks.

Although there is no clock in the world's largest casino, Sam Boyd likes to know what time it is.

And he likes to know a lot of other things —such as how the games are going, what entertainment can be brought into the casino showroom and when a high-roller is hot.

He's a kindly looking gent with a fanatical following of employes, at least one of whom thinks he is "the kindest, most generous man in the world."

But look again and you'll see the wary eyes of a pit boss and the game savvy of a man who parlayed his natural ability from a job on the Long Beach Pike to monarch of the Union Plaza. □

California congressmen at play

CRAIG HOSMER

DON EDWARDS

JEROME WALDIE

By GIL BAILEY

It was a spring weekend in the nation's capital and the men and women who represent the 435 individual districts which make up the House of Representatives were at home.

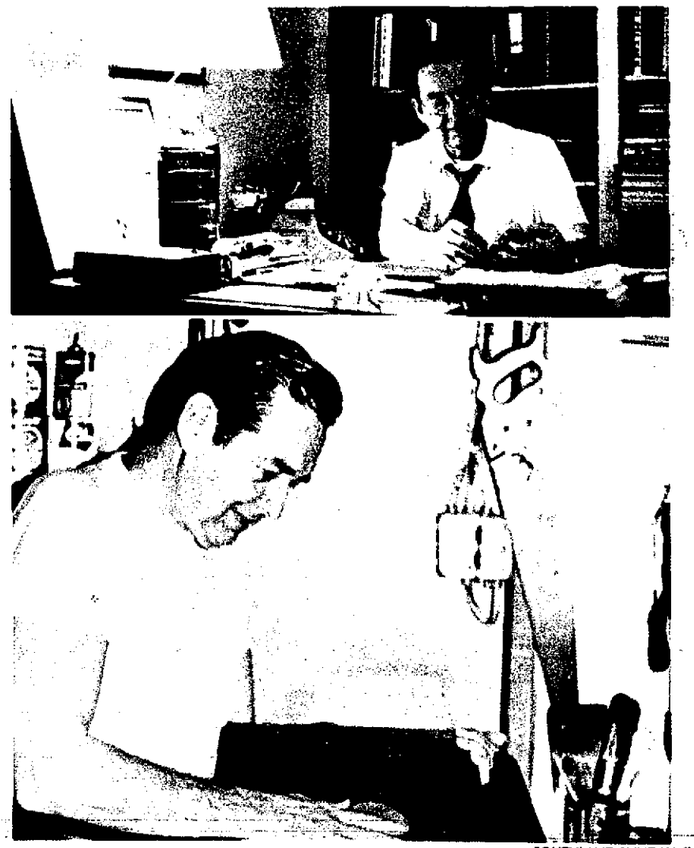

Life styles here differ and some of those differences are represented by three "honorable gentlemen" — their official titles on the House floor — from California.

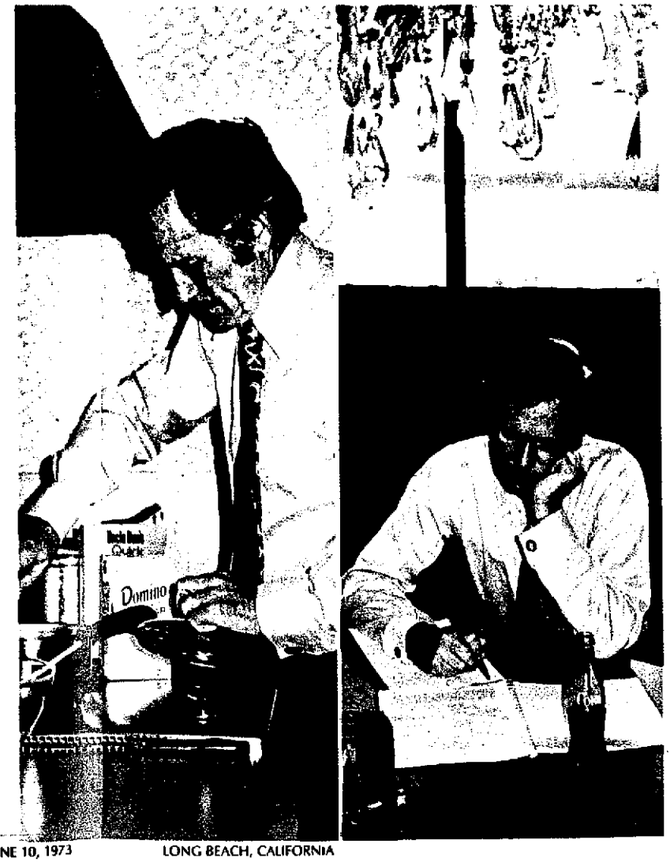

The senior congressman of this group is Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, a member of Congress for more than 20 years, who is well settled into Washington living and frequently commutes to his California district. He, and his wife Marian, live in a stately home just outside the District of Columbia.

Next in line is Rep. Don Edwards, D-San Jose, a bachelor, who has been in Congress a little more than 10 years. He too was once a suburbanite, but now after a divorce, lives in a one-bedroom apartment in the Watergate, which grew much more famous when one of its other residents, the Democratic National Committee, was bugged during last year's presidential campaign.

The third congressman, Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Antioch, is not settled in Washington and his commutes to California are scheduled almost every weekend as Waldie prepares to give up his congressional seat to run for governor of California in 1974.

Congressmen

Voting habits have little to do with congressmen's styles of living

These three congressmen are also far different men politically. Hosmer is a conservative Republican highly interested in the uses of atomic energy. Edwards is a liberal Democrat, one of the first men in Congress to oppose the Vietnam War, while Waldie, also a liberal, has specialized in investigating insurance rates — too high for government employes, Waldie discovered and he forced a rate reduction — and in reform of the House itself.

Waldie and Hosmer have had direct confrontations on at least one question — the California Water Project. Hosmer has carried legislation favoring Southern California water interests which Waldie has fought on behalf of his constituents in the San Joaquin Delta.

On this particular week, however, politics and water were of secondary interest.

Hosmer was at home, resting some from his congressional duties and from a recent minor heart attack. Much of the Long Beach Republican's work is done at home. An acknowledged expert in the field of atomic energy, Hosmer brings the reports and studies of the Atomic Energy Commission for study.

Hosmer's life in Washington is relatively a quiet one centering around office and home rather than the extensive social life present here. For relaxation he is much more likely to go to his carpenter's bench than to, say, the Kennedy Center, or one of the fancy French restaurants in Georgetown.

For Edwards in his bachelor digs overlooking the Potomac River dinner out is much more likely after a day in his congressional office. But as chairman of a House Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil Rights he, too, often brings his work home.

The Watergate, within a couple of miles of the capitol, is a convenient place to live offering easy access to Capitol Hill and to the Kennedy Center and Georgetown. It also has catering available for an occasional party.

On this weekend Edwards was preparing for hearings on employment practices of the federal government and whether those practices are as "equal" as the law calls for.

A former golf champion at Stanford University, Edwards watches his diet and combines it with frequent exercise. As a result he is possibly the trimmest member of the California delegation.

His weekend will include a fast game of tennis and a dinner and show along with some fairly heavy reading, including the English language edition of La Monde, a French newspaper, and a critical book on the Kennedy Administration's role in the Vietnam War.

Waldie on the other hand had by far the busiest weekend as he spent it at two ends of the nation. Friday he flew to California for some heavy politicking, returning Saturday night on a flight called "The Red Eye," which has nothing to do with the drinks served. The plane left California at 9 p.m. and arrived in Washington, D.C. at 6 a.m. Sunday.

A goodly portion of his day was spent in bed catching up on his sleep and the remainder was devoted to his family.

The Waldie house, crowded with two teen-aged sons, a flock of cats and dogs, and, of course, his wife, Joann, is much more like a typical California household than the more formal or social Washington existence.

For Waldie the time he can spend with his sons, Jon and Jeff, is precious. First on the agenda on this Sunday was a fast game of basketball in the home-built court. Then, a quiet evening at home with wife and sons.

When Monday came all three congressmen were on their way to vote on such diverse topics as the highway bill and aid to Cambodia, the weekend just a welcome memory.

Later there would be a White House reception with President Nixon for those congressmen who voted in favor of his veto of a spending bill. Hosmer would be present, but not Waldie and Edwards.

Life styles have little to do with voting habits. □

By FREDERICK JOHN

"She is one of the most amazing, puzzling, most provocative characters of this extraordinary age. She definitely doesn't belong in the 20th century. She doesn't even belong in this world." — Robert E. Sherwood.

It has been stated that if the beauteous Elizabeth Taylor, the magnificent Raquel Welch and a 67-year-old retired movie star named Garbo attended the same party, the latter actress would attract all the attention.

Greta Garbo ranks as one of the greatest movie actresses of all times. Only Bette Davis and Katherine Hepburn deserve pedestals beside her. Alas, time is catching up with both of them.

But Garbo is a different story. She is the eternal beauty. She has hidden from the camera's eye since 1941, when she made her last movie,

As a result, the public has seen only the magnificent female who hypnotized audiences years ago when she appeared on the silver screen.

Little is known of Greta Garbo, the retired actress who has nervously ducked the glare of the public spotlight for more than three decades. She leads a quiet but expensive life, mostly in New York City with side trips to Europe.

In recent years, she has seldom been photographed. For this reason, most of the time, she can walk the streets of New York unrecognized. She is no longer The Great Garbo of yesteryear. She is in her late 60s, and though the years have been kind to her, she is Camille no longer.

Be that as it may, to her millions of fans in all corners of the world, Garbo is still the eternal beauty they adore at film revivals and when her classics are shown on the late show. Indeed she is the eternal beauty. The years have not deprived her of her youth. She is as aloof, elusive, remote, enigmatic, moody, glamorous and wonderful as ever.

Thus, if Garbo did decide to make a film today, she would undoubtedly command a salary in the millions, and it would be a box office smash. And, if she ever decided to appear on television, she would probably be paid in the seven figures too.

Such is the magic of Garbo.

Greta Lovisa Gustafsson, the youngest daughter of Karl Gustafsson, an uneducated laborer, was born on Sept. 18, 1905 in Stockholm, Sweden. Her father was a tall, blond handsome man, and it is said the actress got her good looks from him.

She was a shy child and used to hide under the kitchen table when visitors dropped by the Gustafsson home. She adored Carl Bris-son, the famous Swedish singer, and had a crush on him when she was a teen-ager.

When Greta was 14, her father died, and she went to work in a barbershop as a lather girl. In Sweden back then, young girls were employed in barbershops to make the lather and pat it on the customer's face. They also put out fresh towels and cleaned razors.

"I was born," Garbo once summed up her early years, "and I grew up like everybody else. I didn't like to go to school."

In time, Greta quit her job as a lather girl and went to work in a department store. By then she was 16 and a true beauty, though slightly on the plump side. Legend has it that she became "stage struck" when she appeared in a Salvation Army benefit show. Another story is that she was discovered in the department store by a small time producer who was helping his wife pick out a hat.

When she was 17, she enrolled in dramatic school and appeared as a bathing beauty in a Mack Sennett-style two reeler made by a Stockholm director named Petchler. It was called Pete the Tramp.

Garbo was discovered by Swedish director Mauritz Stiller, who changed her name from Greta Gustafsson to Greta Garbo and made her famous with a silent film called The Saga of Gosta Berling, which was released in 1924.

At the time, Louis B. Mayer of Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer, was in Europe looking for talent. He hired Stiller and Garbo too, when 22 the director insisted she be given a contract. In this offhand manner, MGM acquired the talents of a woman who was to establish herself as one of the finest actresses in film history.

Garbo

The actress' first talkie was "Anna Christie" in 1930.

Stiller didn't last too long in Hollywood. His slow, easy going film techniques were too expensive for the Hollywood movie moguls. He soon returned to Europe. As for Garbo, she was a fantastic success. She became Hollywood's leading sex symbol. The sexy silents she starred in during the late 20s included a silent version of Anna Karenina called Love; The Divine Woman; The Mysterious Lady, and, of course, Flesh and the Devil.

Legend has it that Garbo and Gilbert almost married. In fact, they once reportedly eloped in a car, but on the way to the justice of the peace Garbo is supposed to have ducked into a gas station rest room to avoid marriage.

Along the way, Garbo had several serious romances, but never made it to the altar. In addition to Gilbert, her constant escorts included actor George Brent, director Rouben Mamoulian and conductor Leopold Stokowski.

Garbo, it should be noted, was 5 feet 7 and weighed about 127 pounds during her years as an actress. Her statistics are supposedly the same today. She was supposed to have large feet, but actually she wore 6 1/2 double A shoes with low heels.

In "Ninotchka" Garbo laughed for the first time on screen.

The actress hated interviews. She once said, "There are so many who love the publicity, who enjoy seeing their photographs in the papers and like to be quoted for publication, why can't the press concentrate on those people rather than one who hates it so?"

Nevertheless, she was an important star and the press kept demanding interviews with her. To combat this, MGM officials decided to capitalize on the Garbo shyness. They made a mystery woman out of her. Her sets were closed, and even important visitors were not allowed on the set when she was making a film. And the press was informed that the actress would no longer grant interviews.

"I vant to be alone," she was quoted as saying. The quote, of course, was a press agent's brainstorm, and it caught on. People are still repeating it even today.

In 1930, MGM proclaimed in billboard advertisements, Garbo Talks! And after 10 silent flickers she finally did. Her first words in Anna Christie, a talkie, were, "Bring me a whisky and soda."

Thirteen other marvelous talkies followed. They included Anna Karenina, Romance, Inspiration, Susan Lennox, Mata Hari, Grand Hotel, The Painted Veil and Conquest.

Camille, made in 1937, is probably the star's most famous movie. Robert Taylor embraced her and acted noble as his fading flower wilted away. And in the audience, housewives and schoolgirls wept, and husbands and schoolboys gulped a lot and pretended there wasn't a lump in their throats.

Without a doubt, Camille was Garbo's greatest film. She was nominated for the Oscar that year but failed to win it. In 1955, after she had retired, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awarded Garbo a special Oscar. She wasn't on hand to pick it up though. A messenger boy delivered it to her New York abode a couple of days later.

During the 30s, Garbo made frequent trips back home to Sweden and bought a considerable amount of property there. Once, in 1935, she almost stayed there. In fact, she remained a year. But Hollywood finally lured her back.

The Garbo legend grew. It was said she loved cats, and had a house full of them. That was an exaggeration.

It was said she demanded a fantastic salary and she did. She was paid in the six figures annually and was one of the highest paid persons in the United States. It was also said that, influenced by the poverty of her childhood, she hoarded money. But when a devoted fan died and left her $20,000, she gave it to charity.

It was said she secluded herself in her Hollywood mansion. The truth was she loved to attend plays and movies and enjoyed Christmas shopping with the populace. She once told a friend, "They do not notice me because I look just like other people."

Garbo

It was said she was brokenhearted over this, that, or the other lost love. But the truth of the matter is that it was Garbo who usually walked away from romance. She was the heartbreaker.

Then, in 1939 MGM proudly announced Garbo Laughs! The picture, of course, was the great comedy, Ninotchka, directed by the brilliant Ernst Lubitsch. It was a box office success and one of Garbo's most spectacular triumphs. In this film, by the way, she finally uttered the memorable line, "I vant to be alone." It was a comedy bit.

In 1941, two important things happened to Garbo. She made her final movie, a comedy with Melvyn Douglas called Two-Faced Woman. And she gave her final interview, during which she declared, "I don't like to talk to people because I can't express myself satisfactorily. I am misunderstood. I don't say the things I mean to say.

"This barrier to self-expression makes me keep to myself. Instead of having close associates, I prefer to walk alone on the beach. I like it when it rains because when I walk in the rain I am separated from the world."

Garbo lives in New York City — in the fashionable section, of course. If you know what she looks like these days, you can probably spot her shopping — in the best stores, of course.

When she leaves her townhouse, she peeks cautiously out the front door to make sure the coast is clear, or so it has been reported. If all is clear, she ducks out and gets away from the place as quickly as possible. If the coast isn't clear she remains in doors until it is.

IS INSTALLATION an important consideration in buying wall-to-wall carpeting for your home? You can bet it is. Doing it yourself just isn't practical to protect your carpet investment. Having it done right by experts benefits you in many ways. Our technicians use equipment you haven't even thought of — for instance, stretchers to pull the carpet tight at every point. This makes the carpet fit tightly and snugly, without bubbles or loose areas that look bad and can scuff or wear unnecessarily.

expert cutting and stretching also saves you money. It eliminates waste — important when you pay by the yard. Correct joining of different carpets in connecting rooms, or where rooms and hallways join, is another mark of the professionally installed broadloom.

The proper cutting and fitting of the right carpet pad, quality tackless striping, attractive metal edging where carpets join hard surface flooring — all of these come into the installment picture . . . so leave it to the experts.

We are carpet specialists, in every phase from display to decorative advice to flawless installation and service after the sale. Select your beautiful new broadloom with confidence, at

Merchants in the area do their best to preserve Garbo's privacy. Said a florist, "We see her often. She buys our flowers. We treat her like we treat anyone else. If that's the way she wants it, why not?"

Garbo is an American citizen. She spends a great deal of time in Europe though. She has been known to travel with Callas, Onassis and other jet setters. From time to time, she will be photographed long range swimming some place in France. Or a report will be published about the retired actress being ill. But, in general, reports about the great Garbo are vague, sketchy, and not very reliable.

She still loves plays and movies, but is

Fresh fruit, air and art museums reportedly upset by what they are showing at the cinemas these days.

When in public, she wears sunglasses. Also a hat usually yanked down over her eyes, flat shoes and a shawl or cape.

She loves fresh fruit when it is in season. Also art museums and fresh air. She enjoys long walks, regardless of the weather.

She reportedly wakes at 8 a.m. every day but never leaves home until noon. She reads during the morning hours — usually popular novels recommended by friends.

During the afternoon, she takes her walks and visits shops close to home. Also she calls on friends. They rarely visit her. If she goes to a film, it is during the afternoon.

At night, she will attend private parties, plays and concerts. She watches television too. Garbo goes to bed before midnight most nights.

From time to time, there are rumors that she is coming out of retirement. Not all of these rumors are true.

Years ago, the late Jean Cocteau wanted to make a film with her. They almost did. Aristotle Onassis offered to finance Garbo's own film company in any movie she wanted to make. She never accepted the offer.

In 1972, there was an announcement Garbo was going to make a film for one of those Italian directorial geniuses. Happily, she didn't.

In 1947, the actress almost came out of retirement. Sir Alexander Korda announced she would play the lead role of George Sand. But Garbo backed off.

Two years later, Greta Garbo "as beautiful as ever from push-ups and raw carrots," — the actress favors vegetables, it should be noted — almost made a comeback in a film called The Duchess of Langeair based on a story by Balzac. James Mason was supposed to be her co-star.

Alas, producer Walter Wanger lost a lot of money on a spectacular called Joan of Arc, and plans for the Garbo movie had to be cancelled.

Will Garbo ever make another movie? Probably not!

She once said, "I would like to have two faces — one face for pictures and the public and another for my private life."

The Great Garbo, it is apparent, has chosen to have a private face.

The world has never seen it. And probably never will. □

Telephony names

How to put a little life into a boring list of names . . .

By GLENN LEIBOWITZ

If General Telephone's midcities directory for October 1973 is anything like this year's counterpart, it's a sure bestseller. The October 1972 edition is Loving, Wild, Sexy and Fast — and lists only one Virgin.

But Loyd and Vernice Loving, Cindy and Klaus Wild, Clifford Sexy, William Fast and Howard Virgin are not Unique (Robert).

Few people are ever Shook (Alan, Ed, Glen, John, Lottie, Ruth and Thomas) by the telephone Book (Morris, Robert and Ronald). It's Hard (W.B.) to Consider (Paul) it much More (Arthur, Don, May Virginia and Wilfred) than a Quick (Bruce, Erma, Ernest, Eugene, George, James and Leonard) Way (Floyd, Karen, Kenneth, Lessa, Paul, Richard, Ronald and Vincent) to find a Persons (Jack, Jeff, Page and William) number.

Still (Arthur, Frances, James, Janet, Jimmy and Joseph), like the personality of the phone company, its mammoth List (Albert, Aldegundo, Gene, Marie and Richard) of subscribers' whereabouts has its peculiarities.

The telephone company likes to promote this 656-page tome as a "social register" that allows subscribers to list names in its pages so "You (Pat) can forget about somebody else's 'Who's Who.'". That May (Alex to William) Sound (Masters) Toogood (Jerald and Theodore) to be True (Dennis, Donald, Harry and Norman), but it is.

The telephone book itself may appear Boring (Charles, Daniel, Earl, Buy, Robert, Roy and William), even Droll (Ray), but that is Hardley (Marvin) the Case (Arline, Carrol, Charles, David, Erwin, Gerald, Glenn, Herb, Howard, James, John, Levi, Marvin, Melba, Pamela, Robert, Roy, Thomas, Virgil and William).

While the book is far from Witty (James), it is a Pleasant (George) Service (Claudia and Vernon) that can bring Hope (Billy, Delbert, Gary, Johnnie, Max and Robert) to those who easily Forget (Norman), if it hasn't yet been taken from the Booth (Alvin, Anna, Bess, Dorothy, J. Wesley, J. Wood, James, Lewis, Lonzetta, Lucille, Robert, Villate and William).

Still, no one can Pass (Anna and William) by the telephone book and not Point (Charles) a Finger (Ernest and John) of Pride (Hilary, Jim, LeEtta and Sydney) to its Rock (Charles to William) solid Style (Beverly, Florence and Norman).

Most Will (Allen) agree the book Helpes (William) Foster Alan to Willie) Goodwill (Industries). It would be hard to See (Curtis, Edward, Kathleen and Ralph) the Forest (Guy) for the Trees (Lamar) without it.

Amend (Bertha). □

GOURMET

by Tedd Thomey

Let your mind drift back to yesteryear. Remember those big Sunday dinners at home? Remember how your mother, aided perhaps by her daughters and sisters, brought forth dish after dish of tempting, wholesome things to eat?

Now let me introduce you to Mrs. Ivalou Jones. Aided by members of her family and a staff of friendly waitresses and cooks, she will bring you one of those bountiful Sunday dinners of yesteryear, served in a restaurant atmosphere which is as comfortable and congenial as your home.

For over 40 years Mrs. Jones and her husband, Harold A. Sr., have been serving such dinners (and luncheons too) on Fifth Street in downtown Long Beach between Pine and Locust Avenues. If you dine in the large Jones Cafeteria, which has seating for scores, you can enjoy one of those many-dish dinners for $1.85 to $2.75, including soup or a superb fresh salad, two hot vegetables, hot muffin or roll, beverage and fancy dessert of pie or cake from the restaurant's own bakery.

If you dine in Jones Dining Room next door, you can enjoy a spectacular feast which starts with a big tray of crisp relishes followed by a delectable shrimp cocktail, frosted fruit cup or soup of the day. Next comes the salad, chosen from many varieties presented on a tray by your waitress. The entrees range from chicken-fried steak with country gravy and roast leg of lamb to pork tenderloin, baked ham, prime rib of beef au jus, roast turkey and seven delightful sea food choices, $3.60 to $4.70, with most under $4. Also included are assorted rolls and breads, beverage and a dessert selection. That dinner is served every night.

If you're in the mood for a smaller dinner at a lower price, both restaurants can accommodate you nicely. Open daily for luncheon and dinner, the cafeteria operates Sundays from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. while the dining room is open Sundays from noon to 8. Both are closed Saturdays.

Lots of free parking is available on a lot and garage behind the restaurants, entered from Locust Avenue.

GUIDE

IS A SUBMARINE sandwich something for gourmets?

Certainly, if it's prepared with tender loving care and the finest, most costly ingredients, the way the submarine sandwiches are created at Mike's Munchies, 1034 Long Beach Blvd., across from Von's supermarket.

Closed Sundays, Mike's Munchies is a submarine sandwich and beer restaurant open the rest of the time from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Fridays until 7 p.m. It's owned by youthful Mike Kyle and his bride of a few months, lovely Julianne. It's an immaculate, cheerful place with tables as well as a counter, decorated in bright blue, cocoa brown and rustic cedar wood.

Featured every day at Mike's Munchies is a wonderful ham and cheese submarine sandwich and a huge 15-ounce glass of Busch Bavarian tap beer, $1 for both. Mike and Juliane buy custom-baked long, fresh rolls from a Julianne special bakery. Into that submarine-style roll they put a variety of the most delicious items, such as Farmer John ham, Kraft cheese, Farmer John salami, fresh tomatoes, onions, pickles, Italian peppers, Italian olives and their special house dressing.

Mike's submarines, also called munchies, come in two sizes, $1 and $1.50, except for the ham-cheese combination, 90 cents and $1.25. The variety includes the beef munchie (made with prime beef), the tuna munchie, the ham-and-beef munchie, the vegetarian munchie (no meat) and the pepper steak munchie. The pepper steak model is the restaurant's only hot sandwich, including tender, aged chunks of prime beef sirloin with a mildly spicy sauce, onions, cheese, pickles and olives.

Mike's Munchies also serves superb pickled eggs, 15 cents; potato salad, chef's salad, coffee, soft drinks and draft beer, 25 cents and 35 cents a glass. A pitcher of Busch is 95 cents; a pitcher of Michelob is $1.25.

A new occupational hazard may be on the horizon: cheesewasher's disease.

The disorder is characterized by cough, shortness of breath and fever caused by lung inflammation.

The ailment was first described in Europe and was found to be caused by inhalation of dust of a fungus.

Cheesewashers are required to wash off the mold that develops on cheese in the humid, cool climate of the cellar.

During this task, clouds of dust of the fungus Penicillium casei fill the air and are inhaled by the workers.

So far no cases of cheesewasher's disease have been reported in the United States. Dr. Donald P. Schlueter, Milwaukee, of the Medical College of Wisconsin, says several factors may account for this.

First, most cheese produced in this country is wrapped in foil or plastic film before entering the aging room, thus preventing surface-mold formation.

Second, the aging rooms have carefully controlled temperature and humidity in contrast to European aging cellars.

Even so, methods of processing vary in different areas, particularly in smaller processing plants. Consequently Dr. Schlueter thinks the possibility of an allergic type of pneumonia exists.

He notes, too, that the United States is the largest producer of cheese in the world, with more than 900 million pounds produced annually.

An awareness of cheesewasher's disease may ultimately lead to reports of its occurrence in this country, he says in a report in Annals of Internal Medicine.

Preliminary trials are encouraging for a vaccine for Chagas' disease, a parasitic disorder that is a primary cause of heart disease in the rural areas of South America.

The disorder, for which there is no specific treatment at present, has infected about seven million persons, most of them in childhood, according to the World Health Organization.

The majority survive the acute stage, but after several years about one-tenth of them show heart or gastrointestinal disease.

After 15 years of research, Brazilian medical researchers have developed a vaccine, developed from a strain of the causative agent, Trypanosoma cruzi, a parasite transmitted by insects.

Human volunteers have been given under-the-skin injections of the vaccine. So far, the vaccine appears to be affording significant protection against infection, according to a report in Medical Tribune, a newspaper for doctors.

A 10-power glass has enabled a foot specialist to solve the mystery of foot pain in a patient.

Dr. Marvin D. Steinberg, clinical professor at the New York College of Podiatric Medicine, tells of a school teacher who was almost totally disabled because of her inability to walk.

The woman was also emotionally disturbed because of various incorrect diagnoses.

With the aid of the magnifying glass, the podiatrist determined that the trouble was a foreign-body granuloma (growth) due to the presence of dog hair on the bottom of the foot.

The patient disclosed she owned a pet wirehaired terrier and that she liked to walk barefoot around the house.

Using a local anesthetic the doctor scraped the base of the sore and cauterized it with phenol. In a few days the foot had healed completely.

Dr. Steinberg, in a report in a podiatry journal, says he has seen three patients with similar trouble since the original case.

A two-week stay in the hospital can confer as much benefit on a patient with an uncomplicated heart attack as a conventional three-week hospital stay.

That's the finding from a study at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Dr. Adolph M. Hutter Jr., reporting the study to a meeting of the American Heart Association, emphasized that the study dealt only with patients with uncomplicated disease. Patients with complications require longer periods of rest.

Details of the study appear in Chronic Disease Management, a newspaper for physicians.

More than 500 Americans are estimated to be dying each year from carbon monoxide poisoning in vehicles that are defective due to deterioration, damage or poor automotive design.

Researchers have projected the 500 possible deaths a year by examining records for 68 deaths in Maryland involving carbon monoxide poisoning inside a vehicle.

Q. Is there any estimate what the Watergate mess is costing us in taxes to support the many investigations, special committees and selection of magistrates to hear the case?—Lt. Col. James L. Smith (ret.), Myrtle Beach, S.C.

A. Best estimate is $2 million and rising, according to Capitol Hill and administration sources. Included are salaries for Senate Committee staff, FBI agents, prosecutors, judges and grand jurors, plus office expenses, transcripts and transportation.

BOB HOPE KISSES WIFE AFTER HE RECEIVED HONORARY DEGREE FROM GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY.

Q. I have been told that comedian Bob Hope is a functional illiterate who has more honorary university degrees than any other American. Is this a fact?—Robert Porter, Knightsbridge, London.

A. Hope is not a particularly literate man. He rarely has time to read a book. But he is not a functional illiterate. He has collected about 25 honorary college degrees, but he doesn't take them too seriously. He knows what he knows and doesn't.

Q. Who is Margaret Whitlam? I understand she is notorious in Australia.—L.P. Wyatt, Portland, Oreg.

A. Margaret Whitlam, 53, is the wife of Australia's Prime Minister, Gough Whitlam, 56. He is 6 feet 4; she is 6 feet 2, and a former Australian breaststroke swimming champion. Margaret Whitlam writes a weekly newspaper column, is a trained social worker, speaks her own mind, has been married to the same husband for 30 years. She is frank, down to earth, and liberal, but notorious—no.

BARBARA MCNAIR AND HER HUSBAND RICK MANZIE

Q. Was singer Barbara McNair ever convicted of possessing heroin?—L. E. Trombley, Newark, N. J.

A. Charges of possessing heroin have been dropped against the singer, but her husband-manager, Rick Manzie, 32, has been indicted on charges of "attempting to possess a heroin compound," a most puzzling indictment.

Q. Who invented paperback books?—P. A., Chicago, Ill.

A. The late Allen Lane of Britain's Penguin Books, who launched the "paperback revolution" in 1935. After World War II it spread to the U.S. where paperbacks now account for $229,000,000 in annual sales at the wholesale level.

Q. If Adolf Hitler had lived, how old would he be today?—Doris Glicksman, Bayshore, N.Y.

A. Hitler was born on April 20, 1889.

BARBARA HOWAR

HENRY KISSINGER

Q. Would you please reveal the name of the girl who secretly dyes the gray out of Henry Kissinger's hair. Isn't she Barbara Howar?—Antoinette Warren, Oakland, Calif.

A. Barbara Howar has never taken the gray out of Henry Kissinger's hair. In fact, the opposite may be the case. In any event, Barbara, author of Laughing All the Way, is a Kissinger love of yesteryear who is now devoting some of herself to Willie Morris, author of The Last of the Southern Girls.

Q. Now that Pablo Picasso is dead, who takes over as the world's foremost painter?—Angela Bowers, Germantown, Pa.

A. Some possibilities: Marc Chagall, 85; Andre Dunoyer de Segonzac, 89; Joan Miro, 80; Max Ernst, 82.

Q. If Spiro Agnew is ever elected President of the U.S., is it true that he will appoint Frank Sinatra head of the FBI because Frank knows so much about hoods and hoodlums?—Ray King, Newark, N.J.

A. No chance.

Q. I just read a book about Winston Churchill. I know he died in 1965, but is his wife Clementine still living? If so, what is her age.—Jean Koch, Cinnaminson, N.J.

A. Clementine Churchill, 88, lives in London.

Q. I would like to know the name of Tiny Tim's son. Is it Tulip? Is the poor child actually called Tulip Tim?—Benita Greene, Santa Barbara, Calif.

A. Tiny Tim and his wife, the former Victoria Budinger, were married in December, 1969, now have a 2-year-old daughter named Tulip. Tiny Tim's real name is Herbert Khaury. His child's name is Tulip Khaury. Tiny Tim and his wife last year were reconciled after contemplating a divorce.

Whatever Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai may think of Watergate, the leaders of the People's Republic of China are not talking. No change is seen, however, in basic policy with the U.S.

David Bruce, special envoy to the People's Republic, may sound out Mao and Chou on visiting the United States. Henry Kissinger remains an important link between the two countries.

Watergate: The View From China

by Lloyd Shearer

PEKING.

What effect has the infamous Watergate scandal had upon U.S.-Chinese relations?

What do Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai, the venerated leaders of the People's Republic of China, think of the Nixon Administration now?

No one knows, of course, because neither of these elder statesmen is speaking. But the day-to-day developments of the sordid, reputation-destroying mess have been reported here in the daily news bulletin, "News From Foreign Agencies and Press," distributed by the Hsinhua News Agency throughout China.

The latest dirt

Moreover, anyone who has a short-wave radio receiver—and this includes every embassy, hotel, and almost every foreign journalist in Peking—tunes in the morning and nightly news, broadcast by the BBC (British Broadcasting Corp.) and the Voice of America specifically to obtain the latest Watergate dirt.

One result is that the Chinese currently refer to Watergate as the "Suei-men Scandal."

Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, whose summit talks in the U.S. are slated June 18-26. China, of course, will be watching and hoping that he stumbles.

"Suei" means water in Chinese, and "men" means gate.

The Chinese are a traditionally polite and circumspect people. When PARADE asked many Chinese officials their personal opinions on Watergate, most of them smiled and replied gently with a variation of, "We do not concern ourselves with the internal affairs of other nations."

Nixon's purge

One Peking source, however, when persistently pressed for his reaction, reluctantly explained his views. "Nixon has had to purge his politburo," he said, "of such men as Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell, and others. I gather these were not particularly popular or elected officials to begin with. In other governments these purges go on all the time, and we are accustomed to them. But for this to happen in the United States Government—it is to say the least, most unusual.

"I do not believe," he continued, "that Watergate will change the basic policy of friendship and amity our two nations have embarked upon. Even if a great calamity should befall the American President—perhaps even the destruction of his credibility—there is still Henry Kissinger to maintain the continuity of the relationship begun by our two countries in February, 1972. And even if Kissinger should depart, one must remember that nations are more enduring than the men who rule or represent them.

"Chairman Mao and Premier Chou did not enter into an agreement with Richard Nixon but with the United States of America. And that is why your special envoy, Mr. David Bruce, is here in Peking in charge of the U.S. liaison mission."

Diversionary tactic?

On embassy row in the Chinese capital, rumors were generated that Bruce, the first U.S. diplomat of near-ambassadorial rank assigned to the People's Republic of China since the Communist takeover in 1949, would eventually sound out the Chinese on the possibility of Mao Tse-tung or Chou En-lai visiting the United States.

Such a move, one European diplomat pointed out, would serve as a diversionary tactic, would in effect change the focus of American interest from Watergate to foreign affairs.

Although the U.S.-China relationship has now reached the honeymoon stage, the Chinese are far too clever to let themselves be used so overtly. Peking is not about to help Richard Nixon remove his burned chestnuts from the fires of Watergate.

Peking is perfectly content to let its arch enemy, the Soviet Union, involve itself in that highly perilous mission. Let Leonid Brezhnev, General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, visit the United States and tie his foreign policy to Richard Nixon. Let him make speeches in Washington about the dawning of a new era of peace. But not Chairman Mao or Premier Chou.

Recall Khrushchev

Both of them well know what happened to another Soviet leader, Nikita Khrushchev, in 1959, when at the height of his popularity, he visited President Eisenhower and contributed to what was subsequently called "The Spirit of Camp David."

Gary Powers and the CIA-sponsored U-2 flight over the Soviet Union took care of Khrushchev's popularity with the Soviet military leaders. And he was reduced to a non-person.

Brezhnev, whose visit is due June 18-26, may prove far more adroit than Khrushchev in protecting his flanks, both on the Soviet home front and the Eastern European bloc. But in China the hope is widespread that he will fall flat on his face and somehow get splattered with the Watergate mud.

The shortwave radios in Peking are tuned in hopefully to the possible sound of such splatter.

Introducing the best thing that ever happened to dry dog food.

New Recipe Mixing Chunks. As far as we know, it's the first and only product made especially for mixing with dry dog food. In fact, we don't suggest that you serve it any other way. (Dogs do need more than meat.)

When you open your first can you'll see why it's so perfect for mixing! Each is chuck full of nutritious meat or chicken chunks, cooked in a special gravy.

It's a great way to turn that dry dog food your dog's been eating into a mouth-watering dinner.

Mixing Chunks varieties look and smell as appetizing as our completely balanced Recipe brand dinners, too!

How much you mix each day depends largely on how much dry dog food your dog eats. (In some cases, we've found that half a can or less will be plenty.)

But no matter how much you serve, one thing's for sure–your dog will be glad you did!

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

EDITED by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

HANOI'S TIES TO THE WEST For 18 months the North Vietnamese have had a five-man, low-profile trade mission in Singapore. In an interview with Singapore's "Straits Times," Do Trong Luong, chief of the North Vietnamese National Import-Export Corporation, recently said, "Hanoi may float loans in Singapore" while using the city to its full advantage as an international money market.

Hanoi knows it cannot reconstruct its country without external assistance, so it's unabashedly soliciting trade and commercial loan agreements on the condition the deals come "with no strings attached." American businessmen have been told they will be treated "without prejudice."

The more private deals Hanoi can record with the West, the stronger its negotiating position will be. One American observer remarks: "If Chase Manhattan has its money in a North Vietnamese steel mill, it's not going to take kindly to the Air Force blowing it up."

Outside financial interests will not enter the Vietnamese reconstruction arena until there is solid evidence Hanoi has the capacity to repay any loans. Hanoi will probably turn to China and the Soviet Union for assistance in repairing roads, railways, waterways and basic industries such as the steel mill at Thai Nguyen, the cement factory at Haiphong and machine tool factories outside Hanoi.

Undoubtedly, foreign money men would prefer to reconstruct the Campha anthracite coal mine near Hon Gay, the Haiphong fish cannery or the textile mills at Nam Dinh, rather than rebuild roads.

UP GO THE HEMLINES Just when veteran girl-watchers had come to accept the untimely demise of hotpants as a fact of life, up pop hemlines once again --this time in the form of short shorts.

This summer's fashion keynote is a throwback to the Fifties: very short, slightly flared pants that are usually cuffed to accentuate the lengthy expanse of leg. While not quite as daring, or as blatantly sexy, as the miniscule hotpants were, this new style is quite attractive--and isn't limited to underweight, underage figures.

Says one designer: "The short short is good news: it's kicky, comfortable and great for tennis and other sports--and doesn't have the sort of 'bad girl' stigma of hotpants."

Adds one girl-watcher: "Bravo!"

INVENTIONS Are we able to transform new ideas into successful products more quickly now thanks to recent technological advances?

Not according to a study by the Battelle Columbus Laboratories. In a report to the National Science Foundation, the lab suggests "from the small sample of innovations studied, there is no evidence that the time period from conception to realization is becoming shorter."

"In fact," the report adds, "two of the more recent innovations [input-output economic analysis and the heart pacemaker] involve the longest time spans."

Stressed throughout the report, which examined 10 innovations, is the importance of the "technical entrepreneur" who "in three innovations [electrophotography, video tape and the heart pacemaker] persisted in the face of the inhibiting effect of an unfavorable market analysis."

"If any suggestion were to be made," the study recommends, "as to what should be done to promote innovation, it would be to find--if one can!--technical entrepreneurs."

SEX EDUCATION The records of 16,244 women who sought abortions through the British Pregnancy Advisory Service in 1971 are now available, and they indicate a high degree of ignorance of the basic rules of the mating game.

The statistics disclose that more than half of the single women had received no sex education whatever, either at home or at school. And those who did possess some sexual knowledge obtained it at school rather than home, by a five to three ratio.

INVISIBLE DANGER A recent investigation by England's Civil Aviation Authority shows that at least 60 times last year small airplanes were adversely affected by the wakes of larger ones near London's Heathrow Airport. Happily, there were no accidents.

The authority report suggests that the dangers of wake turbulence may have been underestimated. The most lethal parts of a large aircraft's wake are the twin corkscrew-like vortices which trail from the wingtips.

To investigate these whirlpools of air, Dr. Norman Chigier of Sheffield University in England took an experimental flight in a small executive Learjet. At 12,000 feet, he purposely flew into the vortex coming from a Convair 990, which was flying five miles ahead of him. The Convair is less than half as large as a "jumbo jet" like the 747 or the DC-10.

"It was as though somebody had suddenly grabbed hold of the wings and twisted violently. Although I was strapped into the co-pilot's seat, my head hit the roof of the cockpit. The pilot completely lost control of the aircraft. We were thrown out of the vortex quite quickly but in a few seconds we were in the other one, and the same thing happened all over again."

At 12,000 feet, he added, a pilot has plenty of altitude to regain control. But at landing altitudes, such buffeting could be fatal.

Research has shown that the vortices can be detected as much as 15 miles behind the jumbo jets--747, DC-10 and L-1011 aircraft--and that they may persist for several minutes. They can be blown by the wind, so that a vortex produced by an aircraft on one runway can drift on to another runway nearby.

BLACK NEWSPAPERS There has always been a place in American journalism for the small newspaper which reports the news of special interest groups in a city. One of those groups which has developed a thriving press is the black community which has fostered 208 newspapers, most of them weeklies.

All but two are owned primarily by blacks, and of the 2324 employees of the papers, about 10 percent are white; 116 of the papers have no white employees, according to a recent survey done at Harvard University. Black dailies are published in New York City, Columbus, Ga., Chicago and Atlanta, the study said.

With a total circulation of 4.1 million, the papers appear to have a rosy future thanks to the continued growth of the suburban special interest press, which reports local news but leaves big, national stories to the major dailies.

IN TIME OF NEED Helpless victims who are bleeding are less likely to receive assistance than those who are not bleeding. That's the conclusion of a recent study by J. A. and I. M. Piliavin reported in the "Journal of Personality and Social Psychology." The researchers recruited student volunteers to "faint" in a Philadelphia subway car. In some cases the students produced a trickle of "blood" from their mouths. Other times they did not. In 20 episodes, the bleeding volunteers received direct help only 13 times. Indirect help--leaving the car to summon assistance--was proffered three times. On the other hand, the volunteers who "fainted" without bleeding were helped on every occasion but one.

In further experiments, the researchers discovered that the presence of someone in the car dressed in a white coat such as those doctors wear slowed the reactions of other potential good samaritans. The authors call this reaction a "diffusion of responsibility," meaning that those who stood by felt someone better qualified to help was present. However, the presence of a priest had no similar effect.

MARLON BRANDO IN 'THE GODFATHER': BIGGEST ONE-YEAR BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION EVER.

THE MONEY-MAKERS The movie business was better than ever in 1972. No fewer than 77 films each grossed over $1 million, and four grossed over $10 million apiece. Overall, a total box office gross was racked up of about $1.2 billion--17 percent over 1971.

Big winner was Paramount's "The Godfather," which all by itself took in $43,170,087 at the gate--breaking all previous records and establishing itself as the all-time one-year grosser. By comparison, United Artists' "Fiddler on the Roof," in the No. 2 slot, brought in a piddling $13,714,068.

Not everybody in the industry shared the wealth--in fact, of 1678 movies tabulated by "Variety," the entertainment weekly, the first 25 grabbed off nearly 50 percent of the business. Here are the top 25, together with their grosses:

What's Right and Wrong With American Housing

by Carl Norcross

With consumer groups and environmentalists getting stronger by the hour, this seems to be a good time to ask some basic questions about American housing. How good is it? What's right and what's wrong?

What follows is based on 10 years of interviews of homeowners and apartment dwellers in 20 states, and on a recently-completed one-year study of 1800 residents of townhouses and condominiums.

WHAT'S RIGHT?

● Housing is available. That's more than can be said about housing in most foreign countries, where many people can't find a new house at all and where others may wait five years for an apartment. In most cities in the United States there is a fairly wide choice in housing types. In a recent issue of The Washington Post there were advertisements for 89 developments. In the Miami Herald there were 120 ads, about two-thirds of them for condominiums. Los Angeles and San Diego newspapers regularly carry ads for from 30 to 50 developments. However, there are few new single-family homes anywhere for less than $35,000 or condominiums for less than $20,000. In some cities there are few houses on the market, either new or old. Generally, the apartment market is better. Vacancies in many places are from 10 to 20 percent, which means it's a buyer's market.

Carl Norcross has studied American housing as an editor and more recently as an independent consultant.

The darker side of the housing picture: A migrant worker's shack in California.

● This is the only country in the world (except Canada) with a large group of men whose business it is to build houses and apartments. Since 1960 alone, these 100,000 free-enterprise contractors have built over 20 million houses and apartment units. Elsewhere, governments, cooperatives or quasi-government organizations do most of the building. A prospective buyer must take what they want to give him.

● Homes are easy to buy, easy to finance. Down payments may be as low as 5 or 10 percent. Builders usually arrange a long-term mortgage. Abroad, buyers must save, perhaps for years, to pay one-third or one-half down. Mortgage money often costs twice as much in interest rates.

● U.S. housing is the envy of the world. Even rich families in many foreign countries don't have the luxury in kitchens, bathrooms, family rooms and the general comfort that middle-income families have here. To appreciate housing here, despite its faults, one needs to go abroad to see that American housing has its merits.

Better planning

● In the better developments neighborhood planning has improved. There are more curving streets, more open space, more trees saved from bulldozers, a better environment and more recreation facilities.

● Builders, despite criticism to the contrary, generally charge reasonable prices. High prices aren't a builder's fault. He has to buy everything. Then he assembles all the components, equipment and appliances. Like the supermarket manager, he must pass on price increases. Building costs have suffered from inflation, like everything else. Last year in England the cost of new houses rose 47 percent, old homes 40 percent. New housing prices here go up from 12 to 25 percent a year, old houses up to 40 percent.

WHAT'S WRONG?

● Construction and quality are worse than ever.

"New houses are worse than ten years ago. Quality of materials and products is worse. Labor is worse." Who says so? A man of authority in home building, a past president of the National Association of Home Builders, whose 70,000 members build most of the nation's homes. He agreed to talk frankly, but asked not to be identified by name.

"Manufacturers won't stand behind their products as they used to," he told me. "I'm prouder of the houses I built ten years ago. Complaints then were nothing to what they are now."

Builders everywhere complain about the lack of skill and the poor work habits of the men they get now. "We're down to the dregs," one builder said, "and even the whiskey and gin heads are working. That's true in all crafts."

FREE AS A CHILD

Little girls and older ones alike love the beach. And don't you envy a child's freedom to romp and splash to her heart's content?

You too can be that free every day of the month with Tampax tampons to protect you while you swim.

Yes, swim—because Tampax tampons are worn internally. You're free to do everything old-fashioned pads make impossible. To be casually comfortable in anything you wear. To swim any day at all. To enjoy summer without ever worrying about menstrual odor.

Tampax tampons come in three absorbencies, so one is sure to fit your needs. And they're economical—they come in packages of 10's and 40's, not 8's and 30's like some other tampons.

Come on—the freedom of little girls is yours!

Poor construction was the leading complaint by 1800 townhouse and condominium owners in a survey by this writer. About a quarter of all residents complained about one or more construction features: leaky basements, shoddy workmanship, walls out of plumb, doors and windows that didn't work, thin party walls that let neighbors' noises come through, and faulty equipment and appliances. Many buyers expect to find some "bugs" in a new house, and they would accept them temporarily if the builder would fix them. But they get angry after weeks of writing and phoning builders.

● Some builders cheat and defraud their buyers. And big builders often have lower moral standards than small builders. In Chicago, two giant builders have begun buying back houses from angry consumers, rather than face them in court.

When business is good for builders it is often bad for home buyers, as builders are indifferent to complaints. In Rockville, Md., a 29-year old economist bought a $35,000 townhouse. The builder promised several times that the house would be ready on a certain morning. But when the economist arrived with his wife, their 19-months-old baby and a furniture van, the interior was less than half finished. "We walked in and nearly fainted," he says. "There was no heat, no plumbing, toilets had been used by a dozen workmen and couldn't be flushed, half the drywall was not on, and much of the interior was not painted. Appliances were missing. Dirt was everywhere. The next day it rained—right through the living room ceiling." Despite continual protests, it took the family over three months to get a livable house, and they had to do much of the work themselves. Some neighbors, they say, had even worse troubles.

Even the most modest American homes have kitchens and bathrooms that are considered luxurious by foreign standards.

In the new offices of consumer affairs in Fairfax County, Va., and Montgomery County, Md., two of the capital region's most affluent counties, complaints about builders are pouring in—second in number only to complaints about automobiles. "We have one or more complaints about half the builders in the county," says Robert Shapiro of Montgomery County.

● Many salesmen over-sell a project—some tell outright lies. At one highly successful California project (from the builder's viewpoint), one woman wrote. "Salesmen here promised anything to make a sale. They lied to us about a park, about tennis courts, about the number of swimming pools and other things." And a Virginian said, "Salesmen were not truthful about taxes, monthly assessments and other charges. All are higher than were promised." Salesmen often do not accurately reveal how much condominium dues and assessments will be.

Lack of ability

● You have to have a license to be a plumber, pharmacist, engineer or doctor. But in many states anyone can be a builder. Thousands of builders were bricklayers or came up through other trades, or drifted into home building. Many do not have the technical background for good workmanship. Nor do they have aesthetic sensitivity.

● House designs are frequently dull. Some builders are using stock plans and exteriors that were used 30 years ago, despite enormous improvements in plans and styling in the last three

ANCIENT DYNASTY PANELS...

Masterfully reproduced as full-color decorator lithographs for only $3.00 the set of 4 (Publishers list price, $20.00)

Wallace Brown has taken one giant step forward for all mankind—and womankind—who wish to decorate their homes or offices with taste and distinction, but frankly have been unable to pay high art-gallery prices.

Our exquisite Ancient Dynasty lithographs faithfully reproduce all the delicacy and subtle colorations of the hand-painted museum originals, yet are priced so low everyone can afford them!

As you look at these regal panels, can you, too, hear birds singing in an emperor's garden? Do you feel the fierce cold of the towering snow-capped mountains—or are you experiencing the brilliant illusion, the artistic triumph that caused these paintings to survive the centuries?

Each panel is lithographed in full color in commanding decorator size (two are 30" by 11¾" and two are 29" by 8⅜"). You may hang, frame or adhere them directly to the wall individually, in pairs...or, for spectacular mural, display all four together.

Orders shipped promptly. Buy without risk—money cheerfully refunded (including postage and any sales tax paid) if you are not proud of your private art gallery.

ORDERS ALSO ACCEPTED FROM MILLIONAIRES.

decades. Even in large developments, designs are monotonous. Architects who might improve designs often refuse to work with builders, complaining that builders won't pay reasonable fees and are often slow to pay. Architects can make more money more easily designing larger buildings.

- Buyers are also at fault, buying homes on an emotional basis, not on facts and logic. Because they don't know good from bad, they often buy the bad developments before they buy the good ones. They buy on price, and many won't pay for better quality. Most pay little attention to construction. In the long run, many honest builders are convinced that quality doesn't pay.
- Housing could be improved overnight if the most powerful men in housing would put the pressure on. These are the men behind the scenes—the mortgage lenders. Behind every bad project and poorly-built house stands a savings & loan, an insurance company or another lending institution. If they would say, "No more bad jobs accepted here," the bad builders would improve or go out of business.
- Through research the aircraft industry has progressed from the small DC-3's to today's jumbo jets. Housing is still in the DC-3 stage. The government has spent billions on aviation research and $24 billion to put a man on the moon. Yet it spends almost nothing on basic housing research. A fraction of these sums wisely spent on housing could provide a true breakthrough.
- Perhaps the worst fault of all is that the richest country in the world has such miserable housing for minority groups and the poor.

THE FUTURE

Despite these faults, housing may improve. Consumer groups and offices for consumer affairs are learning their own strength. In every townhouse and condominium development the homeowners' association is a ready-made device to handle complaints and get improvements. Ralph Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law is receiving housing complaints and encouraging local grievance centers. Courts in 19 states are now more favorable to homeowners' suits.

The environmentalists are having a good influence. Kelly Snow, an astute housing observer, has written his builder clients: "Customers and environmentalists are now one and the same. Cater to customers, and you get rich. Fight customers, and you go broke. It's that simple." When builders get this message, home buyers will get the benefits.

On Manhattan's West Side a high-rise apartment replaces run-down buildings.

WHEN WERE YOU LAST REALLY FIT?

AN EXPERT TELLS YOU HOW TO GET BACK IN SHAPE.

Even if you're not particularly interested in building he-man muscles, you owe it to yourself to keep your body fit. It's a sad fact of today's life that many men ignore this point and end up regretting it when they find they've become "old men" long before their time. Thanks to modern exercising techniques, "keeping fit" is now easier than ever. John Texier, Mr. France and leading fitness specialist tells you how.

Q. What does fitness mean?

A. For normally healthy people, fitness is a simple matter of maintaining muscle tone through exercise—using your muscles often enough and hard enough to keep them healthy and trim.

Q. How does lack of fitness show up?

A. The answer depends on how old you are. In your teens or early twenties, it's largely a matter of physical development. Young men with pipe-stem arms and caved-in chests aren't fit. With older men the first signs are usually a roll of fat around the middle and a lack of pep and energy.

Q. Can sports keep me fit?

A. Yes, indeed, if practiced regularly and for long enough periods. Swimming, jogging, gymnastics, tennis, etc., can all help keep you fit provided you practice at least an hour three or four times a week—every week.

John Texier, Mr. France demonstrates one of the easy, 7 second exercises that keep him in top physical shape.

Built-in Powermeter
You can actually measure your musclepower g-r-o-w-i-n-g from the very first day.

Q. Isn't there an easier way?

A. Yes, there's an outstanding home training method which I use and recommend. It's fast, easy and guaranteed to give results.

Q. What's it called?

A. Bullworker training. It's based on Isometric techniques which have been proven to increase strength faster than sports or conventional calisthenics.

John Frelin shows how he increased his biceps by 2", filled out his chest by 4", his thighs by 1½" in just a few weeks of Bullworker training.

Q. How long does it take?

A. The 7-exercise introductory program requires only 70 seconds of exercise per day. The complete advanced training program takes about 5 minutes.

Q. When do the results start?

A. With the Bullworker, you can begin to see and measure positive results from the very first day! Isometric Bullworker training can increase your power at the amazing rate of up to 4% per week!

Q. But it's hard work, isn't it?

A. Absolutely not! That's the outstanding advantage of Isometric training... it's so amazingly easy! Each "Staticpower" Isometric exercise takes only 7 seconds, and you barely have to move.

Q. Is there an age limit?

A. Generally speaking, men between 15 and 65 in good general health can expect to benefit from fitness and strength building training. Young men should use Bullworker to improve their muscular development: broad, powerful shoulders—rippling biceps—a deep, manly chest.

Men in their thirties should use Bullworker to maintain peak physical form and for toning-up the muscles of their abdomen, chest, shoulders and upper arms.

From 45 on, Bullworker should be used to regain and maintain a youthful vigorous body that belies the passing years. I've seen lots of Bullworker users in their fifties with more energy, power, and vigor than many younger men.

Q. How can I find out more about the Bullworker.

A. I understand that the American distributor is now offering the Bullworker on a two-week-free-home trial basis. If you're interested in getting back into shape fast, I recommend you contact the distributor for full details.

A Delicate Dessert

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Summer days mean waning appetites, so smart cooks have to be especially ingenious when it comes to dessert. Nothing too heavy or rich will do—but a light, sweet concoction like Lime Della Robbia would be just right.

Begin your warm-weather menu with chilled vegetable juice cocktail; follow with oven-fried chicken, buttered fluffy rice and any green vegetable. Add a crisp salad and hot biscuits, if you wish. Then delight your family or dinner guests with this picture-perfect gelatin mold. Framed with the fruits or berries of the season, Lime Della Robbia is as lovely as the delicate Italian ceramic art for which it is named.

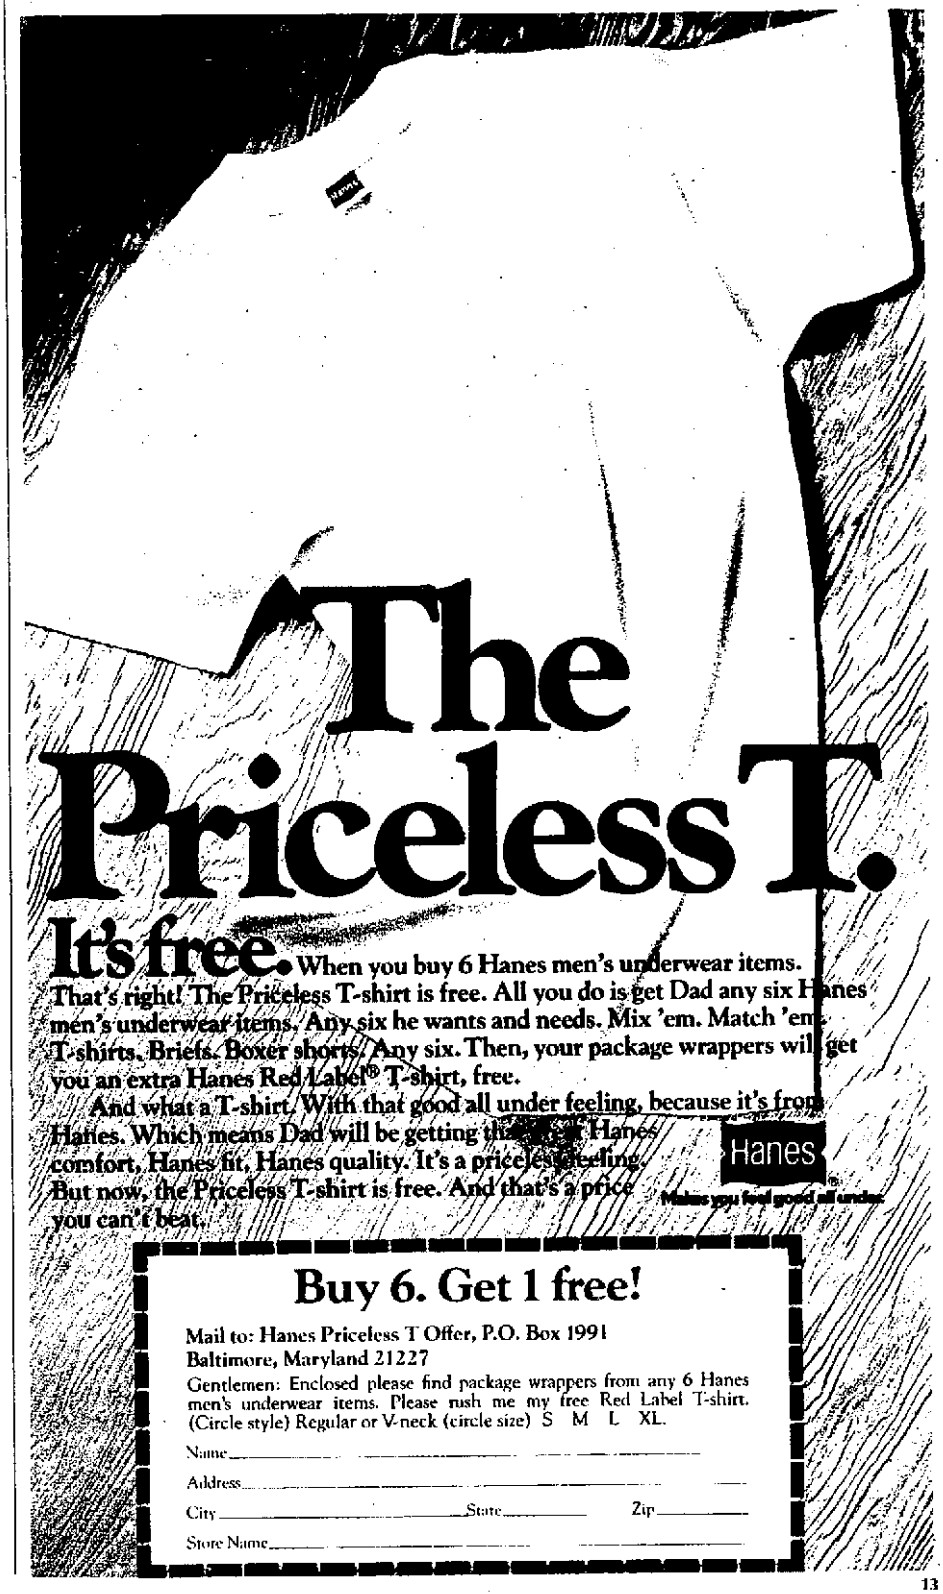

Lime Della Robbia

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup sugar
- 1¼ cups cold water
- 1 teaspoon grated lime peel
- 3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- Green food coloring
- 3 egg whites
- ½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Combine gelatin and sugar in a small saucepan. Stir in water; heat just to boiling point, stirring constantly. Stir in peel and juice of lime. Add just enough green food coloring to tint pale green. Chill until mixture becomes syrupy. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form, then fold gelatin mixture into egg whites. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into a 1-quart mold; chill until firm. Unmold on serving dish; surround with a wreath of small fruits and berries in season. Makes six servings.

Note: This recipe may be doubled, if desired.

Swanson's First Salad of Summer.

And how to make it.

Welcome the season with this cool and lively main dish salad. Swanson's tender chunks of chicken and the "Wow" taste of V-8's eight garden vegetable juices make it happen.

THE LIVELY SALAD
Chicken "V-8" Aspic Salad

Chicken Layer:
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- ½ cup cold water
- 1 can Swanson Chicken Broth
- 2 cans Swanson Boned Chicken or Turkey, cut up
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup diced pimiento

Aspic Layer:
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 3 cups "V-8" juice
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ⅛ teaspoon Worcestershire

For chicken layer, in saucepan, sprinkle 1 envelope gelatine on water to soften. Place over low heat, stirring until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat; add broth. Chill until slightly thickened; fold in chicken, celery, and pimiento. Pour into Mini-Bundt or 8-cup salad mold. Chill until slightly firm. Meanwhile, for aspic layer, in saucepan, sprinkle 2 envelopes gelatine on 1 cup juice to soften. Place over low heat, stirring until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat; add remaining juice, onion, and Worcestershire. Pour onto chicken layer. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp salad greens. Makes about 7 cups.

What to Look for in Sunglasses

Sunglasses can help the way you look, but chosen well, they can help the way you see.

by Ralph Morse

With the approach of sunny summer days, millions of Americans are buying sunglasses for comfort—and fashion. Last year sales soared to 250 million pairs, more than enough for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Many of the sunglasses will be purchased, of course, for strictly decorative purposes. But millions of Americans have come to rely on their "shades" to cut the discomfort of bright sunlight. A good pair of well-fitting sunglasses can reduce eye strain and fatigue, says the American Optometric Association. In addition, they can ease eye adjustment to darkness, an added benefit for an automobile driver who might have spent the day at the beach.

Rainbow colors

Sunglasses come in a large variety of colors. Lenses in neutral gray or sagegreen are the most effective sun-stoppers, reducing visible light about 75 percent. They also distort color vision less than the other, more decorative tints. The fashionably tinted ones—lime, lavender, rose or yellow, for instance—do very little to stop sunlight, officials say, but they look nice.

The lenses may be made of either plastic or glass. Plastic is lighter and more impact-resistant than glass, according to a consultant to the American Association of Ophthalmology. On the other hand, plastic scratches more easily than glass, and glass filters out the infrared rays, which plastic ones do not.

Manufacturers may treat either glass or plastic lenses in several ways in addition to ordinary tinting. Polarized lenses—made by sandwiching a polarizing agent between two pieces of glass or plastic—reduce glare.

Made for glare

A mirror-like gradient density coating can further reduce the light transmitted through regular sunglass lenses. Many fishermen and other sportsmen find these useful for intense light and glare.

More recently developed, photochromic lenses darken when worn in sunlight, becoming clearer indoors. Not all lenses with this quality darken to the level of the best sunglasses, however. Under some conditions of bright light, such as inside an automobile, the glasses do not darken at all, the car windows filter out the ultraviolet rays which trigger the change in the lens.

Whatever sort of sunglasses are suitable, a reputable optician is probably the best place to buy them. "If you're going to spend $20 on a pair of sunglasses," one ophthalmologist says, "why not go to an optician who will give you good glasses, and fit them properly." But many Americans find satisfactory ones elsewhere.

No matter where sunglasses are purchased, here are some things to look for:

- If you wear glasses, ask yourself if clip-on sunglasses will serve, instead of buying a whole new pair of glasses.
- Lenses of all sorts should be free of distortion and imperfection. Both lenses should be precisely the same color. A flaw in either the glass or the tint can add greatly to eye strain or fatigue. Hold the glasses at arm's length, and sight a door or venetian blind through the lenses. If the straight lines are distorted, find another pair. Try to wear the glasses outside in sunlight to ensure that the tint suits you.
- An optician will fit the sunglasses to your face, but if you buy elsewhere check the fit; eyelashes should not touch the lenses. The temples (side pieces) should fit comfortably around the ears. The eyes should be roughly in the center of the lenses.
- Temples should be small enough to allow unobstructed peripheral vision. The frame should be non-flammable.
- The diameter of the lenses should be greater than for normal glasses to afford additional comfort.

Barbara Johnston holds Chad, 9 months, Bangladesh war orphan she and her husband adopted. Only 11 such children have left their ravaged land for new homes in U.S.

Why Americans Don't Adopt More War Orphans

Eighteen months ago the future for little Lisa Ryan was grim. She was a war waif in South Vietnam, a hungry, dazed infant with no parents or relatives to look after her. The orphanage she had been sent to was, at best, inadequate. But today she's a happy, healthy 3-year-old American girl living in Saugerties, N.Y., the adopted daughter of Chris and Joe Ryan.

Chad Johnston, a 9-month-old boy, is similarly fortunate. He was born in Bangladesh in the wake of the war between that country and West Pakistan. He, too, has been adopted—by Daniel and Barbara Johnston who live in the small farming community of Topeka, Ind.

Sadly, Lisa and Chad are exceptional cases. Despite a widespread belief that many Asian war orphans are available for adoption by American families, only a relative few have reached the United States. The reasons are many, but the hard facts are that of the thousands of South Vietnamese children made homeless in 12 years of war, fewer than 600 have been adopted by American parents. And only 11 children from Bangladesh have found homes in the United States. Governmental restrictions—especially in South Vietnam—red tape, agonizing delays, all these things stand in the way of American families who wish to adopt.

Yet for those who have had the tecity and good fortune to be able to opt an Asian orphan, the rewards are eyond price—happiness for the child d the adoptive parents alike.

The Ryans, for example, have two ns of their own, Michael and Ricky. it watching television accounts of etnam gave Chris Ryan an over-helming sense of sympathy and re-onsibility. "I saw such sad little ces," she says. "My heart just went it to them."

Lisa arrived from Vietnam with an ear fection and her muscles weakened om lack of protein. But she's perfectly ealthy now, Chris reports, and has a assion for peanut butter and jelly ndwiches.

Happy experience

The Ryans' experience with Lisa was ich a happy one that the family dopted another Vietnamese orphan, 1-ear-old Kim.

"We're bringing up our kids as four ormal, equal children," says Joe Ryan, ho is an IBM engineer. "The girls aren't nique—they just happen to have been orn in Vietnam."

"We're learning as much as we can bout their country," adds his wife. We want to be able to tell the girls bout Vietnam when they're older. Maybe one day the whole family can ake a trip there."

Other families who have adopted ietnamese are equally pleased. Mi-hael and Fran Suhay of Hawthorne, .Y., have adopted two boys, Peter, ow 3½, and Michael, 2.

"Both were undersized and they had remendous bellies, from malnutrition," uhay recalls. But both have become trong and sturdy on their new diets. till, curious reminders of their war-tained past keep cropping up. "The lay after they arrived," Mrs. Suhay re-calls, "Mike dropped a piece of bread from his high chair. Peter raced to scoop it up." Michael, who is younger, seems to remember less than Peter, who still flinches at loud noises.

Although their adopted child comes from Bangladesh, the Johnston family of Topeka shares the kind of happiness felt by the Ryans and the Suhays. "When we went to the airport to pick up Chad," Daniel Johnston recalls, "I was as thrilled and excited as I was when I went to the hospital to see my newborn daughters."

The Johnstons have two daughters of their own, aged 4½ and 2, but they had wanted a boy as well and had long talked of adopting one. "I don't believe that you have to conceive and bear a child to love him," says Barbara Johnston, "especially when there are so many children in the world without homes."

'Any one will do'

Early in 1972 the Johnstons started the adoption proceedings by appearing before the county welfare board. The social worker there asked whether they would consider adopting a Mexican, American Indian or Korean child. "I said, 'Fine, I'll take any of them,' " Mrs. Johnston recalls.

After that the family was put in touch with the Holt Adoption Program, Inc., which is located in Eugene, Oreg. The Johnstons were under the assumption that they were being considered to adopt a Korean child. They filled out an application, and a long period of investigation began. County social workers made several visits to survey their home and family situation. There were endless questions—some of them pointed. Mrs. Johnston remembers one

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO TRY THIS NEW PIPE!

So different that it's patented by the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT patent number 3267941

THIS TOP-GRADE LONDON-MADE BRIAR PIPE incorporates an entirely new smoking principle that eliminates breaking-in. Tars, sludge, bite and bitterness never reach your mouth. The coupon below will bring you my FREE TRIAL OFFER which gives you a CAREY PIPE to smoke on a test basis for a whole month.

E. A. Carey

Please send me another Carey Pipe for my brother. I have about every kind of pipe you can think of. When in the Service, I purchased pipes in France, Germany and Switzerland, but this is the best pipe I have today. There just couldn't be a better tasting, sweeter smoke than you get from the Carey Pipe.
L. S., Edwardsville, Illinois

Here's what's different about this pipe. It's the first pipe in the world to use an entirely new principle for giving unadulterated pleasure to smokers. It's so different in smoking quality that it's patented in the United States, Canada and other countries.

It's different than any pipe ever invented. It smokes COOLER—MELLOWER—SWEETER—and DRIER. Even dyed in the wool cigarette smokers find it easier to smoke and enjoy than any pipe, or any cigar they've ever tried. Some say it's as easy to switch to a Carey pipe as it is to switch from one brand of cigarettes to another.

GIVE IT 30 DAYS—No cigarette, no cigar, nor any other pipe can give you the full rich flavor, aroma, deep down satisfaction, and enjoyment, and peace of mind that you get from a Carey Pipe.

Here is the way of it: Like most other smokers, who have tried a pipe at one time or another, I just couldn't tolerate the goo, the bitterness, the tongue bite, and that stale, foul, after-taste that results from smoking an ordinary pipe. As a result, I dedicated hundreds of hours searching for the ideal pipe—buying all the disappointing gadgets, and never finding a single, solitary pipe that would smoke hour after hour, day after day, without bitterness, bite or sludge. In disgust I gave up. It was then I decided to try to work something out on my own, something that would not leave my mouth tasting like the proverbial blacksmith's glove.

Thousands of experiments and five long disappointing years later, almost by accident, I hit upon a solution. A solution so simple, but so effective that it made smoking a pipe an entirely new and exciting experience. By harnessing four great natural laws, this invention gives you everything you want in a satisfying smoke. It doesn't require any breaking in. From the first puff right down to the last bit of tobacco I guarantee it to smoke cool and mild hour after hour, day after day, without rest, without bite, bitterness or sludge.

In appearance and in quality, the Carey Pipe is like any of the two or three leading world brands. The bowl is made of the finest selected premium briar, imported especially for this use. The bit is conventional in appearance — made of molded nylon—the newest and finest material for pipe bits. The color and finish are what you would expect in any of the best pipes on the market. It is, in every respect, a pipe you will be proud to smoke. It is entirely free of the outlandish contraptions that have been seen on so many so-called "improved" pipes in the past.

Discover the thrill of this new kind of smoking. Accept our offer to LEND YOU a Carey Pipe for 30 days' trial use. At the end of the trial period, if you say the Carey Pipe has given you the greatest smoking pleasure of your life, you may keep it. But if you are willing to go back to your old smoking habit, break the Carey into bits, return the pieces and the trial will have cost you nothing.

Before I send you your pipe, I would like to know the style you prefer so send me your name TODAY and I'll send you absolutely free my complete trial offer including descriptive literature and pipe styles so you can decide for yourself whether or not thousands of Carey smokers are right when they say the Carey Pipe is the greatest smoking invention ever patented.

Prove it to yourself! Send for your free trial offer today.

'...One step forward and ten steps back'

The Suhays with sons Peter and Michael: Although some families have two Vietnamese children, fewer than 600 such youngsters have come to the U.S.

quite clearly: "How would you react if one of your girls came home from school and told you that their little brother had been called a 'Chink'?"

Apparently, the response was satisfactory, because sometime later the Johnstons' application was approved. Then came a surprise: Would they be willing to accept an infant from Bangladesh, rather than Korea?

"We did have some qualms," admits Johnston, "not about nationality, but about color." Rural Indiana is still virtually all-white, and Johnston was worried about what reaction people would have to a dark-skinned adopted child. But the Johnstons put their worries aside and said they'd be delighted to accept their new Bangladesh son.

"Actually, people have stared and whispered a few times," says Johnston. "We see people looking at Chad and then at his sisters when we walk by. I can understand their shock. But we accept such things in stride."

Despite those first stares, the neighbors have quickly accepted Chad as one of the "Johnston kids," along with his sisters Kelly Jo and Erin Michele. And last Easter Sunday, Chad Daniel Johnston was baptized at the local United Methodist Church.

While many other American parents or childless couples would like to experience the happiness that adoption can bring, the availability of Asian war waifs is severely limited.

No more orphans

In Bangladesh, for example, there are simply no more orphans available. The Holt program has withdrawn its team from Dacca, the capital city, after placing 11 orphans in American homes. Some authorities theorize that early reports of thousands of abandoned babies —resulting from the rapes of Bengali women by Pakistani soldiers—were somewhat in error. Other experts believe that many such women had abortions, or killed their babies after birth. And in many cases the mothers refused to give their children up for adoption, or preferred that they be placed with local families.

The situation in Vietnam is drastically different. There, countless children are homeless and undernourished. Nearly 25,000 crowd the country's understaffed orphanages, where care is often minimal. Thousands of others shift for themselves in the city streets. It is not known how many children were fathered by American GI's, but some estimates run as high as 200,000.

Yet adoptions of these children are also severely limited. The Saigon Government has placed strict rules and complicated procedures on adoptions. Chris Ryan recalls that she was virtually ready to give up in despair before she was allowed to adopt Lisa. "Everywhere we turned," she says, "we took one step forward and 10 steps back."

The Travelers Aid-International Social Service of America, a group that has kept close watch on the situation, says that part of the trouble comes from the fact that more than half of the children living in orphanages aren't technically orphans, since at least one parent is living. Also, the group says, the Vietnamese "extended family tradition" keeps many children from being put up for adoption. Grandparents and other relatives will frequently take the child.

How to help

Maureen O'Brien, public relations director of the group, says that parents who are anxious to adopt Asian waifs may have much better luck adopting a Korean child. Nearly 20 years after the cease-fire, that country still has a high rate of child abandonment, and last year some 1600 Korean children were adopted by American parents.

Miss O'Brien and other authorities agree that any real improvement in the plight of Vietnam's children will have to take place within that war-torn country. Currently less than one percent of the government's budget goes to child welfare, making outside help essential to relieve starvation and other distress. And many experts believe that the U.S. Government itself has a special responsibility to the countless Vietnamese children for whom the war has not yet ended.

Red tape in Saigon nearly scuttled the plans of Chris and Joe Ryan who wanted to adopt a Vietnamese daughter, but now they have two; Lisa, 3, and Kim, 1.

Joe Ryan: Kim isn't unique, she just happens to have been born in Vietnam.

Overeaters Anonymous

by Jeane Westin

They call themselves addicts, not to drugs, but to something everyone uses three times a day: food. They are the "foodoholics"—men and women who overeat compulsively.

These compulsive overeaters are on the "skid row" of obesity, thwarting the best efforts of doctors, psychiatrists and clergy alike. Until recently they had few other places to go. Now they're turning to Overeaters Anonymous, an organization for people obsessed by food.

Lack of success has always plagued most dieters. The American Society of Bariatrics (doctors specializing in weight problems), reports that only 12 out of every 100 dieters lose weight, even on tightly controlled regimens. Worse yet, only two of those 12 still have their new figures a year later.

Exercise in futility: Fatties have long been butt of jokes. Now the Alcoholics Anonymous approach is being tried on them.

Yet, Overeaters Anonymous claims at least half their members achieve significant weight loss. Those who stay with the program, they say, are able to keep off the pounds. Some former heavyweights have maintained for years losses up to 300 pounds.

Founded in 1960 by three overweight Southern California housewives, Overeaters Anonymous has grown rapidly until today there are 471 chapters in 43 states.

To join, a prospective member need only express a desire to stop compulsive overeating. There are no dues or fees. Nobody is weighed-in. And only first names are used. A typical public meeting is held in a community room, a church hall or a member's home. Attendance varies from a few to several hundred. Bright colored signs hang around the walls proclaiming: "WE CARE," "ONE DAY AT A TIME," and "FOOD SOBRIETY IS THE MOST IMPORTANT THING IN YOUR LIFE." A meeting leader, selected by the group, calls on successful members to share their stories with newcomers.

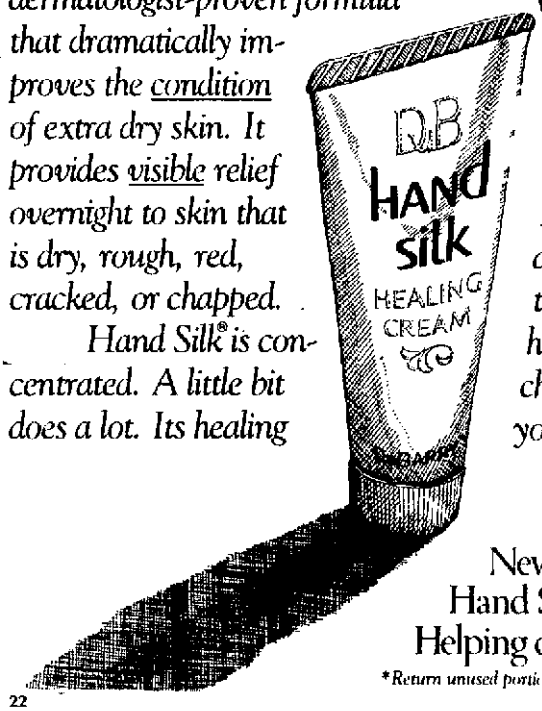

At an Overeaters Anonymous meeting in Sacramento, Calif., posters and empathy help participants decrease food craving.

PARADE • JUNE 10, 1973

At a recent California meeting a slender woman stepped out of the crowd. "Hi," she began, "my name is Kathy M., and I'm a compulsive overeater.

"Here's a picture of me weighing 300 pounds," she said, passing the photo among the group. "I now weigh 135 pounds." The roomful of people applauded and cheered.

"Two years ago," she said, "I celebrated my 27th birthday by buying my own cake and ice cream. While I was in the market, I stepped on the scales, and they jammed. I ran to my car and cried." To ease her grief, Kathy went to another store, bought a dozen pastries and ate them. "Eating was the only way I coped with my problems," she confessed, "especially my food problem."

Wife or mother?

The final indignity, Kathy recalled, came while she was visiting her husband in the hospital. Nurses mistook her for his mother. At last she decided to accept a friend's invitation to try Overeaters Anonymous.

"At first I resented the idea that I was helpless," she said, "but finally I realized that getting help wasn't as bad as getting fatter. At meetings in the weeks that followed, I found others like me, and together we were able to help each other. Today I'm only half the woman I used to be."

Like a drug

In meetings across the country, other men and women like Kathy share similar stories—cycles of uncontrollable eating, followed by self-loathing, followed by yet more eating. Many refer to food as a drug, an anesthetic to ease the problems of everyday life. Speakers tell of lifelong chains of desperation diets, pills, exercises and fat farms.

Modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous, OA tries to help overeaters help themselves. Group sessions provide continuous motivation—a key element in long-term weight reduction and lifetime weight maintenance.

Dr. Samuel Waxler, an obesity expert associated with the University of California medical school in San Francisco, believes that dieting alone is not enough. "The obese need to share their problems and frustrations," he says. "They need to talk it all out." Dr. Waxler readily admits that most physicians and clinics can't provide the continual contact and encouragement compulsive overeaters need.

But OA members talk it all out during a sharing time at each meeting. Their "pitches" often reach revivalt-tent-fervor. At one session, Tom C., a 35-year-old X-ray technician, described years of frantic dieting interspersed with binge eating and periods of deep depression. "One night I went to a truck scale to weigh myself," he recounted. "When the weighmaster called it out, I could hardly believe it—565 pounds. At that point, I felt totally alone. I thought about suicide."

Now, Tom is a relatively svelte 245 pounds. "My doctor says OA saved my life," he beams, "and that's not all. OA saved my marriage, my job and my sanity."

Some, like Tom, come to Overeaters Anonymous so obese they can barely walk. But not all OA members have outsized problems. Some have only a minimal weight to lose. A diabetic young woman with no weight worries used the group meetings to help control her craving for forbidden sweets. Another only wanted to lose 20 pounds prior to her daughter's wedding. And another, an actor, needed to become thin enough to get television parts again.

But most of the people who find their help in Overeaters Anonymous are the fat and super-fat—desperately unhappy eaters for whom one bite of candy leads to a box full.

What does OA promise these people? They are told that they can arrest their compulsion by simply turning their food problem over to a Higher Power.

OA approaches the compulsion to overeat spiritually. A new member is asked to surrender his weight problem to "a Power greater than himself." That "Power" can be almost anything—the collective strength of the group, the universe, nature or God.

Equally important, a newcomer is assigned to a more experienced member, a kind of down-to-earth "spiritual buddy," who guides him in working the "12 Suggested Steps to Recovery."

Step No. 1

The first step an OA takes is to admit he is powerless when it comes to food, that his life has become unmanageable. According to OA trustee Alma T., this admission may be hard to accept, but it helps get rid of "fat rationalizations." The remaining 11 steps, which amount to a personal inventory, are designed to help rid the heavyweight of guilt feelings for having gotten fat in the first place. This is a requisite for continued food sobriety. "Nothing," says Alma, "tends to push an overeater back to the refrigerator faster than unresolved guilt."

Finding answer

But while OA's emphasize group support and encouragement, members are asked not to try to probe their own or others' underlying motivations. To discourage amateur analysis, newcomers are told, "We don't deal in the problem; we deal in the solution."

Can a person conditioned by a lifetime of overeating control his problem without first understanding it? In many cases, the answer is yes.

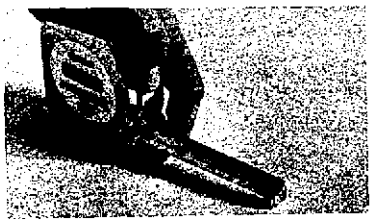

Says Dr. Ruth Fox, a New York City psychiatrist noted for her treatment of alcoholics: "The pressure of a group often helps force change where a psychiatrist has labored in vain for years. Some people with compulsive problems don't want to analyze themselves deeply. They feel safer in a group which doesn't probe."

Keeping Up...With Youth

Trustee Chiefs Reject Students

Adult university policymakers don't want students or faculty members on their boards of trustees, according to a poll recently conducted by the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges.

Student membership on college and university boards was rejected by 68 percent of 800 private and public college board chairmen questioned. Faculty members fared worse. College chairmen opposed accepting them on the boards by a 69 percent vote.

Isolation and Drugs

Despite geographic remoteness, Alaska is plagued with drug problems similar to those of other states.

A 17,000-sample survey of Anchorage students, conducted by the Greater Anchorage Area Borough Health Department, found that only 26.6 percent of those polled were non-users. More than 37.1 percent used alcohol, and 36.3 percent used other drugs – most frequently marijuana. But the users also reported trips on glue, nail-polish remover, paint thinner, pep pills and pain-killers. Even at the sixth grade level, 6.4 percent of the students reported using as many as six different types of drugs.

The study was reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association, and was accompanied by an editorial commentary by Dr. Robert Strauss of the University of Kentucky College of Medicine:

"The findings of this survey leave little room for comfort," Strauss wrote. "They show how pervasive the use of chemicals has become, how many different kinds of drugs are involved, and how the use of drugs has progressively involved younger and younger age groups."

Pubs On Campus

Triggered by a reduction of the legal drinking age, more colleges are opening sites on campus where young people can drink. Some are named "The Pub" for their English counterparts. Such establishments generally serve only beer and wine.

A national survey of 429 colleges by Robert Rainville, director of the student union building at the University of Rhode Island, shows that 102 campuses have a place where students can consume alcohol.

The types of pubs range from a beer tap in the cafeteria at the University of Northern Iowa to a complete bar atop the student union building at the University of Wisconsin's Milwaukee campus.

Forty-one percent of the schools with bars did not have them four years ago, reports Rainville.

There is no doubt college students, like other young people, are going to drink alcohol. It makes good sense that college administrators are now providing a suitable campus atmosphere to drink in rather than letting the young folks meander the streets at night.

THE VICE PRESIDENT AND DAUGHTER KIM

The Agnew Choice

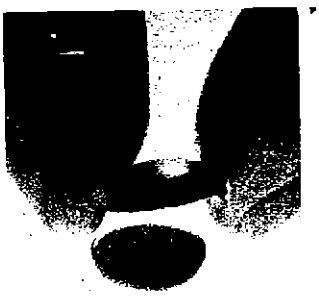

Kim Agnew, daughter of Vice President Spiro Agnew, will venture into Democratic territory this fall. The 17-year-old blonde has chosen small, rural, liberal Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., to continue her higher education. Massachusetts, of course, is the only state that Sen. George McGovern (D., S. Dak.) carried in the 1972 Presidential election.

Kim gained notoriety in October of 1969 for her desire to wear a black armband in support of Vietnam moratorium demonstrations. Her Vice Presidential father, however, invoked parental authority and forbade Kim to demonstrate.

"They need authority at some point," Vice President Agnew said, "and when they don't get it, they're unhappy." As a result of her father's decision, Kim Agnew became an overnight cause celeb of fellow young people, and a "Free Kim Agnew" slogan flourished on buttons, shirts and signs for a short time thereafter.

Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are made up of two separate laxatives that combine the surety of a strong laxative with the gentleness of a mild one.

Together they help ease you to regularity without sudden urgency upset.

And because the dosage is pre-measured, Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are thorough and so predictable you can almost set your watch by them. Take two tablets at bedtime. Get a good night's sleep. And you can expect to be back on schedule in the morning.

Gentle Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets – the 'two-together' laxative – to help put your system back on schedule.

My Favorite Jokes

by Joey Adams

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The human brain is a wonderful machine. It starts working the moment you are born and never stops until you stand up to speak in public," Joey Adams tells his readers in his latest book, Speaker's Bible of Humor, (Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1972). Adams, comedian and collector of humor, goes on to give his readers jokes enough to fill all the pauses in their conversations.

It's one thing to know jokes and appreciate humor, but to be a comedian, is, he finds, the most difficult career for a performer, because "your option comes up after every joke." One of his stories illustrates that feeling, "When I was a young man, I was crazy about a girl, but her father insisted that she couldn't marry me, because I was an actor. I insisted that he at least come and see my show. I saw him in the audience and worked my heart out. I told my best jokes. After the performance I ran to see the old man and asked how he liked the show. He said, 'Don't worry about a thing. You can marry my daughter—you're no actor.'"

Adams has appeared on the major talk shows, has his own daily radio program on which he interviews many of his colleagues in comedy, and has authored numerous books on comedy. He is president of the Actor's Youth Fund and the Senior Citizen's Fund of America.

Here are some of his current favorites:

I don't know why comedians are slamming New York City about crime these days. Actually, there are 8 million people in New York City, and over 1 million people haven't been mugged even once.

Everybody's a little upset about the high price of meat. My wife went to Tiffany's to have a meatball set in platinum. I know two chuck steaks that opened a bank account in Switzerland.

In one of Vice President Agnew's drives on the golf course, he got a birdie, an Elk, a Moose and a Mason, but as Agnew said: "It's hard to concentrate when the gallery is saying the Lord's Prayer."

I warned Mr. Nixon about going to China. An hour later he wanted to go again.

The income tax people will make it very easy for us next year. The form will only have two lines: (1) How much did you make in 1973? (2) Send it.

The husband was primping in the mirror before leaving for his big speech. "I wonder how many great men there are in the world?" he mused. "One less than you think," said his wife.

The young housewife picked out three apples, an orange, two pears, and a banana and handed them to the grocery clerk. "That'll be $4.75," he barked. She handed him a $5 bill and started to walk out. "Wait," you forgot your change," he called to her. "That's okay," she said sweetly. "I stepped on a grape on the way in."

Some great philosopher said about divorce—I forget the philosopher's name—in fact I forgot what he said—but I say—divorce is useless. You get married for lack of judgment—you get divorced for lack of patience—then you remarry for lack of memory.

Education is a wonderful thing—if you couldn't sign your name—you'd have to pay cash.

The missionary from Victorian England was trying to convert the Hindu to Christianity. "Tell me, wouldn't you like to go to heaven when you die?" The Hindu was not impressed. "Heaven can't be very good," he said, "or the British would have grabbed it years ago."

A few months ago a friend of mine was in financial trouble, and of course I helped him the best I could. "I'll never forget you," he promised. And he didn't. He's in trouble again, and he just called me.

Turn that wall in your home from dull to dramatic with historic Americana in brilliant color

CURRIER and IVES

GENUINE PORCELAIN DECORATOR PLATES ENHANCED WITH REGAL GOLDEN RIMS

Only $3.98 the set of 4.

Want to do "that wall" in your living room, den, family room, dining room? You can—and beautifully—with fine taste enriched by charming Americana at low, low prices (truly significant in this day of the shrinking dollar). A mere $3.98 for all 4.

You've probably seen the originals of these famous Currier and Ives in museums. We have taken meticulous care to duplicate these masterpieces, world-honored for their portrayal of wondrous America, on genuine, creamy, bone-white porcelain to contrast the faithfully-reproduced rich colorings. Enjoying them, you almost feel the chill in the air, hear the patter of horses trotting in the snow, smell the hot apple pie in the old iron stove.

Each decorator plate is seven inches across, embellished by a scalloped golden rim. Hung in sets of four, they offer elegant, eloquent dramatic beauty to any home or office (grand gifts, too).

Get more out of your bike with a Stewart-Warner bike speedometer!

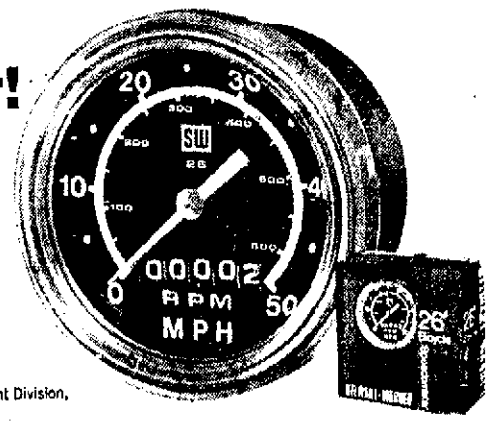

Cycling is more exciting when you know how fast you're going and how far you've gone. So whether you cycle for fitness or fun, at races, rallies, cross countries, or just riding around with the gang, a speedo is a must.

So, of course, you want one that's both accurate and dependable. You can rely on Stewart-Warner, world's largest independent designers and builders of precision instruments for cars, motorcycles, planes and boats.

Look at this great design. The sharp looking black dial, just like big-time racers use. It's a speedometer, a tachometer and an odometer all in one.

See these American-made Stewart-Warner instruments wherever bikes are sold. See how one would look on your bike. We have sizes to fit 20, 24, 26 and 27 inch wheels.
